GREEN WARNS LABOR FASCISM KILLS LIBERTY

Predicts Overthrow of Mussolini.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—The fascist "charter of labor" was described by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, today as "a proclamation of enslavement." Mr. Green added that its underlying principles are the same as pursued in the soviet government in Russia.

"Working people of the United States," said Mr. Green, will resent the step taken by Premier Mussolini in the promulgation of this document.

"The press reports concerning the Italian 'charter of labor' proclaimed throughout Italy yesterday," said Mr. Green, "show that Dictator Mussolini adopts the best of government is that which governs most.

Quotes Jefferson's Words.

"This is contrary to the teachings of Jefferson who said 'that is the best government which governs the least.'

"The so-called fascist 'charter of labor' is a proclamation of enslavement in that it reduces the working people subject to it to a condition of industrial servitude. It is a blow at human freedom and sets up compulsory methods in industry for private initiative and freedom of contract. It completely destroys the principle and processes of collective bargaining.

"The world has never witnessed a greater exhibition of autocracy gone mad. The principles underlying the so-called 'charter of labor' are the same as the principles underlying the industrial and political policies pursued by the soviet government in Russia. Both of them seeks to establish the supremacy and domination of the state over the individual and over individual liberty and human freedom.

Hinders People's Freedom.

"Through decrees they impose upon the individual rules and regulations which control the most sacred and the most priceless possessions of human life.

"There can be no freedom in any nation except where the people are industrially free. This applies to both employers and employes. Government regulation and government control of industry and the relationship between employers and employes such as is proposed by fascist reprehensible and is resented by all those associated with industry. It discourages capital and makes the workers slaves.

"Evidently democracy in the affairs of the nation, as well as in industry, throughout Italy has perished.

"It remains to be seen how long the masses of the people of Italy will submit to the yoke of tyranny and autocracy.

Death Blow to Unions.

"The working people in America deplore the new development in Italy and resent this further encroachment upon the exercise of the right of the working people of that great country which aspires into free, democratic trade unions and to bargain collectively with their employers.

"Autocracy cannot endure. It destroys the power which it exercises and ultimately destroys itself. This is happening in Italy. The pendulum of despotism and autocracy, which has swung so far under the direction and guidance of Dictator Mussolini, eventually will swing back, and democracy and freedom will be substituted for autocracy and enslavement."

POLITE BANDIT ROBS THREE LOOP STORES OF $250

A well but polite bandit invaded three stores in the loop last night, making visits so that he found no customers in the places, and escaped with a total of more than $250.

Mary Waldvogel, manager, and Emily Smith, a clerk in the Home Washington candy store at 31 West Washington street, gave the man all he didn't show them a revolver as he made his demand for money, merely pointing to his pocket to indicate he had one.

At the Hatter Newmark store, 15 North Dearborn street, the manager, Albert Meiers, surrendered $38. Percy Lee, manager of the Wormser hat store at 328 South State street, was forced to open a safe, from which the robber took $200.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., April 23.—[Special.]—America's "good will" Pan-American flyers returned to continental U. S. today after a three hours' hop from Havana, Cuba.

The trip, begun four months ago at San Antonio, Tex., included visits in every country in Central and South America and several islands in the West Indies. The distance covered was about 20,000 miles.

Miami Welcomes Flyers.

Miami turned out to give the visitors a welcome and a barage of aerial bombs was laid at about the altitude of the approaching aircraft. Bands were playing at the landing cove and the ships in the harbor were dressed for the occasion. Launches crowded about the landing buoys as the planes came to a stop.

Maj. Gen. Mason M. Patrick, chief of the army air forces, was here to welcome the fliers. He said he believed this expedition would prove that this country does not lack in prestige in aerial navigation. He gave as his opinion that the log of the 20,000 mile journey would show that the American demonstration compared well with similar expeditions from other countries and that commercial aviation in this country would be stimulated by its success.

Flies to Meet Fleet.

Gen. Patrick's own aircraft had been moored here ready to take the air and act as guide when the homecoming fleet was sighted. With his aid and pilots the army air chief left the water at 2:40 p. m. and flew south a few miles, turning when the fleet was sighted and leading them back to the city. A number of army machines which arrived this morning from Georgia and Alabama joined the homecoming demonstration. There were fourteen planes in formation as the voyagers dropped down into the bay and taxied to their buoys.

Monday the flotilla will continue to Washington.

FANNIE ZEISLER STRICKEN WITH HEART ATTACK

Mrs. Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler of the Cooper-Carlton hotel, noted pianist, who was released from the Michael Reese hospital two weeks after treatment for heart disease, suffered a relapse last night, and her sons, Ernest and Paul, were summoned to her bedside from a concert in Orchestra hall. Dr. Raymond Green, her personal physician, also left the concert with the sons. He administered treatment to the pianist and announced that she seemed to be resting more easily and in no immediate danger.

CHICAGO YAWNS AS SLEEP IS CUT 3,000,000 HOURS

Did you set your clock ahead an hour last night? If not, you are just sixty minutes behind the rest of the city, which officially started daylight savings time at 2 o'clock this morning.

People in Chicago and all of its suburbs will enjoy the extra hour of sunlight, voted by a 2 to 1 majority last November, until Sept. 27, when timepieces will be set back to central standard time. The fast time during the summer season has been in effect here for the last ten years.

Churches, schools, offices, stores, theaters, banks, the stock exchange, board of trade, postoffice, and courts will conform to the changed schedule, as well as most suburban steam trains, the elevated, surface lines, and busses.

Some 3,000,000 hours of sleep were lost by Chicagoans last night when the timepieces were advanced, it was estimated, but to offset this they will each gain 155 hours of sunlight for golf, gardening, and time at home with their families after working hours. Health Commissioner Bundesen yesterday urged that the added hour be spent outdoors where the health giving ultra-violet sun rays may be absorbed.

[Copyright, 1927: The News, New York.]

Bel Air, Md., April 23.—[Special.]—Elizabeth Frances du Pont, the world's third richest heiress, motored sixty-five miles today to be married to a young man who recently was promoted from a $150 a month file clerk's job to the position of office manager for the Philadelphia branch of the Bell Telephone company.

She eloped with Richard Dorsey Morgan without the consent or knowledge of her father, Philip F. du Pont, retired executive of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.

Parents Urged Delay.

Her parents, against their will, had announced her engagement, but they urged her to postpone the wedding until fall. But with April came the heiress' twenty-first birthday. The groom is 22. The only representatives of the Du Pont family present at the wedding were two of the bride's cousins, Alberta and Esther du Pont. Accompanied by them and two friends, J. Brooks Robertson Jr. of New York and Charles D. Shaw of Wilmington, Miss du Pont and Morgan started for Bel Air shortly after noon today.

Robertson, who acted as best man for the groom, is the son of former Gov. Robertson of Oklahoma. He is employed in the credit department of the National City bank, New York.

Motor to Bel Air.

The little party met in Wilmington. In two autos they sped along the Lincoln highway, arriving at the town hall in Bel Air in midafternoon. Obtaining a license, the wedding party drove to the Emanuel Protestant Episcopal church, where the rector, Dr. John I. Yellott, quickly performed the ceremony.

When they emerged from the church the bride and groom were startled by the appearance of a reporter. The bride refused to explain the absence of her parents. Young Morgan, however, finally was persuaded to speak for her.

"It was solely the time element," he said. "Her parents wanted us to wait until fall. We did not want to, and that's why we were married in this way."

Asked if unyielding parental opposition had not provoked the elopement, rather than impatience, the bride and groom refused to answer.

Too Much Publicity.

"O, I've had enough publicity," the bride said. "Just because my father happens to have some money! I don't want to talk about my wedding."

According to intimate friends of the pair, in eloping today she risked her inheritance, estimated at $20,000,000, for her father is expected to disinherit her.

Since childhood the Du Pont heiress and the socially obscure youth, who lived with his mother in Wilmington, have been sweethearts.

HANKOW RULED BY MOBS; DEFY WHITE POWERS

Looting of Foreign Property Goes On.

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, Sunday, April 24.—(AP)—The China press says American bluejackets on Friday rescued three Standard Oil men imprisoned in their own premises in Hankow by their hostile Chinese employes. Their names are given as Capt. H. H. Burditt, master of the Standard Oil ship Meifoo; J. Stamm and R. B. Duxbury.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING, April 23.—Although Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, generalissimo of the Cantonese military forces, has ordered an anti-communist campaign, dispatches from Hankow indicate that foreign property is still being looted and the Chinese are contemptuous of the powers, believing they will not take strong action. The nervous apprehension at Hankow is increasing, owing to the mob rule.

Countering the attempt to suppress the Canton radicals by the suspension of unions, the seamen today called a strike, while men and women communists openly distribute posters urging the support of the peasants' union, which is gaining strength in all the occupied provinces.

Artillery Battle Still Rages.

The Nanking-Pukow artillery duel continues, with heavy Chinese casualties in Nanking. The firing from Nanking has caused serious fires to break out over Pukow.

Uneasiness is still felt north of the Yellow river, owing to the development of a triple campaign against Peking. This includes the revival of the Anfu clique, which accepted Japan's twenty-one demands, and whose leader is Tuan Chi-jui, the last provisional executive, who escaped arrest by fleeing from the Japanese concession at Tientsin to Dairen with numerous followers.

The newspapers report that the foreign banks are about to close. This has started a bank run in Peking. Chiefly affected is the National City bank of New York, whose notes are more generally circulated than those of the British and Japanese banks.

Ex-Chicagoan Executed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., April 23.—From real estate agent in Chicago to a general in a Chinese army and finally to the execution block is the story of Morris A. Cohen, soldier of fortune. News of Cohen's death reached the city in dispatches today. The reason for his execution is not known, but it is presumed he was captured by the northern army and summarily killed.

Cohen was born in London and came to Canada when he was fifteen. He left to serve in the world war and later returned. After wandering over Canada he landed in Chicago in 1921, where he became a real estate agent. Six months later he went to Edmonton, Alta.

The interest which he took in the cause of the Chinese in America brought him in 1922 the English secretaryship to the Chinese National league in Canada. In 1923 he went to China, where he won the favor of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, founder of the Chinese republic. He was made a general in one of the Cantonese armies and was a personal adviser to the great leader until the latter's death in March, 1925.

45 Attacks on U. S. Ships.

SHANGHAI, China, April 23.—(AP)—American vessels, including warships, in Chinese waters have been fired on on forty-five occasions since Aug. 26, 1926, and six men have been injured, says a statement made public today on shipping incidents.

Unconfirmed reports were received that two so-called Communist armies, of several thousand men were advancing on Chiang Kai-shek at Nanking.

Gen. Sun Chuan-Fang, one of the northern commanders and original defender of Shanghai, is said to be at Yangchow, north of the Yangtse, directing plans for military activities against the Cantonese.

Gen. Chiang's military officials in Shanghai established a censorship on all letters and telegrams from Hankow, the announced purpose being to intercept communistic propaganda.

British Bayonet Chinese.

LONDON, April 23.—(AP)—The Exchange Telegraph reports British blue jackets repulsed a number of coolies who attempted to rush a Butterfield & Swire company (British) vessel at Wuhu, on the Yangtse, above Nanking. A few of the coolies, the dispatch says, received "bayonet scratches."

Kills Chicago Girl and Self in Paris Tryst

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 23.—Police tonight are convinced that Miss Marion Roberts of Oak Park, Ill., found shot to death in an automobile near Paris early today, was killed by Julian Meredith of Buffalo, N. Y., her fiancé, who then turned the pistol on himself.

The couple was found at dawn, the small automobile recently purchased by Meredith standing near the Chateau de la Barre not far from Rambouillet. Miss Roberts was dead with three bullets in the head. Meredith, a bullet wound in the temple, still breathed faintly. The girl's body was behind the wheel. Meredith was at her right, the automatic pistol still dangling in his right hand.

Robbery Theory Discarded.

Meredith died soon after gendarmes were called by an early rising work man, who found the bodies. In their investigations the police learned that the American had just purchased the automatic and that he had in his possession a box of cartridges. A theory of robbery and murder was soon discarded because 6,400 francs were found in Meredith's pockets, as was also a $4,000 diamond ring, believed to have been intended by him as an engagement ring.

Miss Roberts had just arrived in France. She had docked Thursday at Havre on the liner De Grasse, and Meredith had driven there in his new coupé to meet her.

Drive to Paris Together.

Meredith drove his fiancée to Paris, where he lived in Villa Dalesia. They stopped at a hotel at Verenay la Ville, where they were together all day Friday, and those who served them said they appeared very happy.

Police could find no evidence of bitterness or quarrel between them. All their friends said Meredith had been happy in the knowledge of her coming to France and that although he had seemed moody at times he had rejoiced that she was to be with him.

Meredith had been married. His former wife, who was Miss Dorothy Reisel of Buffalo, a school teacher, had divorced him here on Dec. 5, 1926.

Well Known as Musicians.

Both Miss Roberts and Meredith were known as accomplished pianists. For the last several years, however, he had been studying voice, and it was said that he was about to start on a career as a singer.

Until last fall Miss Roberts had for two years been a pupil at Cortot's studio in Avenue Henri Martin. During that time she and Meredith often had been seen together and when she returned to Chicago she told friends they were engaged.

GIRL'S PARENTS PROSTRATED.

Miss Roberts, who was 25 years old, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis E. Roberts of 201 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park. Mr. Roberts is chief accountant for Sears, Roebuck & Co., and president of the Apollo Music club. The father said he knew Meredith but slightly. Both he and Mrs. Roberts were prostrated.

Miss Roberts left Chicago two weeks ago and sailed for France on April 13. She was a graduate of Oak Park High school, and won first honors in the piano contest of the State Federation of Music clubs at Urbana in 1923. Critics considered her one of the most promising young pianists of America.

Meredith was 31 years old, and a member of a family long prominent in social and business affairs in Buffalo. His grandfather was the late Brig. Gen. Sullivan A. Meredith, veteran of the civil war. Meredith served in the New York cavalry on the Mexican border and with 102d trench mortar battery in the world war.

SMOKER FIRES HOTEL BED; 300 GUESTS ROUTED

A man falling asleep while smoking a cigaret in bed started a fire on the seventh floor of the Commonwealth hotel, Diversey parkway and Pine Grove avenue early this morning, the smoke from which routed the 300 guests of the hotel from their beds. T. P. Keller, the smoker, retired shortly after midnight and lighted a cigaret. The next he knew he awakened to find the room in flames.

He hurried out and spread the alarm. Telephone operators warned the guests and within a few minutes the latter had hurried to the lobby, many of them in scant attire. The flames were soon extinguished with small loss.

Safeblowers Get $1,000 and 20 Cases of Brandy

Three safeblowers early this morning entered the bakery of Cosella Bros., 25 West Erie street, and after tying two watchmen blew the safe. They obtained $1,000 in cash. They also took twenty cases of brandy used in baking cakes.

200 BELIEVED LOST; 100,000 FLEE TORRENT

Armies of Men Work on Lower Levees.

Help the Sufferers!

Contributions in aid of the thousands made homeless by the Mississippi floods are urgently asked of the public. Funds should be sent direct to the Chicago Chapter Red Cross or to the Mayor's Relief Committee, city hall. The need is for $750,000 to save lives and end suffering.

BULLETIN.

Greenville, Miss., April 23.—(Special.)—More than 100 Negroes were drowned at Stops Landing, Miss., where the Mississippi river levee broke, Sergt. Harry Bay, in charge of rescue work, estimated today.

Flood's Rage Increases

[By Associated Press.]

More than sixty persons are known to have perished and there are unconfirmed reports that upwards of one hundred and fifty others have been drowned.

Those made homeless over the thousands of square miles now under water are estimated at 100,000.

Floods sweep over additional Mississippi towns, including Leland, Cleveland, Shaw, and Benoit, and millions in property damage was steadily amounting.

Warnings of flood dangers in Louisiana from the Red and Ouachita rivers, as well as at Natchez, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans, are issued by the weather bureau.

Red Cross and federal agencies moved swiftly to organize relief work and to evacuate refugees from inundated towns and those in the path of the raging waters.

Memphis, Tenn., April 23.—(AP)—Thousands of those made homeless by flood waters of the Mississippi river and its tributaries were carried to safety today, while still other thousands awaited succor. Many were in precarious positions on levees and promontories or were clinging to trees and to the roofs of houses and barns.

Although every possible agency for rescue was brought into play, the death list continued to mount, reaching beyond the sixty mark, and there were unconfirmed reports that upwards of 150 had perished.

As the flood waters pouring through the crevasse at Spots Landing, above Greenville, Miss., pushed on across the delta, new towns were inundated, among them Leland, and the millions in property damage already wrought was steadily increasing.

Word was received at Greenville, Miss., tonight that 3,500 refugees were crowded on a railway embankment at Leland in addition to the normal population of 2,500. They are in dire need of food and are waiting to be rescued.

Armies Work on Dikes.

While small armies strengthened the dikes on the lower Mississippi in Louisiana, augmented forces were set to work rescuing the marooned and moving to more advantageous places those who had been taken to river towns.

Red Cross estimates placed the total number of refugees now at nearly 100,000 and an even larger number of people are threatened by present or prospective floods as the crest of the high water moves slowly south.

Evacuation of Greenville, Miss., the largest city to be flooded, probably will be completed tomorrow.

Water System Fails.

At Greenville, where the water stood more than waist deep, sanitary conditions were described as deplorable, due to the failure of the water and sewerage systems and the presence of nearly 10,000 refugees in addition to the normal population of 12,000.

The small boats were needed to transport the people from the court house and other temporary shelters to the levee where they might board river steamers. There also was a shortage of bread and clothing.

While state, municipal and federal authorities were joining forces in Mississippi rescue and relief work, those in Louisiana were strengthening the levees and dikes against the combined waters of the Mississippi, the Red and the Ouachita rivers when the flood crests reached there.

Armies of men were at work topping

the dikes in the face of warnings of the highest river stages of record at New Orleans, Natchez, Baton Rouge and Donaldsonville, while hundreds of armed guards patrolled the levees to prevent deliberate blasting of them by property holders who thus might protect their own lands.

The flood waters from the Mississippi breaking through to the north of Greenville tonight had spread eastward for 20 miles, joining with the Sunflower river and backwaters from the Sunflower and the overflowed Yazoo. Communication with this district was difficult, but reliable reports were that a number of small towns had been flooded.

Delta Country Inundated.

Engineers estimated that before the flood has passed beyond Vicksburg, probably 2,000 square miles of the Delta country would be flooded.

Flood waters from the Arkansas river running over into Louisiana will reach the Red river soon and this resulted in warning of unusually high stages on that river below Shreveport. Notice also was given that a flood was moving down the Ouachita toward Camden.

Some improvement in Arkansas was reported during the day with a fall of the waters of the Arkansas and White rivers, but vast territories are still under water, including the towns of Clarendon and Hughes, and thousands of persons are in need of help.

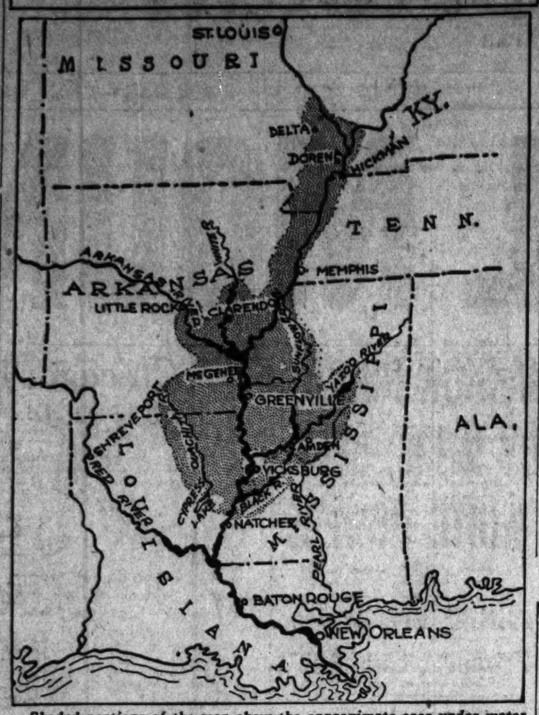
Airplane Scouts Report.

Government airplanes flying over the flooded districts from Little Rock south to McGehee, reported dangerous levee conditions and loction of people who are in danger. Rescue parties get their directions from these planes.

On the Mississippi above Memphis the danger point appears to have passed Hickman, Ky., but the crevasse in the Missouri levee at Dorena had widened to more than 3,000 feet and was still crumbling with army engineers reporting a depth of rushing water at from 15 to 65 feet.

Rescue work in the northern flood area is being pushed by the coast guard, which today ordered a relief party consisting of the entire personnel at Louisville to proceed to Cairo to aid in this task. More than 2,000 refugees have been taken out by the coast guard cutter Kankakee.

Where Floods Surge Onto Gulf



Shaded portions of the map show the approximate area under water. This is now estimated at 8,000 square miles. In this area more than 100,000 persons are homeless and the death list is constantly increasing.

TANKER CAVES IN LEVEE

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

New Orleans, La., April 23.—[Special.]—The rampaging Mississippi has broken through a levee forty-three miles down river from here and twenty-nine hundred lives are imperiled. An oil tanker crashed into the levee and gave an opening that hundreds of men are fighting desperately to close.

The tanker now has its nose into that break, like a boy with his finger in the dike, trying with its bulk to prevent the river from widening it and sending a deluge into the valley. Boats, trains, automobiles, are rushing sand, lumber and men to that break.

The levees have been holding for the last few hundred miles of river traversed by Mayor Thompson's waterway cruisers. The Chicagoans have been paying much attention to those mounds of earth and sand along the river banks that are the sole protection of vast areas of lowland.

WARNED BY ENGINEERS

New Orleans, La., April 23.—(AP)—Revisions of forecast heights for the greatest flood in the history of the Mississippi valley and hundreds of stories of havoc and misery from the upper valley today brought warnings from engineers of the grave danger in which the lower valley stands from the approaching flood.

The fifth Louisiana levee board issued a statement warning the people of the gravity of the flood menace and sought to impress upon residents of the lower valley that the section faced the hardest high water fight in its history.

"Don't let the temporary fall lull you to sleep," the statement said. "Much more hard work is now necessary than ever and eternal vigilance and hard labor will win the fight. Anything else will lose it."

The engineers estimated that the return waters from the Mississippi breaks would get back into the river within the next ten days and urged that all levees in the parishes of Madison, Tensas, and Concordia be put into condition to withstand a 57 foot level on the Vicksburg gauge.

COOLIDGE SENDS HOOVER TO SPEED FLOOD ZONE AID

Red Cross Chief Named Dictator of Relief.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—At the request of President Coolidge, Secretary of Commerce Hoover left Washington tonight for Memphis, where he will make a thorough survey of conditions in the flood swept areas of the Mississippi valley. He was accompanied by Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers and James L. Fieser, acting chairman of the national Red Cross.

In an official statement, the White House said that "the purpose of Mr. Hoover's trip is to establish an enlarged organization of Red Cross activities now becoming urgent and to study and determine the necessities of the situation generally with Red Cross and public officials."

Director of Flood Relief.

Secretary Hoover is chairman of the special committee of the Red Cross organized by President Coolidge for work in the Mississippi flooded areas. At a called meeting of this committee today Henry M. Baker, National Red Cross director of disaster relief, was appointed national dictator for all relief work in the disaster area.

It is assumed that while Mr. Baker will have full charge of relief work, he will be guided by the advice and counsel of Secretary of Commerce Hoover. Gen. Jadwin will take active charge of and several dozen cats imported in the lower Mississippi river basin.

In the meantime officials at the war, treasury, navy and commerce departments worked overtime in organizing the flood relief facilities of their departments for coöperation with the Red Cross in the Mississippi valley.

Doing Everything Possible.

Prior to leaving the capital, Mr. Fieser issued a statement, assuring the American people that everything that is humanly possible to do will be done by the Red Cross to care for the emergency needs of the flood refugees.

"Word received by telegraph late this evening from our trained disaster workers along the Mississippi and its tributaries informs me that the refugees are being moved out of the flooded districts as fast as each new break occurs," Mr. Fieser said. "The victims of the rising river are being guided to safety on high ground on either side of the river and there they are being cared for in emergency Red Cross camps, where shelter, food and clothing is being provided.

"Thanks to the splendid help given by federal government departments, these refugees are being moved with almost no loss of life. State and local authorities are coöperating to safeguard the health of refugee camps. Adequate medical and nursing aid is being extended wherever necessary.

"President Coolidge, through his cabinet officers, has placed at Red Cross disposal every possible government facility. The great railroad systems of the Mississippi valley are coöperating in every way. Three thousand Red Cross chapters are raising the money needed to finance the relief work. With this splendid support and coöperation, the Red Cross will see the job through."

Decision to appoint a dictator was reached after army engineers had reported to the committee that the Mississippi river will break all existing high water records before the present flood recedes. The engineers said the river is certain to rise at least a foot higher than previous records.

Storm Would Break Levees.

Levees on the southern Mississippi river probably will hold, the engineers reported, unless another serious storm develops. In case of storm, they will certainly go out.

Mr. Baker will have his headquarters at Memphis, Tenn., where he now is, and will have appointed to work in conjunction with him a liaison officer from the war, navy, commerce, and treasury departments. The veterans' bureau will also be represented at Memphis.

Mr. Baker has been authorized to commandeer of charter 40,000 motor boats now available on the Mississippi river if he deems such action necessary. All lighthouse and coast guard boats are included.

Veterans Give Cots, Blankets.

The Red Cross today announced an appropriation of $100,000 from its national treasury as a contribution toward the $5,000,000 fund which it is estimated will be required to care for relief sufferers. The veterans' bureau coöperating with the Red Cross promised to turn over its surplus supply of cots, blankets, medical supplies and other equipment stored in Chicago, Long Island City and Perry Point, Md.

The Red Cross announced that it will ask all railroads to give free transportation to refugees and supplies. It was said that a number of railroads have already arranged this service.

A special train of eleven passenger cars passed through Washington today from Philadelphia laden with 3,500 army tents for use in the flooded areas.

James B. Forgan Jr., chairman of the Chicago chapter of the Red Cross, issued the following statement last night on the urgency of flood relief:

"The President of the United States has issued an appeal to the people to assist the sufferers from the floods in the Mississippi valley. The disaster is daily assuming vaster proportions, both in respect to the size of the area affected and the number of people involved. The need for relief is urgent and assistance of vast extent must be rendered.

"The committee appointed by the President after a careful survey of the situation has decided that a fund of five million dollars is needed. As Chicago is the chief commercial and industrial center of the Mississippi valley, it seems to me that our quota should not be less than $750,000.

"The carrying out of relief work has been intrusted by the President and the governors of the affected states to the American Red Cross, incorporated by congress for such purposes, and the only properly equipped organization in existence to render immediate help. It has already sent its trained personnel to the affected districts, and it has contracted to the extent of hundreds of thousands of dollars for supplies needed to bring relief to the sufferers.

"It is to be hoped that there will be an immediate generous response to the appeal of the President. Those wishing to contribute should make checks payable to the American Red Cross and send them to the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, 616 South Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill."

Chicago, totaling up its present contributions to the Mississippi valley flood victims at approximately $30,000, yesterday, through its various relief committees, called upon the citizens of this area to give freely and immediately for a disaster which, the American Red Cross states, is hourly growing more acute, with the crest of the difficulty not to be reached until late today.

Donations may be made directly to the Chicago chapter of the American Red Cross, at 616 South Michigan avenue, or to Mayor Thompson's city committee, room 501, Ch. hall.

Yesterday's additions to the fund include $6,000 sent to the Red Cross and $1,521 to the mayor's committee.

Of this amount a check for $5,000 was sent to the Red Cross from the International Harvester company. The Red Cross's total fund is now in the neighborhood of $13,000.

The mayor's committee now has, Comptroller Charles Fitzmorris announced last night, $6,021.10, among yesterday's contributions the following: From the employes of the municipal reduction works, from Gilbert B. Goff, Henry A. [illegible] John C. Shaffer, Lyela Comedy, Charles Levy, $100 apiece.

A third group of donations, $10,000 collected by Mayor Thompson's party down south, has not yet been forwarded to the mayor's committee.

Tells Need for Funds.

Mrs. Florence J. Brown, director of the local Red Cross, following a telephone conversation yesterday afternoon with the regional director in St. Louis, gave out this statement:

"The suffering is still growing. The crest of the difficulty will not come until Sunday night. Army kitchens are used for feeding. The United States government can be depended upon for supplies it has available. The railroads are carrying the freight free. Commercial food products are, in the main, adequate."

The Salvation Army makes a plea for clothing to be sent to the refugees. The Army asks that clothing be brought today to either of its two workhouses, one at 1325 West Congress street, the other at 6200 Western avenue, in time for shipment tonight over the Illinois Central lines, when management have offered free passage.

HARRISON JOINS HOST TO BOOST IRONSIDES' TRIP

Ex-Mayor Cites Holmes' Famous Poem.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

He jumped in with suggestions, but realizing that money talks a language of special potency, he added to his suggestions a check for $25 for the restoration fund that will recondition the frigate Constitution [Old Ironsides] for its cruise to receive the homage of Chicago and other Great Lakes ports.

Holmes' "Old Ironsides" was Carter Harrison's favorite recitation piece when he was a boy, and he wants the Chicago boys of Now to learn it and speak it and be thrilled by it as he was more than half a century ago when his father was the biggest and best beloved man in this town.

Wants Children to Know It.

"Would it not be a good idea," says Carter the Second, "to print, for wide distribution among our school children, Oliver Wendell Holmes' stirring poem, 'Old Ironsides'?

"Print it first in THE TRIBUNE, and then in the manner of an old fashioned broadside, so that every child may have a handsome copy as his or her very own souvenir of the great campaign to save the frigate and set it sailing again.

"Old as I am, the thrilling verses never fail to get below my belt.

"And that reminds me:

"All the recent talk of King George and his diabolical attempts to subvert American liberties, of the distortion of facts in American history, etc., has called to my attention the peculiar fact that comparatively few children and young people of the day are conversant with Holmes' poem.

Few Know Famous Poem.

"Or perhaps I should put it differently and say that many of the younger generation whom I know, and who should know the poem, confess to never having heard it.

"For example, I know a young man of close to 40, who graduated with one of the highest percentages ever obtained in a Chicago high school, and was a Phi Beta Kappa man at Harvard; I know another younger man who was educated in Chicago schools and later took a degree at Yale; I know a little girl of 11 now attending a public school in one of our suburbs —and none of the three recalls ever having heard Holmes' battle cry for the preservation of Old Ironsides.

"When I was a boy its lines were as well known as those of any poem in the language.

"Perhaps it is still printed in school readers; perhaps it lacks the jazzy cadence dear to the youthful heart of the day; perhaps it has been of purpose cast into the discard.

"I would like to know the facts."

Here comes another alluring suggestion.

It comes from Major Montgomery Meigs, son of General Meigs, who was Abraham Lincoln's quartermaster general during the Civil War.

Expects Federal Help.

Major Meigs writes:

"Keokuk, Ia., April 22, 1927.

"Dear Tribune:

"Your campaign for the repair and reconstruction of our most famous ship is meeting with great indorsement by everybody. Under your vigorous propaganda I look to see the money begin to roll in and I beg to inclose my check for five dollars to help the cause along.

"I believe if we can only get that ship into dry dock that congress for mere shame if nothing else will help the school children out in paying for the work.

"Lying on the table in front of me as I write is a dark heavy block of wood that has graced the center table of my grandfather, my father and myself for over seventy years. It has always lain there among the books, and is a familiar sight to my children and grandchildren. It is indestructible in the form it has and has never been lost or stolen.

"This block of wood is a piece of the Constitution brought home from the Mediterranean by an ancestor of mine, Commodore John Rogers. He commanded the ship during the Barbary war and was in command of the American fleet also.

Relics of Old Ironsides.

"Now, could not the reconstruction of the Constitution be used to help pay the cost?

"Great quantities of timber from her hull will be discarded because of partial decay, leaving a great mass of sound timber that could be made into souvenirs like mine and sold or given as prizes to those who showed the most zeal in collection of funds.

"In Keokuk the school children already have made their contribution through the Elks' club. The souvenir I have is in the shape of a book rudely fashioned aboard ship by a sailor.

"Just at this time, when the matter is up, I would be willing to send this specimen to be used by you in propaganda.

"Enthusiastically applauding your campaign for the Constitution, very respectfully yours,

"MONTGOMERY MEIGS,
"U. S. Civil Engineer, Retired."

Old Ironsides Bookends.

"What," suggests Maj. Meigs in another note, "could be finer for bookends, now so popular, than bookends made from timbers of Old Ironsides which the shipwrights will be obliged to discard in their work of restoration?"

Amid a multitude of suggestions and endorsements, THE TRIBUNE wishes to make this announcement:

Arrangements have been completed by which THE TRIBUNE will sponsor a benefit for the Old Ironsides restoration fund on the evening of Tuesday, May 3.

Mayor Thompson's Old Ironsides fund was made richer yesterday by ten cents' worth of the kind of money the mayor best likes to see come in —American boys' money.

Here is the letter:

"North Platte, Neb., April 22, 1927.

"Mr. Charles Fitzmorris, city comptroller, City hall, Chicago, Ill.

"Dear sir: I have just finished THE TRIBUNE'S article on Old Ironsides here at North Platte, Neb., and being a resident of Chicago I am interested in anything that dear old Chicago is back of.

"I have a boy who will be 13 years old April 26 and I am desirous of having him wear a Victory medal, so I am sending his dime. Please send button to Master Burton Wetmore, 8117 Ingleside avenue, Chicago.

"Thanking you in advance, I beg to remain, your very truly,

"B. F. WETMORE."

MUSICAL TONED WHISTLES OUST SHRIEKS ON R. R.

C., B. & Q. to Save Coal and Please Residents.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The Burlington railroad is installing a new whistle on the locomotives of its suburban service between Chicago and Aurora. It is described by those who have heard it as "four toned, musical and relatively soft."

One of the two objects of the innovation is to decrease the amount of offensive noise produced by the railroad. The other object is to save money. The management has demonstrated that it requires much less steam to produce pleasant, musical warnings than hair-raising blasts on a locomotive, although the first cost of the multiple toned musical whistle is seven times that of the harsh shriek common locomotive whistle.

Complaints for Years.

For years the road has been receiving complaints of the locomotive whistles. In the last year and a half these complaints have so increased in vigor and numbers that President Hale Holden five months ago ordered something done at once.

Between Hawthorne, where the track elevation starts and stops, and Aurora there are more than forty-six grade crossings and there was a population in 1920 of 122,265, which the railroad believes has doubled since. Over this stretch of right of way travel approximately 200 trains daily. At certain points the housewife has very few periods of five consecutive minutes during her waking hours when she is relieved from the sharp, piercing whistles of the Burlington locomotives.

Worst Noise Possible.

The grade crossing alarm is designedly the most ear tearing blast which railroad engineers could devise after more than fifteen years of tests. The sharp, short blast, then a long one, followed by two short ones, is said to be the only series of toots which would arouse a cow on the track before fences were built.

But the housewives of La Vergne, Clyde, Berwyn, Riverside, Hollywood, Brookfield, Congress Park, La Grange, Hinsdale, Downers Grove, Western Springs, Clarendon Heights, Lisle, Eola, and Naperville have been carrying on a war of letters at the railroad against the blasts designed to awake a sleeping cow.

Now there is to be substituted a horn with some of the characteristics of the instruments used by drivers of smart roadsters.

"Those smart auto horns remind one of chimes by sounding one tone after another," said an engineer of the Burlington. "Our horn blends all the tones into one sound. This new whistle is a brass tube about eighteen inches long with a large opening about four and a half inches in diameter. It is operated by air.

"Our laboratory tests show it requires 14.2 pounds for coal for each minute of whistling by the steam locomotive whistle, while this new air whistle requires only 5.1 pounds of coal; and that is a considerable item. We will save nearly two-thirds of the coal now used to blow the whistles and we reckon that these new whistles will pay for themselves every six months."

"How much coal do you burn to blow your whistles?"

"By actual test in a run of 163 miles, the engineer used 708 blasts of the whistle, varying in length from 2½ to 7½ seconds. Figure it out for yourself."

Here goes. Assuming an average blast of five seconds, the 708 blasts means 59 minutes. At 14.2 pounds of coal per minute, the fireman shoveled 837.8 pounds of coal into the firebox during the 163 mile run just to blow the whistle. At 5.1 pounds of coal per minute for the musical whistle, the coal consumption on the run would be 300.9 pounds.

OLD IRONSIDES

Oliver Wendell Holmes' celebrated impromptu which saved the glory ship from the destruction edict of bureaucratic vandals in Washington in 1830 and which former Mayor Carter H. Harrison wants Chicago to use as an inspirational leaflet for school children in the campaign to recondition the frigate for a cruise of the great lakes ports.

AY, tear her tattered ensign down!
Long has it waved on high,
And many an eye has danced to see
That banner in the sky;
Beneath it rung the battle shout,
And burst the cannon's roar—
The meteor of the ocean air
Shall sweep the clouds no more.

Her deck, once red with heroes' blood,
Where knelt the vanquished foe,
When winds were hurrying o'er the flood,
And waves were white below,
No more shall feel the victor's tread,
Or know the conquered knee—
The harpies of the shore shall pluck
The eagle of the sea!

O, better that her shattered hulk
Should sink beneath the wave;
Her thunders shook the mighty deep,
And there should be her grave;
Nail to the mast her holy flag,
Set every threadbare sail,
And give her to the god of storms,
The lightning and the gale!

[Those words so angered the nation and so shamed the bureaucrats that the edict was revoked.]

AIMEE'S CHOIR LEADER FORMS RIVAL CHURCH

Los Angeles, Cal., April 23.—(AP)—A schism in the religious ranks of Aimee Semple McPherson occurred tonight when several hundred former members of Angelus temple gathered under the leadership of Gladwyn N. Nichols, resigned musical director of the temple, and announced the opening of a new church, which will hold its first services in a hall at Glendale, a suburb, tomorrow.

Choir and Band Quit.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 23.—[United Press.]—The Angelus temple choir of 85 voices and band of 40 pieces quit the church in a body today, according to Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, mother of Aimee Semple McPherson, evangelist. Mrs. Kennedy attributed the walkout of the chorus to criticism of their work.

The reported request for the resignation of Gladwyn Nichols, musical director, who from time to time occupied the temple pulpit, is said to have been the impelling motive.

Kresge & Co. store at 1325 South Halsted street to surrender $1,600 which they were carrying to a bank. The victims, Kenneth Walker and Leslie Cooper, were warned they would be killed if they tried to attract attention. The robbers took the satchel in which the money had been placed, stepped back into the automobile and drove away.

BOY WOUNDED AS POLICE BATTLE GANG OF BANDITS

Caught in Crossfire as Holdup Is Thwarted.

A 13 year old boy, an innocent bystander, was caught in the cross fire of a pistol battle between would-be pay roll bandits and police at Monroe and Aberdeen streets yesterday and perhaps fatally shot.

The police detail, commanded by Lieut. John Ryan, had sighted the bandit car, a small sedan, bearing down upon an armored car of the Brink's Express company, conveying pay roll funds under convoy to a west side factory.

Sighting the police car at Adams and Aberdeen streets, the bandit machine speeded north in Aberdeen street past its intended prey, the pay roll car, the three bandits immediately opening fire upon the police, who, returning the fire, gave pursuit.

Dozen Watch Battle.

At Monroe street the boy, Ted Lokey, 316 South Aberdeen street, with a dozen other pedestrians, turned to watch the battle, when he was struck in the groin by a stray bullet. Physicians at county hospital late yesterday held little hope for his recovery.

Escape in Traffic.

A traffic jam on the boulevard permitted the escape of the bandits, their car later being found at 905 Vernon place. Ownership was traced to Edward Mickels, 1925 Blue Island avenue, police said. Mickels was sought.

Lieut. Christy Hughes of the detective bureau, was accidentally shot through the back by Policeman F. West, a member of his squad, yesterday while the officers were engaged in a revolver battle with the occupants of a fleeing automobile at Tilman and Chicago avenues. Hughes, who is a veteran of the police force, and former partner of Detective Sergeant John Dailey, who was assassinated at Halsted street and Grand avenue in 1914, has a chance for recovery, it was said at the Norwegian-American hospital.

Premier Mussolini approved the following program: (1) That at the next cabinet meeting a state guarantee be granted for special long term credits. (2) That a company to insure ordinary commercial credits to exporters be created and (3) that a project be studied whereby the national exchange institute would be permitted to discount and rediscount bills in foreign currency, the Bank of Italy at present being allowed to do so only in Italian lira.

Darrow and Wheeler Again Cite Bad, Good of Dry Era

New York, April 23.—(AP)—Clarence Darrow, of Chicago, and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league, debated prohibition tonight in Carnegie hall. The subject was: "Resolved, that prohibition of beverage liquor traffic is detrimental to the public welfare." There was no official decision.

Darrow, contending that it was a minority measure and legal tyranny, said prohibition was a failure; that it could not and had not been enforced. He said repeal was impossible and ventured that "personal liberty," which he charged was invaded by the eighteenth amendment, could be restored only by nullification—disobedience of the law and official negligence.

Drys Secret Drinkers—Darrow.

He charged that lawmakers and those attempting to enforce the law were drinking, that more than a million citizens had become users of intoxicants "because of prohibition" and that 66 per cent of the nation's population is opposed to it.

Wheeler said prohibition was a success and is the will and wish of the majority. Describing the use of intoxicants as "entrenched sin," he claimed for the federal and state enforcing measures a policy of patience while awaiting eradication of this "sin."

He said that most wet propaganda was conceived and fostered by "liquor interests" and that the nation was still preponderantly "dry." He said prohibition was based on sound governmental principles, "The inherent right of the people to better their condition" and not "fanaticism" as charged by Darrow.

Of repeal and nullification, Wheeler said: "If so [that the constitutional amendment was effected by a minority] a wet majority can extract it from the constitution. It has always been the right of the people to change their constitution by legal methods, but to attempt to nullify or defy it is anarchy."

Good and Bad of It.

Wheeler painted alcohol as a monster, habit-forming, fiendish, and insidious, that drove men to brutalities and economic disasters and corrupted morals generally.

Darrow couldn't see the harm in drinking "in moderation" and expressed no concern for those who drank otherwise. Life, he said, was pretty much a drab affair, what with man caught between an unknown past and undefined future, going to his routine tasks in the morning and returning at night to contemplate nothing in particular, and so if a citizen wished to take a stimulant to cheer him up a bit, he saw no harm in that. In fact, he said, he was sure a great deal of good resulted.

LOS ANGELES ON TRAINING FLIGHT TO PENSACOLA

Lakehurst, N. J., April 23.—(AP)—Leaving tonight for a training flight of unannounced destination, the dirigible Los Angeles an hour later wireless the naval air station that it would proceed to Pensacola, Fla.

The flight was expected to be of 26 hours' duration and officers planned to moor to the mast ship Patoka in Pensacola harbor upon arrival.

Admiral William A. Moffet, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, was aboard as a passenger.

CANADIAN NOTE PROTESTS BAR ON BORDER WORKERS

Requests Conferences on Immigration Order.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Tightening of immigration regulations applying to Detroit and other border points brought a protest today from the Canadian government. A note was delivered by the Canadian legation to the state department requesting an opportunity for conferences before the order is made fully effective.

Allowed Six Months.

Under the terms of the order a period of six months after June 1 is allowed for persons affected to obtain documents which will permit them to reside in Canada or Mexico and engage in employment in the United States. All such persons hereafter will be classified as immigrants.

Harry Hull, commissioner of immigration, in discussing the order, said that the status of persons living across the border but working in the United States never has been defined clearly and that this is the sole purpose of the order.

Newcomer Mainly Affected.

He insisted that the order is not drastic and that ample time is given to all affected to qualify. He pointed out that persons who are native born Canadian citizens or British born, who arrived in Canada prior to the enactment of the 1924 quota immigration act, are not to be seriously affected. Those of other nationalities or those British who came to Canada after the 1924 act became effective, must qualify as immigrants within the quotas of their countries.

Mr. Hull said that the Detroit Federation of Labor and other labor organizations had asked for such an order.

JURY DECREES 1 YEAR TO LIFE FOR MISS STOKES

Manslaughter Verdict for Girl.

CRIMINAL COURT.

George Burke, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Herman Nowicki, robbery, sentenced to 10 years to life in the penitentiary by Judge John J. Sullivan.

Florence Stokes, acquitted of the charge of murdering James Glennon, sweetheart who declined to become a husband, was, by the same 15 hour deliberations of the jury in Judge William V. Brothers' court, found guilty, at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, of manslaughter.

This verdict carries with it an indeterminate sentence of from 1 year to life in the state penitentiary.

The jurors, it is understood, figured that about eight years would be adequate.

Pleased that she had escaped a sentence for murder, for which the minimum sentence is 14 years, and dismayed that a verdict of not guilty had not sent her back to her foster mother, the Stokes girl, 24 and very small, was more bewildered and inarticulate than she had been even during the days of the trial.

Moves for New Trial.

Attorney William Scott Stewart who, with Attorney Hector Brouillet, served without fee, as defense counsel, immediately made a motion for a new trial.

"This verdict," Mr. Stewart said, "clearly, and by law, acquits my client of the murder charge. For it was either murder, or not murder. There was no manslaughter element involved. Since these twelve men have decided that it was not murder, Florence Stokes should be freed."

Judge Brothers, who just a moment before had thanked the jury for its conscientious performance of duty and had expressed the opinion that the verdict was warranted by the evidence, set next Saturday morning as the time when he will hear arguments on the motion.

Florence sat there, dabbing at her eyes with a crumpled handkerchief, not saying a word. Her foster mother and Mr. Stewart pushed her to her feet and moved her along over to the bull pen, where she sat for many hours while the jury had been arguing her case the other side of the wall.

Judge Speaks to Her.

Judge Brothers leaned across the bench and said to her:

"We've set the motion for a new trial in your case for next Saturday."

The red headed girl took the handkerchief away from her eyes and jumbled a low "Thank you, your honor?" and moved slowly along in the pathway her friends made for her.

James Glennon, 22, a street car conductor, who had been going with the Stokes girl for about two years, was killed the 22d of last February in the areaway in the rear of her boarding house, 6450 South Green street. She said the shooting came as the result of a quarrel.

Jury Studies Quarrel.

It was the degree of violence of this quarrel which concerned the jury in its deliberations. Some argued that it was so heated that the girl shot in self-defense and should be acquitted. Others, and it is reported that E. L. Hastig of Oak Park, led this group, classified the quarrel as an "ordinary one," and the girl's action as not legitimate self-defense.

84 VICTIMS OF MASSACRE LAID IN ONE GRAVE

Mexico Stirred to Fury by Train Attack.

BULLETIN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, April 23.—Two more high prelates of the Catholic church were on their way to the United States today under orders to leave Mexico. They were Archbishop Pedro Vera y Zuria of Puebla and Jose Manrique y Zarante, bishop of Huejutla. These bring the total expulsions of members of the Catholic episcopate up to eight.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GUADALAJARA, Mexico, April 23.—"Mexico has just witnessed a becatomb—the like of which it never before witnessed in its history. It is a crime without name, such as never before was perpetrated by any rebel faction," said Minister of War Joaquin Amaro, today in discussing the massacre of passengers in the burning train Tuesday night between the stations of Feliciano and Ocotlan.

Because the heat of the burning train and of the semi-tropical sun was causing the rapid decomposition of the bodies, it became necessary to bury them immediately. Military authorities ordered a long trench dug and into this 84 unclaimed bodies were placed. Relief trains from the south arrived, with doctors and medicine, and numerous wounded were hurried to hospitals at La Barca, Turecuaro, La Piedad, and Irapuato, while the Mexico City train brought a score or more to the railway hospital at Guadalajara.

Find 17 More Bodies.

Seventeen additional dead were taken from the burned train today and the wrecking crew reports the bodies of numerous dead have not yet been removed.

At an early hour today the sound of bugles and beat of military drums announced the campaign had begun against the rebels in the uplands of the state of Jalisco, and the war department chief said there will be no cessation until Jalisco is made safe for civilization.

Minister of War Amaro has taken command of the crusade against the insurgents in Jalisco. Troops are being moved hurriedly toward the uplands from several directions. Meanwhile, the hillsmen who participated in the massacre have followed their usual tactics of disbanding and have disappeared into the hinterland.

"Priest Urges on Destruction."

"Helpless children and defenseless women and old men were swept completely out of existence by the hand of the terrorist, the most sanguinary in the history of Mexico, more deadly than the revolutionary destruction at Tlcuman, La Cima, and Munoz," Gen. Amaro continued. "It has left the republic stupefied by its savagery, which continued until the last soldier was laid low.

"The battle was in semi-darkness, for the moon had not yet risen and the train cars were not lighted. Toward the end of the ghastly scene the moon began to rise, and in the obscure light, says a witness of the scene, the commanding form of a priest in priestly robes could be seen urging on the hillsmen to the work of destruction.

"The object of the attack was the soldier train guards, but the infuriated hillsmen dealt death to every one in the line of fire. Of the passengers in the two second class cars, numbering over 100, scarcely one escaped injury or death, because about these cars raged the most intense fury of the battle, since from them the soldier guards defended the train. These wooden cars were perforated as though cardboard by bullets from the high power rifles of the peasants, who appeared magnificently armed.

"No Quarter Asked or Given."

"Amid the shrieking of women, crying of children and shouts of desperation of the men on the doomed train, the battle went on. No quarter was given or asked for, and the soldier train guards went to their death one after another, fighting desperately. It was an uneven fight to the last.

"When the last shot from the train fortress had ceased, the hillsmen surrounded the train on all sides for the whole length and stood with rifles in position ready to resume the fusilade while the leaders ordered the passengers out of the first class cars and pullman.

"Then the work of destruction began. The safe was broken open in the express car and the contents, amounting to $200,000 in gold and silver coin, was extracted. Registered letters and packages were taken from the postal car and deliberately opened and checks, money orders, and bank bills extracted. Letters and packages were put in piles and burned.

"Apparently the work of destruction was deliberately planned and deliberately carried out. It was a crusade of vengeance for the execution two weeks ago of Catholic plotters in Guadalajara. The Rev. J. M. Vega, a priest well known in Guadalajara, who led the hillsmen, said to passengers who spoke to him while the pillage was continuing: 'The hand of God has descended upon this train. The Almighty has smitten it.' It is to appeals like this that the Mexican Indians respond.

"Some fifty passengers and fifty-two soldiers are dead and many more are wounded. It reminds one of the raids by Indians in the United States upon white settlements. The same more or less primitive Indian reasoning inspired both."

Passengers Tell of Horror.

Passengers on an incoming train last night describe the scene at the wrecked train:

"Burned bodies still lay amid the remains of the burned cars," one said. "The thirst for blood and vengeance has cost the lives of many innocent victims, including all of the handful of valiant soldiers of the train guard who laid their lives upon the altar of duty."

The burning local political issues, religious intensity, labor union fights, and federal election struggles are forgotten today in this city of turmoil in the presence of the great catastrophe which has taken place at its doors.

Aged Passenger Goes Insane.

"Five hundred Indian hillsmen, led by two Indian priests, after taking up the rails, derailing the engine and express car and cutting the telegraph wires, began pouring deadly fire into the remaining Pullman, first and second class cars," another passenger said. "For more than two hours the battle between the hillsmen and fifty-two guards, federal army soldiers on the train, raged. Men and women and young people went about looking for the remains of dead parents, relatives or friends.

"One old gentleman who had lost nine of a party of fourteen children and relatives went about with the body of a dead girl in his arms, crooning like an old woman. He had gone insane. Women sat on the ground, looking on hopelessly as orphan children lamented in loud cries the loss of their parents and brothers or sisters. All about the fatal wreck was written one word—catastrophe."

Mexico Explains Expulsions.

MEXICO CITY, April 23.—The government today issued the following statement on the expulsion of Archbishop Jose Mora y Del Rio, titular head of the Catholic church in Mexico, with five other high prelates, several of whom will go to Chicago to live:

"Following an interview with the principal prelates of the episcopate of Mexico, in which these gentlemen were confronted with charges made against them, for which there were incontrovertible proofs, and in the face of the prospect of appearing before the tribunals or leaving the country, they elected to take the latter course, without doubt conscious of the responsibilities there were for exacting this of them, as witness the terms in which Señor Mora y Del Rio, archbishop of Mexico, expressed himself."

With the expulsion of a majority of the members of the Catholic episcopate from Mexico, the country is without a hierarchy.

Prelates Admit Defiant Statement.

San Antonio, Tex., April 23.—(AP)—The Catholic prelates expelled from Mexico declared on their arrival here tonight their expulsion had come only after they had informed the Mexican secretary of interior that Catholics of Mexico had the right to stand up for their rights, peaceful if possible, but with arms if necessary.

The party, headed by the venerable Archbishop Mora y del Rio, 89 years old, and Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, reached San Antonio by automobile late tonight from Laredo, and were taken to the home of Archbishop Arthur J. Drossaerts of San Antonio.

Rebels Burn Labor Leaders.

MEXICO CITY, April 23.—El Grafico, Saturday afternoon, states that seven laborers were burned to death by rebels. Delegate Crom, in the state of Jalisco, informed the central committee a group of armed individuals penetrated the town of Juancatlan, arresting several members and bathed them in petroleum, then set fire to them, burning the group to death.

THRIVING BABIES PROVE MOTHERS' CO-OP A SUCCESS

10th Birthday Celebrated by Maternity Club.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Mothers, if you would have contented storks bring you better babies, just join the Maternity club of Chicago, organization unique of its kind. In its decade of existence, during which it has grown from 8 to 100 members, this association which pays a $25 benefit and gives a complete layette to each infant, has had 73 "club babies" as they are called, only four of them have died.

These statistics prove, the members declared at the tenth birthday anniversary dinner held last night at the hotel Alcazar, 3000 Washington boulevard, that infant mortality is lowered, and the difficulties of maternity diminished when mother is a member of the club.

Founded by Mary Robertson.

It was on March 3, 1917, that Mrs. Mary Robertson, 2145 West 22d street, organized the club.

"There was no particular reason," Mrs. Robertson explained last night. "The idea just came to me. I guess it was because I was impressed with the way doctor's bills and other necessary expenses eat up the funds of a young couple and often leave very little for the frills and extras which every mother wants for her baby.

"Initiation is $1, and the dues are but 5 cents a week. We raise additional funds through dances and card parties and you'd be surprised to see how splendidly the men help us."

Other Generation Benefit.

Mrs. Robertson had two grown daughters when she started the club. Each of her girls, Mrs. Florence Gamble (treasurer) and Mrs. Belle Gallagher, have had two "club babies." Then there was Mrs. Lottie Dunston, 1920 Dayton street. Theodore Roosevelt had already written her a letter of congratulation on her three sets of twins when she applied for membership. But the club took a chance and welcomed her in. She didn't collect any benefits, but her children did. And now her granddaughter, Miss [yes, that's correct], Miss Florence Ebbole, 15 years old, is the club's youngest and not least enthusiastic member.

The procedure of the benefit is something like this:

The member goes to the president and tells her, in confidence if she so specifies, that she'll be needing a layette along about such and such a time.

If she thinks she'd like the color scheme pink, she indicates that hope. Or perhaps she wants it blue. In due time the layette, complete, dainty, and in the suggested color, is ready for her.

Every once in a while there's a financial crisis threatening, when too many twins cash in on the treasury dividends.

But this year, according to Mrs. Lucy Kapsa, chairman of last night's celebration, the club is exceedingly solvent, and "club babies" are exceedingly happy.

U. S. FLYER SMASHES WORLD SPEED RECORD IN LOADED SEAPLANE

LIEUT. S. W. CALLAWAY.

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Naval aviators brought back another world aviation record to the United States today when Lieut. S. W. Callaway flew a Corsair observation seaplane, carrying a useful load of 1,102 pounds, at the rate of 147.3 miles an hour, over a distance of 100 kilometers.

According to an announcement made by Porter Adams, president of the National Aeronautical association, Lieut. Callaway established a new world's speed record for seaplanes carrying a useful load. The record was made at Hampton Roads, Va. The previous record was made at St. Raphael, France, May 13, 1926, by Lieut. Demongeot. His speed was slightly more than 126 miles an hour.

Three world's records have been broken in the United States in the last ten days, two of which were broken by naval aviators. This country now holds fourteen of the 89 records recognized by the Federation Aeronautique Internationale.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

Why!

I didn't know you could play!

And so has begun many a romance — at the Piano

MORE eloquently than words does music speak heart to heart. No less plainly does it bespeak culture, mould character. More than 12,000 Chicago children, boys and girls, now competing in the Herald-Examiner's splendid Piano Playing Contest, have parents who well know this! And the number of such parents is growing daily; while their elders are discovering undreamed-of pleasures in the Duo-Art. Homes were never made happier than music is making them today! A beautiful Piano was never more to be desired, for the charm it imparts, as well as for the happiness it brings.

Chicago's interior decorators as well as music lovers are especially invited to see here a Piano of most charmingly decorative character and one that, musically, is distinctly the Steinway of its class —our really greatest Piano achievement—

ACCUSED POLICE FACE PRISON FOR AIDING ROBBERS

Hughes Orders Complete Probe; One Confesses.

Two policemen, accused of tipping off and sharing in the profits of a south side gang of theater and pay roll robbers, faced serious criminal charges yesterday as an official inquiry into the case got under way.

The accused are William Masterton, 5436 South California avenue, a traffic policemen stationed at Halsted and 63d streets, and Thomas Dunderdale, 6312 South Union avenue, of squad 7, attached to the Englewood station. Both were being held at the Englewood station yesterday.

Accused by Gangsters.

Masterton and Dunderdale were arrested following the capture of members of the gang, who implicated them in confessions to Assistant State's Attorneys Robert McMillan and George F. Gorman. They charged that Masterton tipped off the gang in the recent $6,000 holdup of the Stratford theater, 63d and Halsted streets, and received $450 as his share. Dunderdale is alleged to have taken a $30 split from the robbery of a messenger carrying receipts from a hockey game at the Coliseum.

Faced with his accusers, Dunderdale, according to Mr. Gorman, broke down and confessed. Masterton denied all the charges.

Two of the gangsters under arrest, John Peich and John Gavid, are escaped convicts, convicted of robbing banks. They are said to have been identified as the men who held up the Armour Glue works, killing a messenger, Frank Novak.

Hunt Another Ex-Cop.

Garfield Sullivan, now in the county jail for violation of parole, has also confessed to dealings with the gang, according to the assistant state's attorneys. A fourth suspect, Katherine Daley, is held, and police are searching for Thomas Fogarty, an ex-policeman, in connection with the robberies.

Chief Michael Hughes in ordering Masterton and Dunderdale suspended issued a warning to all members of the department.

"Any dishonest policeman caught conniving with criminals will not only be disgraced but will be liable to penitentiary imprisonmem," he declared. "I intend to push the investigation of this case to the limit."

Among the robberies in which the captured gangsters have involved themselves, Chief Hughes said, are those of the Midwest theater, $2,500; Michael Reese hospital, $6,000; New Regent theater, $375; Davidson Cartage company, $700, and Piccadilly theater, $2,150.

BUTCHER, ILL, KILLS HIMSELF.

George Poliquin, butcher, 46 years old, committed suicide yesterday at his home, 1025 Beloit avenue, Forest Park. Despondency over ill health was thought to have caused his act.

FOR AMERICA

Protect American Lives and Interests Everywhere.

FOR THE MIDDLE WEST

Build a Nine-Foot Waterway to New Orleans.

A Highway System Adequate at All Points to the Demands of Traffic.

Purchase of Western Railroads by Western Investors.

National and State Legislation to Encourage Regrowth of Our Forests.

CIVIS AMERICANUS SUM.

As the first plank in a revised platform for America, to be carried at the head of these columns, THE TRIBUNE presents today: Protect American Lives and Interests Everywhere.

It is the statement of a duty owed in principle to itself and its people by every sovereign state. This is axiomatic, but there is a wide gap between the declaration of a principle and its consistent and effectual enforcement. The principle itself was placed in the preamble of the fundamental law of the United States and there was no one in the constitutional convention and, we think, there were few among our people in those arduous days who would for a moment have doubted that it belonged among the foremost, the basic, the essential objects of national government.

"To provide for the common defense." This means not merely provision against the hostile invasion of our political limits by armed forces of an enemy. It means the defense of the common rights and interests of our people, and this right to defense goes with the American citizen wherever he lawfully goes. He is no more divested of his right to protection when he goes abroad than he is divested of his citizenship. The one carries the other.

These are truisms, but we do not apologize for insisting upon them because the performance of this duty of government is frequently criticized and the duty itself challenged by influential voices in our country. In our opinion the time calls for an emphatic and unequivocal assertion that the American citizen is entitled to the protection of his life and property wherever he is in any part of the world.

This does not mean in practice that the government shall insure any American his security or his property regardless of the cost to the nation or guarantee him in any enterprise he sees fit to pursue outside of the boundaries of the United States. It does not mean that the nation is bound to go to war if a citizen is in peril of life or property loss in any part of the world. The government's duty is to the whole nation and its responsibility is to take such action as in the faithful performance of that duty is proper and expedient. The citizen abroad, like the citizen at home, must hold his right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness subject to the commonweal, and there are circumstances wherein the individual must be sacrificed to the nation.

In other words, the duty to protect our citizens must be performed in consistency with the general good of all citizens collectively, that is, of the nation, and considerations of policy enter into the practical fulfillment of the duty.

Nevertheless, the duty should never be repudiated and no self-respecting nation, least of all, we hope, the United States, will shirk it.

There should be no disposition among the people to shirk it, although, as we have said, there are those who hold that it does not exist, that an American abroad has no right to the protection of his government and is without the bounds of the nation solely at his own risk. This opinion is based really upon the assumption that American enterprise in other lands is virtually a hostile invasion of those lands, a derogation of the rights of their peoples, and an exploitation of their possessions which good conscience must refuse to support.

The contrary is, with inconsiderable exceptions, the truth. The American people have no reason to be ashamed of American enterprise in other lands or their fellow Americans who conduct it. The American people have good reason to honor American enterprise abroad and to give it the moral and material support of the nation. It is essential to our economic progress and an inevitable expression of American vitality. We are not a hermit nation, but intend to have our proper place in the world, to trade, to maintain all proper relations with other peoples, to seek and, if possible, obtain commodities required or desired by our people, to go abroad anywhere upon our lawful occasions.

Pacifism, sentimental internationalism, socialism raise voices of protest against every practical policy for the encouragement and protection of this vital impulse, but we are quite confident the American nation intends that it shall be encouraged, not defeated, protected and not left naked to the assault of every rival or opponent. The republic, even in the days of its infancy and weakness, has been ever ready to defend her children. It has been and, we believe, it is proud of them and has good reason to be. In the assertion of their rights, upon all proper occasions and by all proper means, it has asserted its own dignity, and the day upon which it refuses so to assert them is the day of its own shame and the presage of its downfall.

FADING FREEDOM.

If the American people do not begin to exercise more of the vigilance which is said to be the price of liberty they will soon have very little of that once prized possession. Hardly a month goes by in which there is not a local landslide somewhere burying some liberty or other.

The suppression in Boston of the sale of "Elmer Gantry," recently here noted, deserves further attention. The history of the proceeding seems to be as follows: Immediately after the publication of "Elmer Gantry" and while the other barred books were under consideration, the Boston police brought the Sinclair Lewis book to the attention of District Attorney Foley. He later delegated Assistant District Attorney William J. Sullivan to read the book and to report to him. Four weeks later Sullivan made his report to District Attorney Foley, which resulted in the banning of the book.

It is understood it took Sullivan a week and a half to read the book, and the remainder of the time between the filing of his report was taken up in conferences with lower court judges, who expressed the belief the book should be suppressed.

Several days prior to the banning Boston booksellers made vain attempts to convince the district attorney that suppression of the novel would be unjustified. The book was banned April 12, approximately a month after its publication. District Attorney Foley informed the booksellers' committee that any further sales in Suffolk county would be prosecuted under the Massachusetts statutes of "obscene and indecent literature."

For many years J. Frank Chase, secretary of the Watch and Ward society of Boston, has unofficially acted as book censor for Boston and his opinion on the propriety of books had been accepted by the Boston police department.

Since the death of Secretary Chase, Nov. 3, 1926, apparently nothing in the way of censorship of books in Boston was done until the sudden activity of the police in this line in February.

Immediately on the banning of the sale of "Elmer Gantry" in Boston, "The Pilot," a Catholic publication published in Boston, in an editorial denounced the book as unfit literature. Two days after the suppression of "Elmer Gantry," two more books were ordered by the police not to be sold in Boston. These latest books to meet the official disapproval are: "An American Tragedy," by Theodore Dreiser, and "Doomsday" by Warwick Deeping, both published by Alfred A. Knopf. Complaints against these books were received by the police some weeks before.

The gist of this situation is in the fact that every one of these banned books was written by an author of established repute. All three authors are recognized as writing with serious purpose. They are not even authors of romantic fiction but of novels expressing serious views of human life and conduct. The issue raised by the Boston censorship is therefore whether the citizens of Boston are to be prevented by police action from having access to the views and creative product of reputable authors making serious comment in the spirit of serious literature throughout the world.

If this is possible, adult citizenship has lost its right to think for itself. If it is possible, the right of free speech and free press has become for the people of Boston an empty mockery. If it is possible, the adult intelligence of Boston has put itself in the keeping of its policemen and magistrates or of such clerical or moralistic influences as are strong enough in politics to impose their notions of what others ought to think and say upon policemen or other agencies of political government.

It is obvious to any one but a bigot or a moron that this is tyranny. It is abdication of the rights most fundamental to a free society, the rights of freedom of conscience, of freedom of thought, of freedom of utterance. No community, no society can make any pretense of liberty that surrenders these essentials. No other right outranks them in vital importance and the American community that will consent to be deprived of them has lost its birthright.

We marvel at the complacency with which Americans of this generation condone the many invasions of private right and of liberties which generations of men have fought and bled for and passed down to us hallowed by their sacrifice as the most precious of their legacies to posterity. We marvel at an indifference or shortsightedness which accepts these invasions in the name of morality. The citizen who does not respect his own rights will not respect those of his fellows, and presently unless we regain the spirit of freemen we shall be, as we already are beginning to be, a wrangling chaos of factions, each attempting to impose by force its will upon others. The invasion of private conduct by government, the growth of intolerance, the contempt for one another's elemental rights as freemen are poison in the life of America today.

Editorial of the Day

THE CONGESTION PROBLEM.

[The Washington Post.]

The city traffic conference which recently met in Chicago brought forth nearly a score of suggestions for the relief of the problem of congestion in metropolitan centers. The recommendations, all of them backed up by thorough surveys and years of expert study, might be grouped roughly into four classifications, namely:

Prohibit parking in congested areas.

Establish a simple and uniform traffic code.

Widen streets and guard against inadequate future construction.

Speed up transit to the maximum.

This appears to be an adequate program, one which, if adopted, would effect great relief. It does not seem beyond the bounds of reason to prophesy that eventually such a program, modified to meet local requirements, will be universally adopted.

Parking prohibitions are inevitable. As the nation approaches the saturation point of automobile use public sentiment probably will undergo a change, and the automobile owner will come to the realization that the parked machine is a hindrance to traffic. When the individual owner makes this admission the battle will be won. In the meantime, of course, parking must continue to be prohibited in certain sections by police regulations. Here and there parking places even now are springing up in which an automobile may be left, not on public property, for a nominal fee. This system should be extended.

The uniform code project is so sane and logical as to need no defense. The value of wider streets also is self-demonstrating. High speed traffic, in existence here and elsewhere, has proved its efficacy already, without at the same time increasing accidents.

Until comparatively recently, traffic has "just growed," like Topsy. It is small wonder that it has become such an involved problem. The fact that it is being studied scientifically, however, presages well for the future, and it is not too much to hope that before long a simple method will be found to control automobiles to the best interests of both driver and pedestrian.

HEALTH AND RELIGION

BY WILLIAM S. SADLER, M. D.

[Director Chicago Institute of Research and Diagnosis.]

Man is naturally a religious animal. All things equal, man is healthier and happier if he enjoys the comfort and consolation of some sort of religious belief. True, religion can also be made a source of fear and worry, we can become overconscientious and so unduly fanatical in religion as to make ourselves sick and unhappy.

There is a satisfying joy in genuine religious hope. Faith in a supreme being is inspiring and ennobling. A good religion is a real shock absorber. Fear is at the bottom of much sickness and unhappiness, and faith is the only known cure for fear. Religious faith is the master mind cure. No other form of faith can exert such power in controlling or influencing human thought.

There is a peculiar and satisfying sort of joy in the act and attitude of worship. There is an inspiration connected with belief in a supreme being and a future existence. But the kind of religion that contributes most to our health and happiness is the sort that, while it assures us of a future life, exhorts us to do everything within our power to make this old world a better place in which to live.

One real value of worship is, it renews the spirit as sleep renews the body. Our souls as well as our bodies get drained of available energy. It is an important observation which I am not alone in making, that as the so-called old fashioned religion declines worry increases. As men and women depart from the simple faith and trust in the comforting principles of the Christian religion, there is a growing tendency to anxiety. The right kind of a religion fosters happiness, and happiness is a great health asset.

Our health is tremendously influenced by the mental state, so that the mind is not only a direct factor in human happiness but an indirect one. It influences the health to such an extent it indirectly affects our happiness by its effect upon our physical well being. Health and religion constitute a beneficent circle, each contributing to the sustenance of the other.

All our feelings and emotions rest upon a firm physical basis. Aside from any beliefs we may entertain regarding the possibility of man being indwelt by some spiritual monitor, modern physiologists and psychologists tell us that our thoughts and feelings, our emotions and sentiments, are built up out of the cumulative impressions or sensations which pass into the brain over the nerves and through the special senses of the physical body; and it behooves us therefore to keep this physical mechanism in the best possible condition and in the most efficient working order so that our incoming sensations may be of a high and healthy sort. Religion not only sends comforting mental messages over the nervous system but exerts a powerful influence over the chemical messengers going to the body from the various ductless glands.

The experience of religion is just as real as anything that exists in other realms of human nature and the health and happiness that come therefrom are just as real as the health and happiness we secure from the more transient and fleeting pleasures of our day by day life.

By religion I mean the worship of the infinite, the love of the spiritual, together with loyalty to those concepts and ideals which are superhuman and divine. I am discussing modern concepts of religion, not the primeval theology of fear, superstition, and ignorance.

Christianity is founded on the idea and sentiment of love, and St. John says: "Perfect love casteth out fear."

Peace, real peace of mind and soul is, after all, the secret of health; and religion affords that "peace that passeth all understanding."

Our philosophy of living needs to be consistent and logical with reference to health and disease. We must know that our physical well being is a matter of sowing and reaping. We must understand the interrelationship of the laws of heredity, the practice of personal hygiene, and the principles of community health and sanitation. Health is not a matter which represents the divine smile and disease the result of the machinations of evil spirits.

Christian philosophy points the way in which we may order our lives so as to enjoy health without being wicked; while at the same time we can enjoy our religion and lead normal, conscientious lives without getting sick.

Christ said: "I am come that your joy may be full," and elsewhere in the scriptures we are frequently exhorted to "rejoice evermore." Even the wise man in Proverbs said: "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine."

No one can appreciate so fully as does the doctor the amazingly large percentage of human diseases and sufferings which are directly traceable to immorality, dissipation, and ignorance, to unwholesome thinking and unclean living. The sincere acceptance of the principles and teachings of Christ with respect to the life of mental peace and joy, the life of unselfish thought and clean living, would at once remove more than one-half the difficulties, diseases, and sorrows of the human race.

Irrespective of the future rewards of the Christian religion, laying aside all discussion of future life, it would pay any man or woman to live the Christ life just for the mental and physical rewards which it affords here in this present world. Some day the world may advance to the point where it will recognize that the teachings of Christ are potent and powerful in the work of preventing and curing disease. Some day our wonderful, boasted scientific developments regarding mental and moral improvement may indeed catch up with the teachings of the Christian religion.

Concerning the cause of disease and the source of affliction, the scriptures certainly do not recognize human suffering as a visitation of the wrath of God. The Bible does not recognize disease as a "mysterious dispensation of providence." Even in Job's time his friend, in discussing his sufferings, said: "Affliction cometh not forth of the dust, neither doth trouble spring out of the ground."

Every transgression of physical law which results in weakening, irritating, and sickening the body serves as an additional weight to the soul to hold it down in its efforts to rise above the polluted physical and material waters.

Good physical health, a nervous system in perfect equilibrium, sound digestion, a pure blood stream, an active and well regulated eliminative system—these are all physical means of grace to the spiritual nature.

Religion may be mentioned finally as a mode of relaxation of the highest value. Religion is letting go the stress and tension of the individual and resigning one's self to an outside power, whether that power be God or the church. The function of religion in this aspect is that of a sustainer, and religion loses its usefulness if the individual, as is often the case, feels it his duty to sustain his religion. His religion must sustain him.

While all religions help, I am a believer in the Christian religion, and I not only believe that Christianity will do all that any other religion can do in the fostering of health, but I believe there is something additional, something supernatural and exquisitely spiritual, something divine, about Christianity. Therefore, when I consider religion as a health promoter, I would not indifferently recommend any one of several religions. I would heartily recommend the sublime and supernal teachings of Jesus Christ.

SLIGHTLY DEAF PUPILS; WHAT CAN BE DONE.

DRS. FOWLER and Fletcher estimate that there are three million partially deaf children in the public schools of the United States.

After some consideration they decided to fix nine per cent below the average ability to hear as the top limit of what they call the partially deaf. If a child had hearing which was within 91 per cent of being average good, he was set down as hearing satisfactorily. If he had only four-fifths as good hearing as those who were agreed on as having good hearing, he was set down as partially deaf.

The next question that comes up is: How did they decide on the figure three million? They tested the hearing of all the pupils in three public schools in New York City and one in Poughkeepsie. They found that about one out of every seven pupils was partially deaf. Since there are twenty-four million school children in the country they arrived at three million as the number of partially deaf ones by applying the figures they got from these four New York schools.

In their testing they determined the degree of deafness and in a general way the cause. In a group of 61 it was found that seven had deafness due to disease of the nerve of hearing. The most frequent cause of partial deafness was suppurating ears, also called discharging ears, ear abscess and earache. Next in frequency came catarrhal inflammation of the middle ear. Some were hard of hearing because they had had mastoid abscesses; some because of foreign bodies in the ear, including impacted wax.

It is important to know which children do not hear well for several reasons. A partially deaf child may be classed as feebleminded, or as a poor student, when the only trouble is that he does not hear the other children recite, or does not know what the teacher is saying. If one-seventh of the pupils hear poorly, that fact must have some effect on the progress of the class in their books. Poor hearing has some effect on attention, behavior, and deportment.

It is also important to know which children are partially deaf because of what can be done for the deaf child. Operation on tonsils and adenoids will cure the deafness in some cases and improve the hearing considerably in others. The discharging ears can be cured and should be. A little supervised care at home will cure many cases. Physicians can cure the others.

Those that cannot be cured should be taught lip reading. Some should be fitted with hearing aids. Special classes should be organized for some of them and, finally, if the school can do nothing else, the teacher can at least put the partially deaf in the "baldhead" row.

BABY FED TOO MUCH.

Mrs. H. T. N. writes: What is the probable cause of a month old baby vomiting up great quantities of curdled milk from 15 minutes to 2 hours after nursing? He vomits all of it at one time and seems content for a while; but he will be hungry before his next nursing hour.

He nurses three minutes from one breast and three from the other, at 2½ hour intervals. He has a great deal of gas on his stomach. His bowels move too frequently and contain a great deal of curdled milk, some of which is as large as the end of the little finger.

For the first 3½ or 5 weeks he vomited a great deal, but not curdled milk, and his bowels did not contain curdled milk. Sometimes he retains his meals and again he seems uncomfortable until he vomits.

REPLY.

My guess is that you are feeding your baby too much; that he overfills his stomach and the surplus is returned. All you need do is to feed him less.

He may have a mild case of pylorospasm. If so, he may need a little atropine. Let your doctor decide that.

How about weight? That is the crucial point in decision.

Look for an article on this subject now in the cooler.

GETTING RID OF THE VOLSTEAD ACT.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 14.—Your editorial "Get Rid of the Volstead Act," is sound advice, but what are you and the other American newspapers doing to get rid of the Volstead act?

How do you suppose the U. S. government put over the Liberty loans? By sending out on the road experienced 4 minute men, poster advertising, direct contact work in each town and village. Hundreds of new manufacturers have found this the only way to get public opinion on their side of the fence, to buy their new line of goods. What is needed is about 50 or more experienced traveling promotion men covering the entire country for six months or more, with a definite working plan against the Volstead act.

There are plenty of Pullman smoking car debaters, including, Dr. Butler, against the Volstead act, but at the end of the trip, this effort is wasted.

The American Hotel association could afford to underwrite the expenses of a proposition of this kind, as they are fully acquainted with the work of the American traveling men. C. E. JONES.

A COMMUTER'S SUGGESTION.

Chicago, April 15.—The recent agitation for a Northwestern station at Cicero avenue should revive the demand for one at Western avenue. It is unjustified to make commuters employed on the west side spend time and carfare to reach Kedzie avenue which is more than three miles from the Canal street terminal.

The stop at Keeler avenue is entirely useless for the paying patrons of the road, but one at Western avenue would be of great help to many and should be given careful consideration.

ELMHURST COMMUTER.

CIVIL WAR PENSIONS.

Dowagiac, Mich., April 14.—The legislature of Arkansas has authorized a monthly payment of $50 to every confederate soldier and widow registering from that state. Only recently the Coolidge administration refused to do as much for the federal soldiers and widows in spite of the fact that Uncle Sam is rolling in prosperity and wealth, with the most stupendous income in all history. There would be no rich and powerful United States today had not the boys in blue rushed to their country's aid in the hour of her greatest peril and saved her from perishing from the earth.

"How soon we are forgotten when we are gone," mused Rip Van Winkle when he returned to his little sleepy Catskill village after his twenty years' sleep up in the mountains.

GOLF IN THE FOREST PRESERVES.

Chicago, April 14.—Despite the fact that seventy-five cents instead of one dollar will be the fee at our forest preserve golf courses, I would like to point out that this is considerably more than is charged by the so-called daily fee courses. The seventy-five cents to be charged by Edgebrook, for instance, will be for eighteen holes of golf, and if you play any more you must pay again. But the one dollar charged [illegible] the daily fee courses on week days [illegible] for all day. My observation has been that practically everybody plays thirty-six holes, while many go forty-five. Thus we see that our tax-supported courses actually charge more than the daily fee courses, which pay taxes. The county treasury would be enriched, and the golfer would get cheaper exercise if the forest preserve courses were leased out to private parties. T. R. H.

BURNING THE CORN BORER.

Chicago, April 12.—The foot-and-mouth disease outbreak, referred to in Mr. Guard in his letter appearing in the April 9th issue, is not at all comparable with the European corn borer menace, and his statements concerning the method of handling that disease are not altogether accurate.

In the first place, the agricultural engineers had nothing whatever to do with the campaign. They were not consulted and expressed no opinion. It was a matter for the federal and state veterinarians to handle and they proved very competent in their work, as we all know. However, they had a very simple task, compared with that of eradicating the European corn borer. If the germ of the foot-and-mouth disease had attacked not only cattle, but all other domestic animals and wild animals had been immune to contact disinfectants and able to fly through the air for a distance of 25 miles in seeking a new point of attack, besides being able to seek a safe shelter and live for months exposed to climatic extremes of heat and cold, the disease would never have been stamped out with any of the methods employed then, or since made available.

Mr. Guard's suggestion that the borer be destroyed by fire is by no means a new one. Burning was one of the first methods tried and has probably been practiced over a larger area than any other control method. The results have proved that it is not only ineffectual but more expensive than several other methods which are not dependent on dry weather. The state and federal entomologists who have studied the borer for years are almost unanimously agreed, on the basis of their practical experience in the field, that fire will be of only minor help in the battle.

Mr. Guard's statement that if the borer can be cremated in every field, except the vineyards of New York, he will not worry, may be facetious, but it is not a logical argument, for if the borer cannot be stamped out completely, both in the United States and Canada, from whence it infested this country, any such program as he proposes would be money thrown away. If any borers are allowed to remain in New York or Canada it would be only a matter of a few years until the present infestation would be duplicated.

If Mr. Guard would visit the Ohio corn fields this week, which I left yesterday, and attempt to burn up every particle of fodder or weeds which can harbor a borer, he would not need to be told that burning is impracticable—he would find it out for himself.

JAPANESE BANK CRISIS BLAMED TO SPECULATORS

Moratorium Eases Tension on Finance.

(Copyright: 1927: By The New York Times.)

TOKIO, Japan, April 23.—Japanese clearing houses will reopen on Monday, but during the next three weeks, during the moratorium, they will not collect interest due or pay interest on deposits. Foreign exchange banks are authorized to continue foreign business, as trade must be financed. Tokio postal savings deposits on Friday totaled more than 14,000,000 yen [$7,000,000] or twenty-six times the normal daily average.

Nervousness in business circles has abated now that the moratorium has arrested the landslide. The compelling reason for the moratorium was the need for time. The privy council's rejection of former Premier Wakatsuki's plan was read as an abrogation of the government's promise to stand by th banks. The panic psychology came into operation, and bank runs started all over the country.

The Bank of Japan refused to modify its strict regulation requiring security of a 40 per cent margin on selling prices of stocks and 20 per cent on government bonds. As the pressure increased there was danger the banks might be forced to throw their securities onto the market.

Blame Speculators for Panic.

It is strongly suggested that the government's political opponents or stock market manipulators stimulated the public alarm, and several cases where people received telephone messages from certain banks have been authenticated. But whatever the extent of this alleged interference may be, public nervousness was becoming uncontrollable from perfectly natural causes.

The government's financial proposals will almost certainly not be opposed in the special diet session which convenes May 3, but if the session goes on to other business opposition will blow off steam over the China policy foreshadowed in Premier Tanaka's statement. To threats of a no confidence resolution from the opposition government politicians reply with threats of dissolution, but neither side is anxious to face the electors. Most of the present talk is bluff.

Somewhat singular statements are made in circles usually well informed that Russia understands and does not object to Baron Tanaka's references to communists. The Osaka Asahi and the Tokio Asahi, two of the most influential newspapers in Japan, have not lost any time in warning Tanaka against any change in China policy.

Will Japan Cooperate?

The Osaka Asahi asks whether the premier means Japan should join Britain in sending troops or should cooperate with the United States and Britain. It points out Tanaka's words are vague and suggests he only means to complain that Shidehara's protective measures were inadequate.

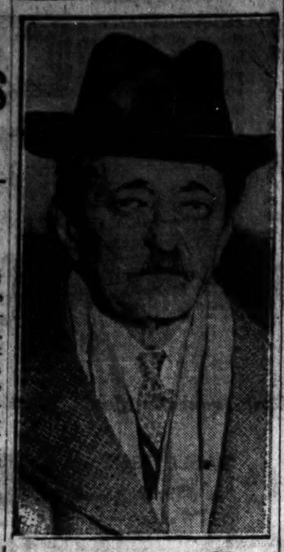
ENVOY HERE



CHARLES MacVEAGH.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

MacVEAGH, ENVOY TO JAPAN, VISITS HIS COUSIN HERE

Charles MacVeagh, United States ambassador to Japan, arrived here yesterday morning, and visited his cousin, Eames MacVeagh, before leaving for Washington.

Mr. MacVeagh said his trip is due to personal affairs and had nothing to do with diplomatic matters. He will return to Tokio in six weeks.

"The financial situation in Japan," Mr. MacVeagh said, "is very serious, but not hopeless. It is a result of the earthquake of 1922, when large banks lost heavily. But the Japanese are a resourceful people and will recover, I am certain. The Chinese situation is not a contributing cause."

SIR HENRY LUNN SEES MENACE IN YANK DIVORCES

Bluntly and frankly, Sir Henry Lunn, English multimillionaire, who arrived here yesterday to look after his philanthropic interests, criticized certain American failings.

This country's increasing tendency toward divorce, he said, is awakening real concern in England.

"Sooner or later such a condition can only break down family life. Marriage in America has come to be looked on as a form of commercial contract."

The multimillionaire, who was once a Methodist missionary in India, when asked what he thought of the Rev. J. Frank Norris of Fort Worth and Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, said he considered them "unbearable."

This morning Sir Henry will speak at the Church of the Atonement, Kenmore and Ardmore avenues. Clifford W. Barnes, president of the Sunday Evening club, will be the toastmaster at a dinner to be given for him tomorrow at the University club.

Drives Through Garage Wall When He's Held Up

Morris Bass of 1817 South Harding avenue became so flustered late last night at the sight of four armed men who leaped on the running board of his car, which he was putting in a garage in the rear of his home, that he drove the machine through the garage wall into his yard. The bandits were scraped off, but followed through the breach, firing, and took $800 from him.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OSLO, Norway, April 23.—A report from King's bay, Spitzbergen, says an explosion in a coal mine has killed 104 Norwegian workers and injured many.

ITALY MAY BAN "PAGAN" MOVIES OF HOLLYWOOD

ROME, April 23.—(AP)—The "pagan pomps" of Hollywood's movies and the pulsating strains of New York's song hits are scheduled for places alongside American jazz dancing on the list of diversions which may be prohibited in Rome on the ground that they are incentives to immorality.

A new plan, sponsored by reformers here with a strong following in the Vatican and said to be already in the hands of the Fascist authorities, calls for the closing of all music halls and vaudeville houses where the Roman population goes to hear the rhythms of American musical comedy hits. It also provides for a large reduction in the number of movie houses—now 3,000 throughout Italy—and the application to those remaining in Rome of standards of morality even stricter than those for the rest of Italy, by a new censorship law.

The latter provision has been demanded for a fortnight by means of a series of strong editorials in the columns of the Vatican's official newspaper, Osservatore Romano.

ANOTHER LAKE SHIP AGROUND; TUG TO RESCUE

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., April 23.—[Special.]—The passenger steamer Athabasca, loaded with flour from Fort William, today went aground on Cedar Point, 15 miles above this city. The tug Alabama has gone to her rescue.

The steamer Filbert of the Pittsburgh Steamship company fleet is badly damaged by its crash Thursday on the shoals in the Straits of Mackinac, and is being worked on by the tug General and a lighter.

The tug Illinois and lighter Reliance have gone to the steamer Drumahoe, which grounded Thursday in a snowstorm on Isle Parisienne. The steamer Pathfinder, which grounded on Lansing shoals, in the Mackinac straits district, was released Friday.

Stabbed When He Grabs Negro Burglar in Home

Hyde Park police last night took Stephen Toth, 45, owner of a flat building at 5751 Drexel avenue, to the Chicago hospital after he had been stabbed three times in the chest by a Negro burglar whom he seized and tried to overpower. Toth, on returning home, surprised the burglar in his kitchen. His condition was reported serious.

"Hursen" Funerals Set the Mark

The depth of one's last measure of devotion is shown by elegance. There is no other place in all America where elegance is brought to such a measure of perfection, in all that pertains to funerals, as at "Hursen's."

In each of Hursen's three funeral-homes on the North, South and West sides, reign the spirit, heart-warming environment of home itself. This is why so many prefer to have funerals conducted at "Hursen's" instead of at home. At these Hursen "funeral-homes" there are secluded, spacious rooms for the use of families, separate meeting-rooms for societies, ritual-homes, and the finest chapels in America.

"Hursen" funerals set the mark for beauty and elegance. There is no finer or more elegant automobile equipment for funerals in this country than Hursen automobiles for passengers and the new Hursen "limousine-hearses." The low cost of "Hursen" funerals is one of the principal features of "Hursen" funerals. This cost is only a fraction of the charges usually made elsewhere. Call Hursen, of course!

Imagine the famous Playboy at only $1545!

The Jordan has always represented quality.

Now at new reduced prices, but with no change in quality, it is the most unusual dollar for dollar value yet offered in a motor car.

Thousands of new Jordan owners will tell you that.

They are fascinated by the smoothness, and the power of the motor.

They are thrilled at its get-away and speed.

They are pleased with its economy—and its freedom from the repair shop.

They like its easy lounging comfort, perfect balance—and steadiness at speeds they wouldn't dare to drive in an ordinary car.

They have a feeling of pride in the trim, sleek lines, the striking colors—the indication of Jordan quality in every detail.

Let us send you a car so you may drive it yourself—so you may check it according to your standards, however severe.

Then let us give you a list of Jordan owners. Call as many of them as you choose and ask them one question of just six words—"How do you like your Jordan?"

That question favorably answered hundreds of times a day in all parts of the country, has been responsible for the steady growth of the Jordan Company—and the permanent position of the Eight as the top of the Jordan line.

MRS. SNYDER AND GRAY WILL FACE JURY TOMORROW

Each Blames Other for Editor's Murder.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—An empty, haunted Queens county courtroom was scrubbed clean today to make ready for the sordid Snyder-Gray murder trial, the taint of which already has seeped through dingy windows to wither the grassy lawn outside. Twelve men, drawn from peaceful walks, were ill at ease as they took up their new occupation of death dealing, and a tired judge retired to his Long Island home to seek forgetfulness among his books and blooded dogs.

Inside the dark jail, two former lovers sat in cells far apart, with only their thoughts to keep them company. The man, quaking in self-confessed sin, was in direct contrast to the woman, who sought relaxation that she might better steel herself to face "her public" Monday morning.

Ruin Seizes Suburban Home.

A few miles away a pretty little suburban cottage rapidly was taking on the neglected air that only a deserted home displays. Its windows were drawn and outside rank weeds, spurred on by spring showers, were choking the life from the flowers once so carefully cultivated.

Ruth Snyder, the sinful suburbanite, and Judd Gray, her sex-tied companion in sin, the pair of whom the state says slew the husband Albert for lust and a bag of insurance gold that they might go away together, have departed on their journey—but not the one they planned.

Meanwhile the three sides of the pointed triangle that surrounds the revolting crime are being hammered at by three separate groups of lawyers. Counsel for the widow are seeking to push in the barriers that hem Judd Gray so that the blonde housewife who loved Broadway better than country lanes may crawl free even though flayed by the jagged edges of the triangle.

Counsel for the wilted corset salesman are pushing back with the hope that Gray's own wall will crush Ruth Snyder as they say she crushed him into submission with the weight of passion.

The state, representing the slain art editor whom Judd confesses they turned on his one sound ear the better to murder him, is striving to keep intact the walls that bear down on the bungling slayers.

For the next two weeks to come the concern of these three groups will be altogether with the matter of saving or destroying two lives for the good of the social order, in accordance with the demands of the law. Theirs will be the task of producing character witness, opposing character witness, confessions and refuted confessions and marshaling a long array of evidence and counter evidence that the ultimate decision may be made by twelve kindly faced men in the jury box.

District Attorney Newcombe today went over the opening address, which he is to deliver Monday. In it he will rehearse the scheming the state alleges took place, the planning that went before the crime, the bungling staging of a fake burglary, the framing of an alibi for Gray and the woman's plotting to have her husband increase his life insurance from $10,000 to $52,000 with a double indemnity clause for violent death.

Together the pair committed first degree murder, he will say, and together they should be punished.

The penalty is death in the electric chair for Ruth Snyder as well as Judd Gray, for there is no double standard in the law.

That Icy Eyed Woman.

Strange as it may seem the blonde widow's defense will strive to show that she tried to save her husband from the jackal Gray. They will attempt to prove that this icy eyed woman grew tender at the last moment and actually struggled with Gray and begged him not to strike Snyder, but that he intimidated her by threats of death from interfering with him and subsequently compelled her to help him try to cover up his guilt.

Just how they will account for her actions on the morning of March 20 when she was found lying on the floor bound in picture wire another strand of which was around her dead husband's neck was not divulged. Should her counsel succeed in erecting this defense then the gallivanting housewife would be in the position of an accomplice of Gray before the killing and after the killing but not in the killing itself.

The law says that a plotter who withdraws from a conspiracy before the commission of a crime is not subject to punishment.

But Judd Gray will have to face his former friends whom he tricked into aiding him in establishing an alibi at Syracuse. He will be confronted by the druggist who sold him the picture wire and chloroform, and his blood stained vest will be waved before his eyes.

His lawyers are counting on his futile appearance to pull him through and at least allow him to escape the chair. They will picture him as an easy tool in the hands of the unperturbed blonde who sits across the counsel table from him, cool and smilingly serene.

Anyhow, the freshly scrubbed Long Island City courtroom will become contaminated next week with the cruel details of a revolting murder, and Judd and Ruth may go "up the river" together, after all.

Students Dig Into Indian Mounds

ROAR OF PROTEST GREETS BERTEAU AVE. SEWER COST

Residents Up in Arms Over Assessments.

Residents of a large part of two wards, the Fortieth and Forty-first, are up in arms against construction of the proposed Berteau avenue sewer system which is on hearing April 28 in the county court. This sewer, costing an estimated $2,740,000, extends from the north branch of the river westward to Dunning in Berteau avenue, then north in Austin avenue to Higgins road, extending northwest to the city limits at Nagle avenue. At its mouth the sewer is 14½ by 10½ feet and tapers down to a diameter of 2½ feet.

The assessed district extends westward from the river between approximately Wilson avenue on the north and Grace street on the south to Austin avenue, where the strip turns north and is about of the same width. To pay the cost, 16,059 property owners have been asked to contribute their share and the state $310,000 because of the facilities supplied the state hospital at Dunning.

Protest Meetings Held.

In the old sewage drainage district certain property is assessed $3.07 per front foot and other property $5.07. In the new drainage district the assessment is $7.05 for direct benefits and $4.56 for indirect benefits. On Higgins road the tax is $7.50 per foot on one side and $5 on the other.

Sundry charges were made at a meeting held at 3966 Milwaukee avenue on Wednesday night, at meetings held at Independence Park hall and Mayfair Bank hall, on Monday evening, and at still a larger meeting held Friday night at the Schurz High school.

The charges made by the speakers were that the cost is excessive and the proposed assessments exorbitant; that no notice was received regarding the contemplated improvement; that the only notice received was April 11, after the election, when the assessment was in court for confirmation; that the additional sewer is not needed; that it was not backed by the aldermen of the ward and that the spreading of the assessment is inequitable.

City Contends Sewer Is Needed.

The board of local improvements asserts it can show by complaints that, flooded basements, streets, and property prove the need of the sewer. It is admitted that the cost is now about twice as much as in 1917 and 1918, when the department proposed to construct a relief sewer for this district but was blocked by the property owners.

The department says that notice was sent to 820 property owners—all having land abutting the streets in which the sewer will be placed, as the law requires. There are 16,059 persons called upon to pay for the sewer, but the law does not require that 15,239 of these be sent notice of the preliminary hearing.

Any specific complaints of inequity of assessment will be considered carefully. It is asserted that aldermen of both wards attended the public hearing on the sewer and that neither of them made protest, while one of them spoke for the drain. It is claimed that many property owners are pleading for the sewer. The battle will come in court Thursday.

STEALS DOCTOR'S AUTO.

John Turner, 2020 West 23d street, night attendant at the Garland garage, 2356 North Clark street, was confronted early yesterday morning by an armed robber who obtained from him a Cadillac coupe, the property of Dr. Russell Snell, 2309 Commonwealth avenue.

LATVIA SEEKS TO WIN RUSS TRADE BY NEW TREATY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 23.—Latvia, formerly the third most important industry and trade district of Russia, is planning a close economic union with the country which ruled it for 200 years. Foreign Minister Felix Cielens announced today that a commission will leave next week for Moscow to negotiate a trade treaty which will give Russia many privileges in Latvia.

Provided a treaty is concluded, the United States may lose large orders for grain, sugar, flour, lard, and oil products which Latvia has been importing since the revolution.

Both Latvian industry and agriculture are expected to benefit by the treaty, M. Cielens states. He hopes the commission will obtain a bolshevik guarantee to place a fixed quantity of orders for Latvian exports. Reduced Russian duties also will be sought. Soviet syndicates and trusts, which trade here under protection of the soviet trade delegation and undersell private firms, must incorporate under the Latvian laws and be subject to the taxes, according to the new Latvian plan.

Wife Forced to Menial Chores, She Says; Sues

That she was compelled to perform menial household tasks unbecoming to the wife of a man of means was the complaint of Mrs. Ruth Dow White of the Congress hotel, in her suit for divorce filed in the Superior court yesterday against Stamford White, advertising man. The bill also accuses White of hectoring his wife with the accusation that she married him for his money. Mrs. White asks alimony of $300 a month and $100 more for the support of their three children.

SUCCESS.

To win what the world calls success, a man must give without stint of his efforts. He must attend within reason strictly to his business and he must possess the ability to keep just a step ahead of the times. He must be able, not only to conceive an idea or an ideal, but to carry it forward to a successful, practical conclusion.

If a business is to succeed, it likewise must work without stint, to give an honest return for each dollar left with it by its customers.

$3,000,000 FIRE DESTROYS GREAT DETROIT PLANT

Workmen Flee Blaze After Blasts; 2 Known Dead.

Detroit, Mich., April 23.—(AP)—With two known dead and the death of some 28 others in hospitals expected, the black and smoldering ruins of a new five story building of the Briggs Manufacturing company, tonight held the solution of whether others met death in a fire, kindled by a series of explosions which destroyed the structure early today. The loss was estimated at $3,000,000.

Estimates of the number of dead ran as high as 100, although J. W. Carter, head of the service department, announced late today that a check of the employment records accounted for all the 200 men employed in the burned building. More than 2,500 are employed in all departments of the plant, an automobile body firm, occupying several buildings.

Reports Are Conflicting.

Early reports of Charles T. Earl, a deputy coroner, who visited the scene of the tragedy, were that from 50 to 100 men were killed. Firemen placed the number at 20, but Thomas J. O'Grady, deputy superintendent of police, refused to set a figure. He said it probably would be several days before search could be made for any bodies that may remain in the ruins. The number of injured was estimated unofficially at 100 or more. One fireman was temporarily overcome.

The fire originated on the third floor of the building after the first blast in the painting department. Workers in other parts of the building filed out calmly when a fire alarm sounded. Several workers on the third floor, including three women, were rescued by a squad led by Edward Stencen, 26, a foreman.

Cause is Undetermined.

Prosecutor Robert M. Toms of Wayne county, announced late today that his office would investigate immediately with a view of determining if any criminal responsibility existed.

The cause of the explosion had not been determined. John French, president of the company, said the blasts might have been caused by the breaking of an incandescent light bulb. The materials used in the paint department, he explained, are highly inflammable and all new workmen are instructed to exercise extraordinary care. He said the building was equipped with a sprinkler system but that it apparently was disabled by the explosion.

ILL, HE KILLS SELF.

Rhinelander, Wis., April 23.—While despondent because of illness Diedrich Wierdemann, 50, who lived alone on a farm near Murry, killed himself with a shotgun.

ITALY DEPORTS MASONIC LEADER FOR PART IN PLOT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 23.—With the arrest and immediate deportation for five years of Domizio Torrigiani, former grand master of Italy's Grand Orient lodge of Masons, another step against persons involved in the attempt on Premier Mussolini's life on Nov. 4, 1925, has been taken.

Sig. Torrigiani was arrested today, after former Deputy Tito Zaniboni and Gen. Luigi Capello, principals in the attempted murder of the Italian dictator, had been sentenced yesterday to thirty years' imprisonment. The locality to which Sig. Torrigiani has been transferred so far is not known. Owing to the seriousness of the charges against him he probably will be deported to one of the islands of the Tyrrhenian sea.

The Rome papers unanimously approve the measure, which, although expected, after the results of the Zaniboni trial, created a sensation. The semi-official Tribuna charges the Grand Orient Masonic organization with responsibility not only for the attempted murder, but with creating alleged foreign hostility to the Fascist régime.

STUDENT AUTOS MAY BE BARRED AT MICHIGAN U.

1 Death, 4 Hurt in Crash Appall Regents.

Ann Arbor, Mich., April 23.—[Special.]—Indication that the University of Michigan soon will join the ranks of schools banning the use of automobiles by undergraduates is seen as the result of action taken by the board of regents here tonight.

The discussion of the question resulted from an accident here at 2 o'clock Thursday morning, when six students in a roadster collided with a truck, one being killed and four seriously injured, one of whom is expected to die.

Views of Regents.

The following statement was given out by President Clarence Cook Little:

"The recent ghastly automobile accident resulting in the death of one student and the serious injury of three others—one perhaps fatally—was discussed at a meeting of the board of regents. Coming as it does as the culmination of a series of accidents stretching over several years and involving loss of students' lives, the board felt that the situation was extremely grave.

"The board felt also that the present situation is unsatisfactory in that the existing rules are not being enforced and probably are not possible of enforcement.

"It therefore has under consideration for the May meeting further restrictive action of a comprehensive nature which, if taken, will be solely to protect the lives of undergraduates and other students of the university."

Restrict Use of Cars.

The present rulings at Michigan restrict the use of cars to juniors and seniors whose scholastic average is satisfactory and are enforced by a committee composed of six students and two members of the faculty.

ESCAPE FOILED

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Mrs. Helen Craig, 35, of 745 North Michigan avenue, thought to elude Sergt. Philip Casson of the detective bureau, who was on her trail yesterday, by stepping into an automatic elevator in her apartment house. Sergt. Casson, however, switched off the current and arrested Mrs. Craig in the car, which had stopped between two floors. At the detective bureau she was accused of passing a bad check on the A. B. T. gift shop in the Railway Exchange building.

$7,500,000 SUIT IS AFTERMATH OF BIG FILM DEAL

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Out of one of the biggest deals ever made in the motion picture industry there grew today a $7,500,000 suit by Zack M. Harris, theater owner, against the Cinema Corporation of America and the Producers' Distributing corporation.

The suit was filed in Supreme court, and is based on the assertion of Harris that he negotiated the recent deal by which for the next fifteen years the Keith-Albee and Orpheum vandeville circuits will exhibit the films of Cecil B. De Mille.

Harris estimates that this deal will bring the Cinema corporation, De Mille's company, $75,000,000 gross returns during fifteen years, and he demands 10 per cent commission.

The soft drink parlor formerly operated by Representative Thomas Curran as a saloon in pre-prohibition days was one of the eight places against which Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson issued temporary injunctions yesterday.

The seven other owners and places restrained are: James Dercola, 611 Aberdeen street; Contilio Lucarisi, 5019 Buffalo avenue; Homer West, 5132 South Dearborn street; George Graham, Forest Gardens, Evergreen Park, Ill.; Hugo W. Ogren, 1224 North Irving avenue; Joseph Martins, 5436 Gilbert court, and Lilian Lewin's L. & B. Pharmacy, 5500 Lake Park avenue.

Fines of $10 and costs were imposed by Judge Samuel Heller on three men yesterday when they were unable to explain why they had a crowbar, a flashlight, and pipecutter in their automobile. They are Joseph Barcia, 18 years old, 958 North Hamlin avenue; Louis Dufano, 30, of 906 South Morgan street, and Guy Podito, 35, of 1302 Oregon street.

Boy, 10, Armed with Pliers, Goes to See Joliet Convicts

Dressed in cowboy garb, Robert Scott, 10 years old, left his home at 6511 South Halsted street yesterday and made his way to Joliet, where the police took charge of him. He asserted that he only wanted to have a look at the penitentiary. He carried a pair of pliers, which he explained he intended to use to defend himself if any of the prisoners broke out and molested him.

NASH
Leads the World in Motor Car Value

You can see why Nash has extra power

The extra power that makes Nash a more capable car to drive, particularly on the hills or in dense traffic, is directly due to extra-efficient design.

The Nash Straight Line Drive, for instance, diagrammed above.

Nash power flows directly from the engine to the rear axle in a straight line. There are no angles along the route to waste energy, as there would be if the motor were mounted parallel to the frame, as the ordinary motor is.

The Straight Line Drive accounts in part for Nash aggressiveness—for the powerful pick-up at low speeds (where you need it most). You will always notice it is the Nash that gets away soonest when the traffic starts.

The Straight Line Drive also avoids wear on the universal joints, and thereby prevents noise and looseness.

Of course, it takes a little longer and costs more to build Nash this better way—

—But any Nash owner will tell you it makes a lot of difference in the results he gets.

Drive a Nash, before you decide which car to buy!

Harry Hartz Proved It!

After setting
ten new world records in The Commander
America's champion race driver says:

5,000 miles in less than 5,000 minutes

IN a sensational test made at Culver City, California, under the auspices of the American Automobile Association, The Commander, a strictly stock enclosed car, ran 5,000 miles in 4,909 minutes, total elapsed time—better than mile-a-minute speed for 81 consecutive hours and 49 minutes—the fastest speed for the farthest distance ever attained by any stock car!

HARRY HARTZ,
America's Champion race driver

Repairs Negligible

This is equivalent in stress and strain to at least 25,000 miles of ordinary driving. Yet in establishing this and nine intervening world records, the only mechanical repairs necessary on The Commander were three grease cups (damaged by hasty greasing), and one spark plug.

Champion Driver Praises Champion Car

Harry Hartz had bought a Commander Victoria for his personal car prior to his participation in the establishment of ten new world records. So there is real knowledge back of his statement that The Studebaker Commander will "maintain any given speed up to sixty-five miles per hour, longer, more smoothly and at less expense per hour traveled for gasoline, oil and repairs than any other stock automobile now being built in the United States."

Drive Commander Yourself

To know the real thrill of Studebaker Big Six performance, its flashing speed, giant power, and finger-tip ease of handling, you must drive a Commander yourself. Only with your own hands on the wheel, your own foot on the throttle, can you fully appreciate why the Studebaker Big Six now far out-sells the combined totals of all other cars in the world of equal or greater rated horsepower—why we say and how we prove that The Commander will out-perform and out-live any other car, six or eight, selling for less than $2500.

An exact duplicate of the champion Commander is waiting for you at our showroom. See it—drive it—today.

JAPANESE DROP STRINGS ON PACT TO LIMIT ARMS

Tell League They Will Agree to Cuts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, April 23.—With Lord Robert Cecil and M. Paul-Boncour, chief delegates from Great Britain and France, still absent from the league of nations preparatory disarmament commission, the Japanese today took their first step to remove the wholesale incumbering with reservations of the proposals for limitation of armaments.

Baron Saito announced Tokio has instructed him to withdraw three important reservations to the proposed treaty in the interests of conciliation.

Japan thus accepted the limitation of naval effectives, making unanimous the agreement on that important feature. She also accepted the limitation of aircraft carrier warships and agreed to limit the air services through numbers and the aggregate motor power. The Japanese specified, however, that no distinction should be made between officers and men and there should be no comparison of effectives and the number of ships.

Although it has not finished the first reading of the draft of the treaty, the preparatory commission expects to conclude the session this coming week. It will wind up the discussion on international control Monday and begin drafting the report to the council.

The committee named to prepare a pact for control of the private manufacture of arms plans to conclude its labors Monday and report to the council the refusal of Italy and Japan to accept the American demands for publicity on government as well as private manufacture.

ELOPEMENT ENDS IN CELL

MISS OLIVE SCHICK.

EDWARD JONES.
[TRIBUNE Photos.]

SEIZE AN EX-COP ELOPING WITH STEPDAUGHTER

Edward Jones, 36, formerly a policeman in New York City, was arrested here yesterday in company with his 19 year old stepdaughter, Miss Olive Schick, after an elopement from their home at Mamoeth, Long Island, N. Y., last Monday. On complaint of Mrs. Katherine Schick Jones, mother of the girl, they are being held at the detective bureau for New York authorities.

Sergt. Thomas Alcock of the detective bureau took them into custody at Wacker drive and North Wabash avenue yesterday, as they were on their way to the Pure Oil building to cash a bond to obtain funds with which to be married.

The girl, a brunette, attractive and well dressed, said she had been in love with her stepfather for four years. He and her mother were married eight years ago and have a nineteen months old daughter.

U. S. NAVY NEEDS MORE CRUISERS, EXPERT PLEADS

Warns Our Destroyers Are Out of Date.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Cruiser equality with Great Britain and the modernization of the United States destroyer fleet are urged by Lieutenant Commander H. H. Frost of the bureau of navigation of the navy department in an article appearing in this week's issue of the Army and Navy Journal.

"It is well known that we have only ten first line cruisers to thirty-nine British and nineteen Japanese vessels of that important type," Mr. Frost says. "This weakness means not only an inferiority in cruisers but it affects the operation of all other types of naval craft. Battleships, battle cruisers, light cruisers, destroyers, submarines, and aircraft carriers are the six ingredients which, united in the proper proportions, make up the power of a modern fleet.

Compared to Army Weakness.

"We have no battle cruisers and very few light cruisers. This is almost as bad as an army commencing a campaign without tanks and only a few cannon—deficiencies which would limit the value of its infantry and cavalry.

"The completion of the eight cruisers now started will, in time, help this situation, but there is no use disguising the fact that we require at least ten more, assuming that in the coming Geneva conference the other powers can be induced to cease the laying down of new keels. We require an absolute equality with Great Britain in cruiser tonnage.

"Our next great material need is modernization, repair, and equipment of our destroyers, of which not fewer than 164 are tied up at Philadelphia and San Diego. These vessels were placed out of commission five years ago and in their present unsatisfactory condition would not be available for serving until long after an emergency developed.

Personnel Far Below Par.

"Personnel is an element of naval power equally important as ships and their equipment. Our vessels now in full commission today lack about 2,500 men of the smallest number considered essential for even peace time operation.

"We are considerably short of the 5-5-3 ratio in regular enlisted personnel; the actual ratios are: United States, 5.00; British empire, 5.79; Japan, 4.12. This means that the British and Japanese can match us in vessels in full commission on the 5-5-3 basis and, in addition, can maintain all their remaining vessels of naval value in commission with partial crews while we have to lay up 164 destroyers and light mine layers without personnel."

SIXTH SUIT IS FILED IN COLES MARITAL TANGLE

Domestic strife of Dr. Henry D. Coles, physician and surgeon, 25 East Washington street, and Dr. Ethel W. Coles, a dentist residing in the Webster hotel, was the subject of another suit filed Friday in Pittsburgh, according to dispatches.

The new litigation was brought by the husband. It asks $100,000 from his brothers-in-law, Lester, Samuel and Jacob Jacobson, all Pittsburgh business men, on the charge that they alienated the affections of his wife.

This is the sixth suit to be brought as an outgrowth of the marital troubles of the roupls.

Cost of Standing Army Puts Lithuania on Road to Ruin

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, Latvia, April 23.—Lithuania's claim to the Vilna territory, which was seized by the Poles in 1920, resulting in an unofficial state of war between the two countries for the last seven years, may prove to be Lithuania's ruin, according to figures published by the ministry of the interior today. These show the heavy migration of Lithuanian peasants abroad.

Since the first of the year the steamship and immigration offices at Kovno have been crowded. More than 7,000 persons have left the country since Jan. 1, and the ministry estimates a total of 30,000 will leave during the year.

The population of Lithuania is approximately 1,700,000 and it is one of the poorest countries in Europe. Nevertheless, the government is maintaining an army of more than 20,000, which is stationed along the Vilna frontier, and has repulsed all efforts to settle the conflict with Poland.

Flee Costs of War.

Lithuania itself suffered far more than Belgium during the world war and the birth of the country did not improve the condition of the inhabitants of this territory. The expensive unofficial war with Poland—morally supported by the bolsheviks, who are the only people of Europe recognizing Lithuania's claim to Vilna—has further impoverished the country, and the peasants are fleeing to Canada, South America and other lands, searching for economic stability, peace, security and low taxes.

The democratic government in the form of the French parliamentary system also proved a failure and last week the dictator-president, Anthony Smetona, dissolved parliament. He announced that before new elections are held drastic changes will be made in the constitution, giving the president and cabinet more powers and curbing the rights of minority groups of Jews, Poles and Germans, whom the Lithuanians blame for the collapse of the government.

Means Heavy Loss in Wealth.

The mass migration of Lithuania's peasants is costing the country yearly a loss of 150,000,000 lits in productive labor (about $15,000,000), since each emigrant is taking approximately 1,000 lits. Lithuanian statesmen discussing the problem now propose to divert some of this money to the state treasury by founding a government fleet of passenger steamers. This project has been indorsed by the minister of the interior, M. Mustelkis, who seeks to control emigration.

The Lithuanian government is proud of the fact that one-third of the Lithuanian race—approximately 800,000—at present are living in the United States. Only the stringent immigration law has prevented the remaining two-thirds from joining their relatives. The American consulate at Kovno has applications for visas sufficient to fill the Lithuanian quota for thirty-five years.

Baltic diplomats, who have been fruitlessly endeavoring to settle the Polish-Lithuanian war, are viewing the serious economic plight of the country as a hopeful sign that the Kovno government will come to its senses and inaugurate normal conditions.

Dodge Runs Away to Avoid Apologizing to Reporter

San Francisco, Cal., April 23.—(AP)—Horace Dodge, Detroit automobile millionaire, who faced two counts of assault and battery as a result of a fistic encounter with newspaper men here yesterday, did not appear in court when his case was called today. Dodge had promised an apology for his part in the encounter, but the apology was not forthcoming when the court, A. J. Coogan, arrived in court. Counsel said Dodge telephoned him that he "was on his way out of the state" and had no apology to make.

Miss MARY BROWN WARBURTON

granddaughter of the late John Wanamaker says:

"With its quaint spindles it just suits my room"

"IN our Palm Beach house," says Miss Mary Brown Warburton, "my furniture is odd pieces I have picked up at home and abroad. My little Simmons Bed, with its quaint spindles and soft brown walnut finish, just suits my room. Its charming simplicity and good taste are in harmony with all the rest of my things."

This bed Miss Warburton chose is an outstanding success among the new Simmons models. Its slender spindles "just suit" most modern rooms. Its perfect proportions give lightness and grace, and fit with all styles of furnishing. It comes in walnut or mahogany finish, or in smart new two-color schemes.

Like all Simmons Beds, it is of faultless construction; can never wobble or squeak; its baked-on finish is lasting; being of metal, it is practically indestructible.

You may purchase Simmons Beds wherever furniture is sold. The simplest style is $10. Handsomer designs as high as $60. The name Simmons is plainly marked on each. Our local branch serves your dealer promptly. The Simmons Company.

Miss MARY BROWN WARBURTON of Philadelphia, Palm Beach and Paris is the charming granddaughter of the great merchant prince, the late John Wanamaker, and one of the most prominent and admired younger women of society. Widely traveled, rarely artistic, a talented musician and linguist, she has now added interior decorating to her accomplishments.

Simmons Bed No. 1880, in soft brown walnut finish, is the quaint-spindled model which "just suits" Miss Warburton's room. "Delightfully decorative," she says of it. "Its clean-cut, graceful lines are so attractive. My Simmons Beautyrest Mattress and my splendid Simmons Spring complete an ideal sleeping outfit."

SUPPLY OF SOFT COAL POSTPONES SHORTAGE FEAR

Prices Cut as Holdout Enters Fourth Week.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The fourth week of the suspension in the union bituminous coal fields, according to the operators, finds output from nonunion mines in Kentucky and West Virginia and elsewhere running closer than expected to the current demand for fuel. So far as the public goes, producing leaders say, the situation is one of apathy and indifference, far different from most suspensions of former years, and the bituminous shutdown to date has caused as little excitement and disturbance as did the anthracite strike of two years ago.

The shutdown this time, when it came April 1, found a possible fuel pinch shoved further into the future than at the start of former suspension. Some experts figure that at the present rate of nonunion output it will be September, if then, before a shortage is felt.

Stocks on Increase.

It is estimated that supplies of 85,000,000 to 90,000,000 tons are on top of the ground now. A government survey showed 60,000,000 tons on hand Jan. 1, and stocks in the first quarter of this year were increased until, when the suspension started, the fuel supply on hand was rated at about 25,000,000 tons more than the normal storage.

Government figures for the first nine days of the suspension show bituminous output decreased less than 40 per cent. In the week ended April 9, the output was 8,258,000 tons, or a daily average of 1,376,000 tons. It is compared with an output of 3,638,000 tons in the first week of the strike in 1919, and of 3,970,000 tons in the first week of the 1922 strike.

In the week ended March 26, the last full time week before the expiration of the wage agreements, 13,373,000 tons were mined, an average of 2,229,000 day. The government's survey indicates the falling off on April 9, first full week of the trouble, was 5,115,000 tons, or about 38 per cent. The figures appear to support the contention that in recent years the nonunion fields have been producing 55 to 65 per cent of the annual output.

Demand Falls Off.

In round numbers, average weekly consumption is about 11,000,000 tons. About the beginning of May, demand starts falling off as warm weather comes, until the producers figure it runs at a rate of 8,500,000 or 9,000,000 tons or less a week in spring and summer.

Union leaders have made few statements since the wage agreements expired March 31. Parleys have been held here and there.

In the central competitive district few mines are running, outside of the Pittsburgh region, which is expected to be the storm center of the controversy.

In Illinois no mines of importance are operating. In districts where the pits have been active, teh miners got their semi-monthly pay checks April 15, for the last half of March, and reports from the coal fields are that pressure is hardly felt. The miners are reported to be in shape to withstand quite a period of idleness.

In Indiana only a few mines are running, and in Ohio there are few activities, while in Pennsylvania, open shop operations in the Pittsburgh region are increasing.

Retail dealers in Chicago have announced price cuts with a view of encouraging consumers to fill up their bins.

Scout Increase Fears.

The National Association of Manufacturers is advising its members not to overstock, not to fear a price increase, and not to start bidding against one another and force prices up.

The nonunion fields are regarded the key. Their production has been climbing steadily. In 1913, to illustrate, Illinois was producing 15 per cent of the bituminous output of the country; Kentucky, 6½ per cent; West Virginia, 15½ per cent. Last year, however, competition from the nonunion fields had grown until Illinois was mining only 12 per cent of the total production, while Kentucky had climbed to 11 per cent and West Virginia to 25½ per cent. Other nonunion fields likewise increased output.

Where nonunion Kentucky and West Virginia combined produced 21 per cent of the output in 1913, they produced in 1926 36 per cent.

MAKE NEW TRIAL TO GET TALK BY JAILED DRAGON

Writ Is Issued to Get Stephenson Out.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 23.—[Special.]—A writ of habeas corpus directing Walter H. Daly, warden of the Indiana state prison, to bring D. C. Stephenson to Indianapolis May 6 to testify in a civil court proceeding, was issued today by Judge James M. Leathers of Superior court.

The petition for the writ was filed by Floyd J. Mattice, attorney for Mrs. Nettie Stephenson Brehm of Potsau, Okla., a former wife of Stephenson, who has brought suit for the support of their 12 year old daughter, Florence Catherine. Mattice said he expected to question Stephenson concerning his property which is under attachment by order of the court.

Wants Prior Examination.

At the same time the writ was issued, Judge Leathers fixed May 12 as the date for the trials of Mrs. Brehm's suit. Mattice had originally planned to make an effort to have Stephenson here during the trial but decided instead to question him under oath prior to the trial.

Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Klan, is serving a life term for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis. The suit was brought by Mrs. Brehm shortly before Stephenson became involved in troubles which led to his conviction on the murder charge.

Arthur L. Gilliom, attorney general, who has opposed previous efforts to have Stephenson taken from prison to testify, also will oppose the writ issued by Judge Leathers.

Daly Refuses Comment.

Michigan City, Ind., April 23.—[Special.]—Walter Daly, warden of the Indiana state prison, declined to comment today as to what action he would take on a writ of habeas corpus ordering him to bring D. C. Stephenson to Indianapolis.

PRESIDENT MACHADO OF CUBA IS GUEST OF COOLIDGES AT DINNER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—Gerardo Machado, president of Cuba, was the guest of President and Mrs. Coolidge at dinner tonight in the temporary White House in Du Pont circle. A number of other official and distinguished guests were present.

Earlier in the day President Machado was the guest of the governing board of the Pan-American union at a luncheon.

The welcome on behalf of the governing board was extended by its chairman, Secretary Kellogg, who congratulated President Machado on "the splendid progress made by your country during the quarter century of her independence," and asserted "under your able direction Cuba is moving forward to ever higher levels of national well being."

President Machado reaffirmed the gratitude of Cuba for the intervention of the United States which crowned the island country's struggle for freedom with success and expressed the faith of all Latin American countries in Pan-Americanism to maintain in the future "a whole hemisphere without economic or political contradictions or conflicts of traditions or interests and growing in union, friendly understanding, and mutual comprehension."

Third Section of Mayor's Party Takes Train South

The delegation was headed by Arthur Dyer, 5th ward Republican committeeman, and Charles Zeller. About 75 were in the party.

Cuts Cost of City Delivery Almost in Half

On Exhibition and Demonstration at the Factory Service Station and Salesroom 1923 So. Michigan Ave.

The Pak-Age-Car will also be shown at the Convention of the National Retail Delivery Ass'n, Sherman Hotel, Week of April 25th.

HERE is the Pak-Age-Car, the new light delivery truck which, under the most exacting tests, has shown a saving of nearly half the cost of operating with horse and wagon and of about a fourth the average cost of delivery with the best light gasoline or electric trucks which heretofore have been available.

Never before has such economy been obtained with a light delivery vehicle of any class. The saving made seems almost incredible but it has been proved over and over by actual performance.

These are strong statements but they are backed by the actual performance of the Pak-Age-Car and the evidence will be given to anyone interested in cutting down the high cost of city delivery.

A New Type of Motor Vehicle

The Pak-Age-Car embodies a new application of proved engineering principles worked out by some of the ablest automotive engineers in America.

The entire power plant including the engine, and all accessories is assembled as a unit with the rear springs, hubs, axles and tires. In case of emergency this unit can be replaced in the street, with a spare unit in 15 minutes, and this without entering the vehicle or disturbing the load. No need for hauling to headquarters or a service station. The Pak-Age-Car is always in service.

The Pak-Age-Car is built on the principle of the suspension bridge—the body and load supported from the roof—and the ratio of useful carrying capacity to net vehicle weight is about 2½ to 1. With ordinary light trucks this ratio is usually 1 to 2.

The speed of the Pak-Age-Car is 15 miles per hour loaded—or from 2 to 2½ times the speed of a horse and wagon on the trot—fast enough to give twice the range of operation but not fast enough to permit speeding.

It operates on 1 quart of gasoline per hour and 1 quart of engine oil per week.

It is under as complete control of the driver in starting and stopping as the horse driven vehicle.

Expense Reduced at Every Point

Compared with horse delivery, the Pak-Age-Car is not only far more efficient in performance but saves investment in stables, wagon sheds, harness and feed. Garage space, fuel and oil for the Pak-Age-Car cost much less than these items.

It cuts down the interest on investment, cost of building repairs, wagon upkeep and replacement of horses and its use is not affected by zoning ordinances which restrict locations for stables.

Its economy and convenience over the ordinary light truck make it the only choice when a motor city delivery service is to be installed.

BOARD TO OPEN NAVAL ACADEMY QUIZ TOMORROW

Inefficiency Charges by Sims Bring Inquiry.

BY ARTHUR W. CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 23.—[Special.]—An official board will take cognizance during the coming week of charges involving serious shortcomings in the administration of the Naval academy at Annapolis.

REAR ADMIRAL SIMS. [(C) Harris&Ewing.]

The annual board of visitors appointed by President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes and Speaker Longworth will commence a four day visit to the academy on Monday. Recent criticisms of the work of the naval school make the inspection by this year's board one of more than ordinary importance and it is expected that its report will deal specifically with the charges presented.

That the Naval academy is an unsatisfactory educational institution in certain important respects has been asserted recently by Rear Admiral William S. Sims, retired, who refers to it as "our amateur naval college."

Yale Head Writes Wilbur.

Dr. J. R. Angell, president of Yale university, who was chairman of the annual board of visitors in 1923, has addressed a letter to Secretary of the Navy Wilbur inquiring why that board's recommendation for the appointment of a commission of civilian educators to make an intensive study of the work of the academy has been ignored.

Failure to appoint such a commission, Secretary Wilbur has made it known, was due to the advice of Rear Admiral L. M. Nulton, superintendent of the Naval academy, who insists that criticisms are not warranted and that as a matter of fact civilian schools are finding it desirable to adopt some of its educational methods.

Sims Insists on Reforms.

According to Admiral Sims, the reports of the last six annual boards of visitors have shown conclusively that reforms are urgently needed at the Naval academy. But despite repeated criticisms, Admiral Sims says that no constructive action has been taken by the navy department or congress. It was with a realization of this situation that the board of 1923, and the board of 1924 as well, recommended the appointment of a commission "to obviate defects in the whole system of training and educating naval officers." Admiral Sims strongly supports the recommendation for the naming of such a commission.

One of Admiral Sims' criticisms is that the dozen officers who have been selected during the last thirty years to serve as superintendents of the academy were not graduates of the naval war college, which is maintained at Newport, R. I., for training officers in high command.

Causes of Inquiry Demand.

Principal reasons why the 1923 visiting board regarded the appointment of a special commission as desirable are contained in the following extract from its report to the secretary of the navy:

"The board reports that in general the equipment of the academy is excellent, the work of the institution is conducted with great devotion, and the morale appears to be all that could be wished. The most serious questions arise from the changes in the problem presented to the academy by the enormous expansion in the last two decades, of the world of science and technology, which is reflected at every point in the construction, maintenance, and management of the vessels of a modern fleet.

"To say nothing of giving the midshipman a sound, symmetrical general education, which, it can hardly be said that he now receives, it is utterly impossible in the present four year course to give the training in fundamental physical science which is absolutely essential if the midshipman is to have more than a rule-of-thumb knowledge of the apparatus which he is obliged to use in his daily work aboard ship and in the navy yards. The naval officer ought to be able to hold his own with educated men in any walk of life, but unless of his own initiative he secures additional training of considerable extent after leaving the academy, he cannot fulfill this demand."

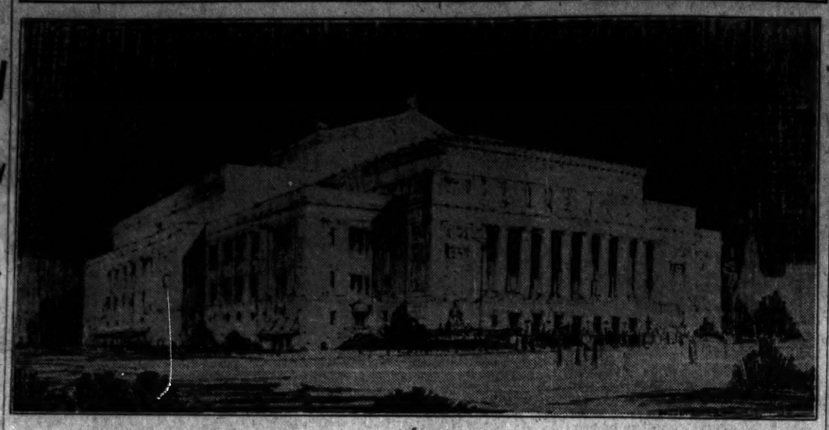
Contains Hint of Criticism.

Two suggestions by the 1923 board contain a hint of criticism against the possible exercise of political influence by members of congress who are largely responsible for the selection of Naval academy students.

It is stated in the board's report that "the method of comprehensive examinations used for admission to many of the principal colleges may offer advantages over present methods of determining the fitness of candidates to enter the naval academy and is recommended for careful consideration."

The other suggestion along this line is believed to reflect criticism based on charges that political influence has at times prevented the expulsion of Naval academy students for acts involving moral turpitude.

ST. LOUIS READY TO BUILD CIVIC HALL



Proposed $5,000,000 municipal auditorium for St. Louis, Mo., plans for which have been completed. The building will contain several large halls. A structure of the same nature is being sought for Chicago.

ST. LOUIS BUILDS, CHICAGO TALKS OF CONVENTION HALL

While Chicago is still at the talking stage in regard to a convention hall, St. Louis yesterday completed plans for its $5,000,000 municipal auditorium, according to an announcement by the public service board of the Missouri city. The plans provide for a structure believed to be several steps beyond anything of its kind in the country.

The St. Louis auditorium will have an area in which 12,000 may be seated, a music hall with a seating capacity of 3,500, and four assembly halls with seating capacities of from 700 to 1,000. There is a huge stage 56 feet by 140 feet in area, according to plans.

The arena will be reached from three series of entrances, where not less than 20 automobiles may simultaneously discharge passengers under a canopy. There are broad ramps of easy slope instead of stairways by which persons enter the building.

The arena and music hall are spanned by trusses having a clear span of 270 feet, with no columns to obstruct the view.

POLICE THWART STORE HOLDUP; MAN IS WOUNDED

A gang of bandits and a police squad happened to visit the vicinity of 47th street and Cottage Grove avenue at the same time yesterday afternoon, and so Frank and David Emmett, proprietors of a cigar store at 4719 Cottage Grove avenue, and a group of their patrons, who were being held up, were saved.

One man was reported shot in the running gunfire between the bandits, fleeing in their automobile, and the pursuing police. But the engine of the police car went dead and the bandits got away.

Shortly afterward two men brought a third man, suffering from a bullet wound through the abdomen, to the Jackson Park hospital and hastened away. The wounded man was identified as Rowland McKenna, 205 East 65th street.

GIRL CLERK GETS $15,000 A YEAR, BUT STAYS CLERK

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—earning $15 a week as a clerk, 19 year old Doris Hofheimer, 270 Park avenue, was granted an allowance of $15,000 a year from her grandfather's trust fund by Vice Chancellor Bentley today in Jersey City.

She is the eldest of four girls who share two summer estates and a town establishment at the Park avenue address. Her sisters, Aline, 18, Helene, 13, and Natalie, 10, also had their incomes from the trust fund increased when Mrs. Helen M. Hofheimer, their mother, told the court that an annual income of $80,000 was insufficient for their needs.

Doris is the only daughter employed. She reports every morning in the office of Hofheimer and Lounsbery. She rides in the subway and buys her own lunches.

Living expenses for the family amounted to $177,577 in 1925, according to Mrs. Hofheimer, and in 1926 they were $189,489, exclusive of the upkeep of the properties. The net income from the estate of her husband, who died last February, amounts to about $35,000 a year. This sum is totally insufficient for the family, she said, since Aline must go to Europe to further her art studies and the younger children must continue their music and dancing lessons.

STONINGTON CHURCH BURNS.

Stonington, Ill., April 23.—[U. P.]—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the Baptist church here today, entailing a loss of $25,000.

PLEA TO RETRY HESLEY, SLAYER, IS WITHDRAWN

Daniel Hesley, 26 years old, former Senn high school athlete, withdrew his motion for a new trial yesterday in Judge Philip L. Sullivan's court, and was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary in accordance with a verdict of a jury several days ago. He will first have to serve a 25 year sentence in Leavenworth penitentiary for a mail robbery at Indiana Harbor before he begins serving the state court's sentence for the murder of Walter Fisher, deputy sheriff of Mokena, Ill.

"We are satisfied with the verdict and desire to withdraw the motion for a new trial," said Attorney John Melaniphy.

"I will willingly grant the motion if you desire to press it," said Judge Sullivan, who at the time the verdict was returned called it a travesty on justice.

Drive a CHRYSLER "70"

That's the way to find out how much better it is

WE'LL gladly arrange to give you a real ride in a Chrysler "70"—you to drive the car in the way you are accustomed to drive.

Such a demonstration, we are confident, will convince you of its genuine superiority.

That's the sure way to learn the results of the constant progressiveness which maintains today's finer Chrysler "70" as far ahead of its field as on the day of its introduction.

Not by a brief half-hour's ride over a prescribed route. Not by just a smart dash over smooth concrete. Not alone by its lightning spurts of acceleration through traffic. Not only by experiencing its marvelous riding qualities over cobblestone or ruts.

But by all of these things in an extended drive—with you at the wheel.

We can recite to you the advantages of its speed of 70 miles plus, its astonishing pickup of 5 to 25 miles in 7¼ seconds.

We can tell you what its scientifically balanced 7-bearing crankshaft and impulse neutralizer contribute toward greater smoothness; how much more easily you ride because of its low chassis design, its unique spring suspension and its Watson Stabilators; what greater handling ease results from its pivotal steering; and how much safer you feel because of its four-wheel hydraulic brakes.

But the real way for you actually to discover these things for yourself is to learn them by this kind of a test.

Come in today. Let us place a new, finer Chrysler "70" at your disposal in this manner, for you to drive in your own way.

MISSION POSTS IN CHINA GIVEN OVER TO REDS

Nationalist Rulers War on Christianity.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, April 23.—The Nationalist government, already in control of eight large provinces and dominating several others, formally took over control of all religious institutions on the first day of April. Most of them already had been virtually abandoned by the missionaries, as they had been bolshevized, and under the operation of the new law the teaching of Christianity is forbidden, although voluntary attendance at a short religious service is still permitted.

This affects some millions of dollars of American and other foreign contributions for missionary purposes, much of which is likely to be discontinued if the recommendations made by numerous bodies in China are heeded.

The $2,000,000 investment at Changsha, comprising a hospital, medical college, nurses' training school and a middle school, maintained by the Yale Foreign Missionary society of New Haven, and known as Yale-in-China, has been surrendered wholly to the Chinese.

American President Leaves.

Dr. Edward Hume, president of Yale-in-China, has resigned, the foreign staff has been gone since February, and a Chinese, Dr. F. C. Yen, brother of Dr. W. W. Yen, a former premier, has succeeded him as president. The board of directors also has been reorganized in conformity with the regulations of the Nationalist ministry of education, and also is Chinese.

Canton Christian college, the directorship of which is in New York, will be abandoned entirely and will be succeeded by a Chinese directorate and reorganized as Lingnan university. There will be fifteen Chinese and six American directors on the new board. Dr. C. K. Edmunds, who had been president of Canton Christian college for ten years and is now provost of Johns Hopkins university, came to China last winter with two other American trustees to arrange the final details and arrived back in the United States a week ago.

A slight exception to the general rule was made in the case of Canton Christian college, in that the Chinese actually paid for the property.

"To be businesslike," said Dr. Edmunds in discussing this incident while in Peking visiting some of the alumni, "the New York board charges its directors for the use of the campus and the equipment of the college the sum of one dollar a year, and we have requested that the payment be made in a banknote so that we may frame it as a keepsake."

Lingnan university will be registered with the Nationalist government—perhaps the first foreign recognition of it as a private institution with Christian influence and international financial support. The New York board will appoint the foreign members of the faculty upon recommendation from the Chinese directors. American funds have been provided for the current year and there is little change in the staff under the new arrangement.

As with all mission schools and institutions under the flag of the Kuomintang, compulsory religious courses are forbidden. The only compulsory service is the general assembly on each Monday morning, at which the flag of the revolution is displayed, the will of Sun-Yat-Sen is read, the students bow three times to his photograph and a patriotic address based on his efforts and aspirations is made.

"I would like to see Lingnan university give such religious instruction as is now being permitted in Boone college of the American Episcopalian church in Wuchang," said Dr. Edmunds. "There it has been arranged that at the conclusion of the assembly announcement is made that a short religious service will follow for those who care to remain."

Even in Peking the question of the mission schools is coming up as the discussion of the revision of the Sino-foreign treaties proceeds.

Must Have Chinese Board.

The present laws of the Peking government—which as far as the foreign relations are concerned is still the government of China—also prescribe that the majority of the board of directors of the schools shall be Chinese and that the curriculum shall be based on the standard curriculum of the ministry of education. The nationalist government, having its own ministry of education, need only apply its noncompulsory Christian provisions to each province it annexes.

The question of the Chinese control of mission and other private schools already has arisen in connection with the treaties now being negotiated, and will certainly form an important topic when the French treaty comes up, as it already has in the case of the Belgians. There are numerous Belgian missions in China, while France is by virtue of an old agreement with the pope the protector of the Roman Catholic missions.

MUSEUM EXHIBITS MOUNTED AMERICAN ELK

Group of mounted American elk as they appear at the Field museum, where they will be placed on public exhibition today amid natural surroundings. Julius Freiser of the taxidermy department of the museum collected and mounted the animals, which were secured on the Olympic peninsula in Washington. The background in the exhibit was executed by Charles Crowin of the museum staff.

MISSIONARY'S WIDOW SEES HIS MARTYRDOM AS CHINA'S SALVATION

HONOLULU, April 23.—(AP)—A belief that Dr. J. E. Williams, American missionary and a Northwestern university graduate, killed by looting Chinese when the Cantonese captured Nanking several weeks ago, might not have died in vain was expressed by his widow, who arrived here en route to the United States.

She viewed the slaying as the possible eventual salvation of China, explaining that it awoke the Nationalists to a realization of the danger of the communist element in their ranks and brought to a head the issue between the moderate and the extreme branches of the party. She praised the conduct of American Consul Davis during the Nanking disorders.

Mrs. Williams plans to make her home in New York and expects never to return to China.

STATE HELP FOR 10,000 'CHILDREN OF NIGHT' URGED

Chicago has 10,000 "children of the night," mentally subnormal and exempt from attendance at school because of their handicaps, roaming the streets as potential morons and criminals, William L. Bodine, superintendent of compulsory education, declared yesterday in an address before the Cook County League of Women's Clubs.

Some means of caring for these neglected, subnormal children, and a state farm for adult morons constitute the two greatest needs of Illinois, Mr. Bodine asserted. He pointed out that other states, excepting Maine and Vermont, have provided for such care.

Flandreau, S. D., April 23.—(United Press.)—Because she "wanted them to go to heaven," Mrs. Lloyd Overdahl, farm woman, cut the throats of her three young daughters as they slept, killing them.

The woman was brought here and turned over to police today by her husband, who made the 20 mile trip from the farm house with his wife as captive.

Beyond the statement that she believed her act would send her daughters to paradise, Mrs. Overdahl would give no other motive for the triple killing.

MRS. E. S. KELLEY ELECTED MUSIC FEDERATION HEAD

Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley of Oxford, O., was reelected yesterday to the presidency of the National Federation of Music Clubs, at the convention in the Congress hotel.

Mrs. William Arms Fisher of Boston was elected first vice president; Mrs. E. J. Otteway of Port Huron Mich., second vice president, and Mrs. J. A. Jardine of Fargo, N. D., third vice president. Mrs. T. C. Donovan of Pittsburgh was chosen corresponding secretary; Miss Margaret Haas of Jacksonville, Fla., corresponding secretary, and Mrs. A. L. Snoddy of Mexico, Mo., treasurer.

"Everyman," a choral opera directed by George Lee Tenney, will be given tonight for the first time, at the New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, under the auspices of the federation. The music is by William Lester.

At the Studebaker theater this afternoon the Dayton Westminster choir will present a program as a part of the convention. Special music will also be heard in various churches in compliment to the delegates.

A church music conference at the Congress hotel tomorrow will close the convention. Dr. Max Mason, president of the University of Chicago, will give an address.

Plan Rows of Trees for All County's Highways

A program to decorate all Cook county highways with rows of trees was announced yesterday by President Anton Cermak of the county board in connection with the national observance of Forestry week, which starts today. As the first step, Ransom Kennicott, chief forester, was directed to establish extensive tree nurseries, one near Palos Park and the other near 22d street.

ROBBERS GET $1,000; MISS $1,800.

Three holdup men entered the commission office of Albert E. Schmals, 1352 West Randolph street, yesterday a few moments after Schmals had dispatched his day's receipts, $1,800, to a bank. The robbers obtained checks totaling $1,000.

A Yardstick

Such as the automobile buyer never had before

Proves the Value of the Reo Flying Cloud

Many "yardsticks" for measuring motor car value have been displayed in advertisements and elsewhere.

Most of them gave all the advantage to the car whose makers prepared the advertisement.

That's natural—and easily possible.

But it has not been possible, until now, to measure all cars against an AUTHORITATIVE "yardstick" prepared by independent engineers who have nothing to sell.

Invaluable to Buyers

150 automotive engineers, members of the Metropolitan Section of the Society of Automotive Engineers (the well known S. A. E.), have sponsored a "yardstick" on which automobile buyers can rely.

They held a contest in January for designs of an "Ideal" automobile for the American family. 150 competed. Their specifications were synthetized into a single car which embodied the ideal specifications of the majority of these engineers.

Major Features of the "Ideal" Car

Six cylinders . . . 121-inch wheelbase . . . 3¼-inch bore, 5-inch stroke . . . seven-bearing crankshaft . . . aluminum pistons . . . spiral bevel gear final drive . . . single dry plate clutch . . . silchrome valves . . . shock absorbers . . . balloon tires . . . artillery wheels

These are the same as the specifications of the new Reo Flying Cloud. In fact, if you will check the long list of specifications of the "Ideal" car, at the right, with those of the Reo Flying Cloud, you'll find them virtually identical throughout.

No other automobile in the world even approaches the Flying Cloud in its identity with the "Ideal" car.

If you will ride in a Flying Cloud, if you will drive it over good roads and bad, over level stretches and high hills, you'll learn why 150 leading automotive engineers could find no better specifications for their ideal car than those of the Reo Flying Cloud.

Be sure to try one out.

WINN SYNDICATE GETS CONTROL OF WASHINGTON PARK

INDIAN RUNS 51 MILES IN LESS THAN 7 HOURS

90 Mile Mark

Minneapolis, Minn., April 23.—[Special.]—Harry Duell, a local truck driver, set a new marathon record here today when he ran 90 miles in 13 hours and 15 minutes, circling the Central Y. M. C. A. indoor track 3,000 times. He ran the first 75 miles without stopping. During the jaunt he lost 15 pounds.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lawrence, Kas., April 23.—One world's record was tied, four marks for the event shattered and one established in the fifth annual relay games of the University of Kansas held this afternoon in Memorial stadium in the presence of 7,500 followers of intercollegiate athletics.

RAY CONGER.

And just after the games opened, José Torres, 24 year old Tarahumara Indian, trotted into the stadium to finish his 51 mile run for Kansas City with a world's record performance to his credit of 6 hours 46 minutes and 41 seconds.

The old record for the 51 miles was held by J. C. Davies of New York, who covered the distance in 7 hours, 6 minutes and 39 seconds.

In addition to these sterling performances the world's half mile relay record was shattered by Kansas, but Referee Harry Gill of Illinois refused to allow the mark because Wood, the first runner, started without his baton and Grady, the anchor man on the Jayhawker quartet, ran out of his line.

The Kansas quartet stepped the distance in 1:26 5-10, one tenth of a second faster than the world's record established by the University of Nebraska team last year.

Notre Dame Ties World Mark.

After Kansas had been ruled out of the race and first place given to Iowa, the lion's share of the record breaking performances went to Notre Dame's quarter mile team, which tied the world's record of :41 6-10. This mark was established by the Newark A. C. team, composed of Harwood, Cumings, Clark, and Bowman last year. The new mark shattered the relay record of Kansas at :42, which is also the intercollegiate record.

The Notre Dame quartet, composed of Riley, Elder, Reilly, and De la Garza, fairly flew around the oval. Their pickups were faultless and each succeeding runner was well under way as he took possession of the baton. Missouri, which finished second, also was under the Kansas relay record. The team stepped the distance in :41 6-10. The race was decided in two sections with the best time determining the place winners. Notre Dame won the second section, but was passed all the way by Missouri.

Ames Wins Two Mile Relay.

Iowa State, generally known as Ames, and which won two of the university relays, the half mile and medley, cracked the relay carnival record in the former. With Ray Conger, one of the best middle distance runners in the country, running in the anchor position, Ames covered the distance in 7:33 8-10. The former meet record was 7:34 3-10, made by the Iowa State quartet in 1925.

The final meet record to go by the boards was in the discus throw. Foster Hoskett of Grinnell hurled the saucer 151 feet 4¾ inches. The previous best mark was 139 feet 1½ inches, made by Platt of Denver university in 1924. Hoskett had little trouble in capturing the four mile event. The orange and blue quartet led from start to finish and Capt. Rue crossed the finish line at least seventy-five yards in advance of his nearest opponent. Iowa won the one mile as expected and when Kansas was disqualified in the two mile the Hawkeyes, who finished second, were moved up to first place.

White Wins Pole Vault.

Honors in the individual events were well divided. White of Illinois captured the pole vault and Shimek of Nebraska came from behind to capture the 3,000 meters run. Lyon of Illinois took the shotput and McGinnis of Wisconsin went into a tie for first place in the running high jump with Shepherd of Texas. Everingham of Iowa took the running broad jump and Farley of Missouri the 100 yard dash. Results:

UNIVERSITY EVENTS.

FOUR MILE RELAY—Won by Iowa State (Shoemburg, Cauiun, Conger); Kansas, second; Missouri, third; Northwestern, fourth. Time—7:33.8. New relay record.

ONE MILE RELAY—Won by Notre Dame (Riley, Reilly, and Della Maria); Missouri, second; Texas, third; Kansas, fourth. Time—3:16. New Kansas relay record. Former, :42, made by Kansas in 1925, and by Newark A. C. in 1926, the world's and American records, respectively, held by the New York A. C. in 1925.

Jones Plans to Make His Golf Pay Its Way

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 23.—The reason why Bobby Jones at last decided to accept some money for the journalistic by-product of his fame as a golfer was that the young man had two principles which did not get along well together.

One was the principle that it was not compatible with amateurism for an athlete to indulge in literature at wages gauged in proportion to his fame rather than in proportion to his demonstrated journalistic talent. Inasmuch as Bobby had never written a piece for the papers he used to believe that the high prices that were offered for anything he might write must be a compliment to his golf and no particular compliment to his writing. In this he probably was correct, for it is noticeable that the newspaper syndicates do not go around importuning obscure citizens with no experience in the Fourth Estate to accept large money for their literature.

The other principle was and is that a grown man with a wife and two children should pay his own way in the expensive pursuit of the golf ball or quit pursuing it.

Bobby Explains His Position.

So Bobby reached a compromise with himself whereby he intends to make golf pay its way for him. In this compromise his amateur principle seems to have made all the concessions, but the amateur principle is accustomed to that.

"Necessity and inclination often cause a change of mind. When I was in school and single my father was paying the expenses of my golfing career. I declined a number of offers to write newspaper and magazine articles for money. When I was done with school and married and had a job I was paying my own way in golf and again declined a number of similar offers.

"Now I am again in school studying law for a profession, and I also have a wife and two children and I do not feel it proper longer to expect my father to pay for my further career in golf. For this reason, I have accepted an offer to write for a newspaper syndicate and to collaborate with O. B. Keeler in a magazine series.

Amateurism Not Jeopardized.

"This is, as I see it, peculiarly my own affair. As to its effect on my amateur standing in golf, there never has been any question of that. From time immemorial expert amateur golfers have written for compensation without question. They are doing it today. The United States Golf association of its own motion made a ruling that my decision was not out of line with its policy on amateurism. I see no analogy whatever between this case and that of Miss Mary K. Browne.

"I simply wish to be independent in whatever amateur golf career the future may hold for me. I always have felt that this matter was one for my own determination and I have reached this decision with a full appreciation of my previous position under very different circumstances."

Oscar Keeler, the Atlanta journalist, who has followed Bobby around a thousand miles of meadow, and whose writings have been mainly concerned with Bobby and his golf, adds that he, personally, approves Bobby's decision, knowing the circumstances, as he undoubtedly does.

Says Bobby Can Write.

They call Mr. Keeler "Suffering" Keeler at the golf tournaments because of his great capacity for mental anguish when Bobby is playing a close match. When Bobby's ball is in the rough Mr. Keeler's suffering, if converted into horsepower, would be sufficient to mount every ex-member of the Northwest Mounted police now engaged in the moving picture profession. That means horses, horses, goofy over horses.

"I also think," says Suffering Keeler, "that he is going to do a very fine bunch of articles. He is a much better writer than he thinks he is and is taking a good deal of pains with these articles and not a little pride in them. Please do not get the idea that Bobby is apologizing in any way."

To Calhoun girls were like a delicatessen to a lazy housewife—just picking the superficially tempting at the minute—it was easier than working for something better . . . deeper.

50 PER CENT OF CLASS B STOCK TO NEW OWNERS

$500,000 Involved in Transfer.

Control of the Washington park race track passed from Thomas Bourke, Robert M. Sweitzer and Thomas Curran yesterday into the hands of a syndicate headed by Matt J. Winn of Kentucky and which includes his associates in the Lincoln Fields Jockey club.

MAT WINN.

The transaction on its face gives only a technical control to the syndicate. Neither Mr. Winn nor his Chicago associates publicly will appear as the operators of the track.

But in a series of deals closed yesterday they get 50 per cent of the class B [voting stock] from Bourke, the original promoter of the track. This cost $100,000. They get the interest held in the track by Joseph Cattarinich of Montreal for a reported $116,000. Then they lend the Sweitzer-Curran corporation a reported $350,000 with which old debts are to be wiped out and the track put in condition for the racing which opens at Homewood in June.

Bourke who promoted the track on naught save talk walked out with $100,000. That is he will have been paid that much by July 1. He gets $50,000 in cash now. The rest of the corporation acquires a new lease on life as a result of the $350,000 loan. With this money which was said to have been on deposit in a Chicago bank last night, it will stage its summer and fall meetings, and with the profits attempt to untangle the most complicated race track deal in the history of the American sport.

While only a little more than half a million dollars was involved in yesterday's transactions, it was estimated by persons familiar with the Washington park situation that it will take another half million to operate and finance the track this year. It is said the syndicate headed by Winn will do the financing.

C. W. Hay of Frankfort, Ky., presiding steward at Washington park last season, is said to have been agreed upon tentatively last night by the Winn and the Sweitzer and Curran interests as general manager of the track. He will serve in this position under the direction of Winn, it is said, while Sweitzer will continue as president of the association and Curran will serve in some official capacity.

Brown Falls to Land.

H. D. Brown of California, who came here at the invitation of Chicagoans who were trying to interest him in the untangling the Washington Park tangle, secured an option on Bourke's 5,000 shares of stock two weeks ago. He paid $1,000 for the option. He was to pay Bourke $100,000 for his stock if he closed the option.

Brown then tried to secure the Sweitzer and Curran interests. He got an option on the Cattarinich interests. At first it looked as if he would succeed in buying at least a part of the Sweitzer and Curran stock. But after several conferences Sweitzer is said to have informed Brown that he was not in a position to deal for the sale of his stock.

With only the Bourke and Cattaranich interests Brown discovered he could not control the affairs of the track. He might have thrown it into still more of a tangle by exercising his option, but he did not choose to do that.

He learned that the Winn syndicate could get control of the remaining interests. He called on Winn and offered him the options on the Bourke and Cattaranich stock for just what he (Brown) had paid for it. His offer was accepted.

Hurdle Financial Difficulties.

Some of the financial complications which had to be solved before the deal finally was made were the following:

Aside from his $116,000 in cash invested in the plant, Cattaranich held a contract calling for three-quarters of 1 per cent of all the money handled in the mutuels over a period of four years. In return he was to manage the mutuel plant.

This was solved by paying Cattaranich his $116,000 in cash, making him assistant manager of the mutuel department and giving him an interest of 3-16 of 1 per cent of the mutuel handle for his services. At the end of this year Cattaranich is to retire from the concern.

James Mondi, Chicago gambler, in lieu of a loan of $400,000 he had made to the financially distressed corporations, holds the stock of Bourke, Sweitzer, and Curran in escrow in a Chicago bank. For the loan he was to get ⅛ of one per cent of the total mutuel handle.

This will be solved, it was indicated

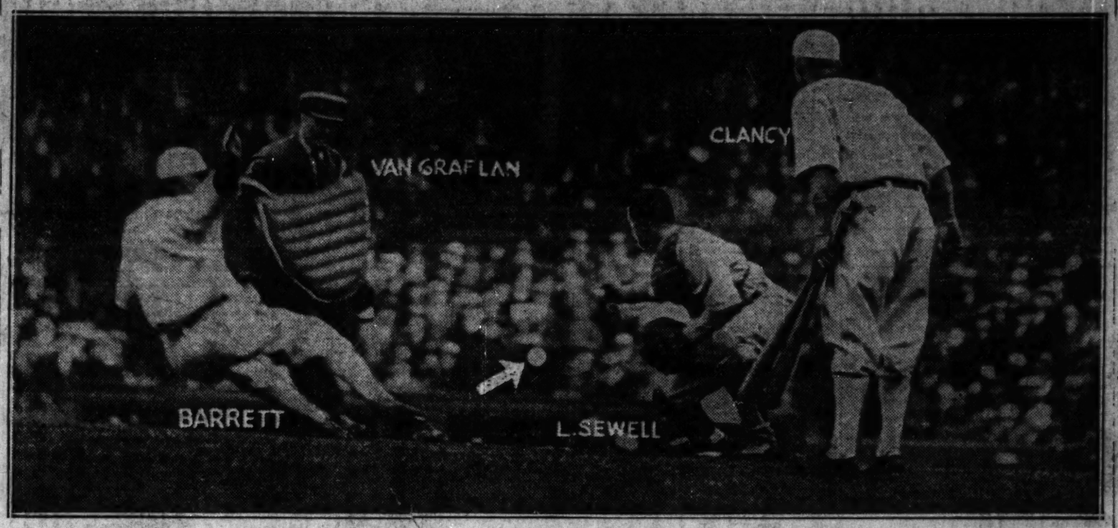
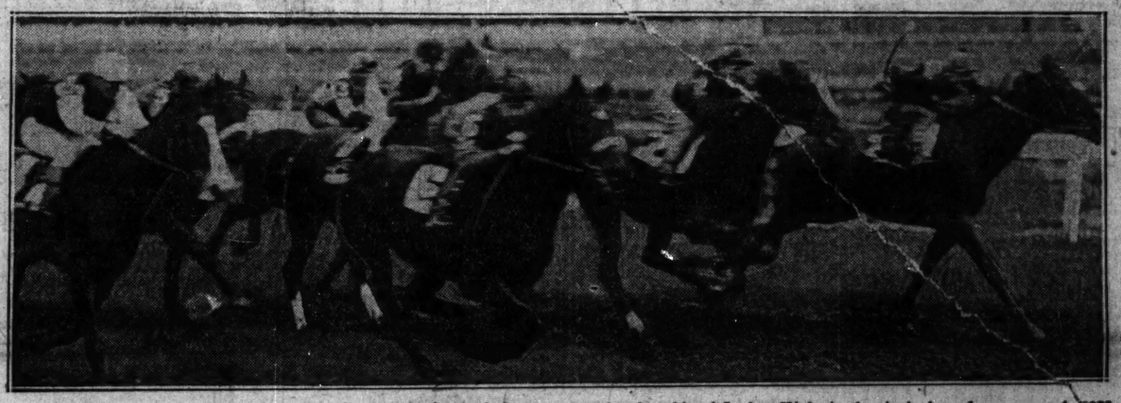
A DAY'S SPORT FOR CHICAGOANS



Bill Barrett of the White Sox demonstrated his speed to score a run in the fifth inning of yesterday's game with the Cleveland Indians which the Sox won, 8 to 2. Barrett doubled and when Falk singled to left Barrett sprinted home. Bill was just a step ahead of Jamieson's throw to the plate. Luke Sewell, the Cleveland catcher, lost sight of the ball when Barrett crossed in front of him, and the leather went through to George Burns, who was backing up Sewell, and Falk made second base safely. The arrow indicates the ball.



William Diggins (No. 2) flying into lead at the head of the stretch under the whip of Jockey Hicks in the six furlong first race at Aurora yesterday. At the extreme right is the tiring Cas Welch that took second place, four lengths behind William Diggins. Adventuress (No. 6) in the center foreground, led part of the distance, but broke badly and finished last. William Diggins' victory paid his backers $9 for $2.

St. Louis, Mo., April 23.—McCarthy's Cubs continue to suffer with their anti-hitting complex. Facing young Flint Rhem, 1926's slab hero, who was making his debut in the current campaign, the Chicagoans garnered only two hits this afternoon, and meanwhile so many things occurred to Percy Lee Jones, the able left hander, that the world's champion Cardinals shivered themselves into a 7 to 0 decision in the final of the series. Shivered is employed advisedly, as the thermometer registered only 42 degrees.

New York, April 23.—(AP)—Back from a vacation of several weeks in Florida, Tex Rickard today lost no time starting to unravel the tangled skeins of his heavyweight program, upset during his absence by lawsuits and boxing commission edicts.

The promoter indicated his first move probably will involve efforts to match Jack Dempsey with Pauline Uscudun for the first comeback test of the former heavyweight champion. He did not commit himself definitely to this plan, because he has not yet received conclusive word that Dempsey intends to return to the ring.

Rickard's attitude apparently is to accept the boxing commission's ban on Jack Delaney as a heavyweight contender and substitute a Dempsey-Paulino match for the contest which originally was slated for June 23 at the Yankee stadium between Delaney and the Spaniard. Delaney, Rickard indicated, will be asked to defend his light heavyweight championship against Mike McTigue.

Rickard expects to have no difficulty clearing away legal obstacles to his first big outdoor heavyweight show, featuring Jimmy Maloney and Jack Sharkey, on May 19 at the stadium. The promoter will seek a settlement of the injunction action brought by Walter Taylor, Cleveland promoter, without resorting to a fight in court.

Culver, Ind., April 23.—[Special.]—The Culver Military academy baseball team won the season's opener this afternoon from Hyde Park High of Chicago, 11 to 4. The cadets sewed up the game in the third inning by scoring seven runs as the result of five hits and two bases on balls.

Teachout has been drilled by Willie Clark, old time catcher and the Occidental coach.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

AL THOMAS.

The White Sox, after a two day layoff, resumed their vocation at Comiskey park yesterday afternoon with an entirely new perspective of the business of playing baseball for pay. By giving careful attention to details and principles they have been rigorously shunning, such as hitting in pinches, the Sox easily won the second and final game of the Cleveland series, 8 to 2.

Tommy Thomas, who hadn't quite been living up to the nice things newspaper historians said about him during the spring training season, presided most ably, not only as a pitcher of rare cold weather attainment but as a batter of parts. Tommy didn't allow a hit until the game was half over and granted only five in the nine innings. He might have got away with a shutout but for Clyde Crouse's misguided idea of coöperation in the sixth when he threw to center field with Lutzke perched on third and Fonseca in action between first and second. Lutzke scored on the misplay and Fonseca got to third, to score a minute later when Summa caromed a hit off Ward's glove. In his batting capacity the Baltimore boy made two hits and drove in two of the first three runs.

Hunnefield, Claney Shine.

A few minutes before game time Manager Ray Schalk, after looking at the thermometer, decided it was too cold to risk those old joints of Roger Peckinpaugh and Whitey Sheely before the winter blasts and inserted Bill Hunnefield at short and Bud Clancy at first. Just to show that cold weather means nothing in their young lives, Bill made two hits and Bud three.

Bill Barrett and Bib Falk did their parts in making the day a merry one for the south side fans, with a couple of circus catches. Bill's came in the seventh, when, after J. Sewell had doubled, Bernie Neis drove the ball into short center field. Barrett made a dive and slid in the mud on his face for, three or four feet, but held the ball. Sewell was standing on third wondering what all the cheering was about while Barrett took his time in throwing to Hunnefield at second, doubling Jole. Umpire Nallin had to go over to third to advise the Indian shortstop that he no longer was legally on base. Falk ended the game with a stirring one handed catch of the same Mr. Sewell's drive along the foul line.

Sox Score Three Runs.

The Sox' scoring accomplishments in the fourth inning, off George Uhle, the ranking American league pitcher in 1926, were enough to win the ball game. Falk, first up, singled to left. Clancy then placed one in almost the same spot for another single, Falk stopping at second. Boone sent a long fly to Neis, but Falk didn't make a move to advance after the catch. Ward singled, scoring Falk and putting Clancy on third. Then Crouse popped to J. Sewell. With two out, Thomas stepped up and whiffed a liner to right, scoring Clancy and Ward. Lutzke threw out Kamm to end the session. This made the score Sox, 3; Indians, 0.

The Sox bounced right back in the fifth for another tally. Hunnefield popped to Fonseca, who relieved Spurgeon at second at the opening of the inning. Barrett doubled and Falk followed with a single to Jamieson and Barrett raced home. Jamieson's throw went past L. Sewell at the plate but Barrett had the throw beaten any way. Burns backed up the play and held Falk at second. Clancy struck out, Boone walked and was forced by Ward at second, J. Sewell to Fonseca. The Sox were leading 4 to 0.

Sox Score In Pairs.

In the sixth, after the Indians had their two run foray, the south siders gave Mr. Uhle the opportunity to go to the clubhouse and don his mufti. Clyde Crouse walked and Thomas sacrificed him to second. Kamm got his second single, scoring Crouse. Burns disposed of Hunnefield without aid and Barrett singled to score Kamm. At this juncture Lakewood George was given his walking papers and Miller, a left hander, relieved him. Miller restored quiet by making Bib bounce to Fonseca, who threw the ball to J. Sewell to get Barrett at second. Tommy was sitting pretty with a 6 to 2 lead.

The Sox added two tallies in the ninth, although Thomas and Kamm were forced out at the plate before anyone could get across. Thomas opened the inning with a single. Kamm walked. Tommy and Will moved to third and second when Hunnefield singled to center. Barrett forced Thomas, Miller to L. Sewell, on an easy tap to the pitcher. Falk forced Kamm, J. Sewell to L. Sewell. Then Fonseca muffed Clancy's pop fly to short right and Hunnefield and Barrett scored. Boone terminated the Sox offensive engagement for the afternoon, Fonseca to Burns.

BLANKENSHIP TODAY

Ted Blankenship probably will be Cracker Schalk's selection to stop the Tigers this afternoon. Atoka Ted got trimmed his last time out by the Browns, 5 to 4, although he cleared loaded bases with a double in one inning and made a homer two sessions later.

The Sox management after the game announced the purchase from Wichita Falls of a 21 year old outfielder named Alex Metzler. He's supposed to be speedy and a hard hitter. He didn't get into the lineup in any of the four exhibition games the Sox played in Wichita Falls last month, however.

Umpire Von Grafton, the rookie ump from the Coast league, worked behind the plate yesterday. He has a lot of new and fancy movements and a swell voice ranging from a booming bass to a rich baritone. His calling was pronounced o. k.

Secretary Harry Grabiner, mindful of astigmatic fans, had a new color scheme for the lights on the trick scoreboards. Whereas all were green against a green background on opening day, the strike lights now are red and the out lights are amber. The ones indicating the balls still are green.

There was a heavy snow flurry fifteen minutes before game time, but a bright sun appeared and chased it away. But there wasn't enough sunshine to make the 3,000 customers comfortable.

Detroit will be here for four days. Their cast includes Harry Manush, American league batting champion; Harry Heilmann, former champion, who finished fourth last year in a tie with Bob Fothergill, his teammate, with .367.

NINE PREP TEAMS ENTER WISCONSIN RELAY CARNIVAL

Madison, Wis., April 23.—Nine high schools from three states have signed to compete in the fourth annual interscholastic relays, to be held at the University of Wisconsin next Saturday. All prep teams in the middle west whose state associations are members of the National Federation of State High School Athletic association are eligible.

Events will include a quarter mile relay, half mile relay, one mile relay, two mile relay, sprint medley relay, distance medley relay, 100 yard high hurdles, running broad jump, discus, javelin, and pole vault.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 23.—[Special.]—Cincinnati annexed its second victory of the season by defeating Pittsburgh, 6 to 4, here today. Hill was hit in the pinches and, after filling the bases in the eighth with one out, was lifted for Morrison. Ford then drove out a single for the last markers.

Paul Waner hit a home run with his brother on base. He drove in three runs with a single, home run, and scored himself on Wright's single after getting a double. Score:

RAW RUBBER TO TEE: STORY OF YOUR GOLF BALL

Interesting Facts Bared in Trip Through Plant.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

While a golf ball usually is considered something to "buy and swing at," a jaunt through a plant where they're made reveals an extraordinary number of processes and operations—most of them hand work—which go into a golf ball before a niblic lays open its pickled innards. It would almost seem as if the energy that goes into the building of a ball exceeds the manual labor of walloping it around a course in 125 strokes, more or less.

A block from the intersection of Western and Fullerton avenues in Chicago is one of the four golf ball manufacturing plants in the United States. The other three are at Newark and Akron, O., and Newark, N. J., and from the four come all the balls used by golfers, except for the small number imported. The Chicago factory makes not more than half a dozen grades of balls, but turns out more than twenty-five brands. They go to all sorts of stores which want their own brands, so it's quite possible you and your friend Jones, who argue about the relative merits of your ball may be playing the same kind, with the only difference in the name.

Rubber of Every Kind.

Rubber comes into the plant in all forms—solid white blocks, brown sheets with surface like screening wire, fine fluffy yellow sheets laid together like the crust of a Napoleon dessert, almost black spools of fine rubber thread—and from nearly all the rubber producing sections of the world.

Starting with the core, a rubber compound is mixed in a machine that is a miniature of the huge dough mixing machines used by the bigger commercial bakers. After being beat into a consistency of plastic clay, but springier, of course, it is squeezed through a tube—like a baker decorating a fancy cake, or a huge mill drawing out copper wire—into round rods about an inch in diameter and several feet long. These rolls go to a row of girls, who slip sections about an inch long and toss them into the plate of a small scale in front of them. Each must weigh within a few grains of the standard, for if it is underweight the core will be compressed more in the winding and produce too heavy a ball. The reverse holds true if the core is large, for the ball will be too light. These sections are placed in molds and cured by lightly vulcanizing them, under pressure, on steam tables. They come out fluffy black balls, an inch in diameter and a most delightful springiness. Cores for cheaper grades of balls are made of harder rubber and are much larger, so the ball won't need so much of the expensive rubber thread.

Balls Machine Wound.

The finished core goes to another large table where girls wrap the ball in fine rubber sheeting, much like the stuff your dentist uses as a dam in working on your teeth. This gives a purchase for the first hand winding of flat rubber tape, of which several yards are wound tightly on the ball.

Then comes the first machine operation. On both sides of a long table sit rows of girls, who take the partly wrapped balls and put them in a winding machine. A curved top and a standing bottom roller, between which the ball revolvers, keeps it turning in every direction, so the fine rubber thread is wound evenly. The thread is stretched to five times its normal length in winding the ball. With uncanny speed the girls put the balls in the machines, test the tension of the thread continuously, lift the balls out at the proper second, and test them for size by putting them through a steel ring. The best of them will wind 500 balls in a day.

These thread wrapped balls, ready for the cover, go to girls who again test them for size with steel rings. Then they go to a testing machine which rests a 200 pound weight on each and shows on a dial just how much the ball gives. The balls wound with most tension naturally yield the least and they are the best. Any ball which yields more than one-sixteenth of an inch is culled out as not first grade.

The ball is then ready for the cover, a mixture of balata—a sap product from Venezuela, something like gutta percha—and crêpe latex, the finest grade of rubber. The huge white blocks of balata are boiled in hot water until soft, which washes out the impurities. While soft it is rolled into thin sheets and dried, after which it is again put into a solvent and the right proportion of latex mixed with it.

Covers Welded to Balls.

It is then rolled into glossy gray sheets and these sheets cut into squares about an inch and a half on each side. Each square is put in a little mold and by pressure molded into a cup. Here the ball and cover join as two cups are placed on the wrapped center by hand and the combination placed in steel dies. These go under a steam press and under a pressure of 2,500 pounds the cover and ball are welded into one, the two halves of the cover sealed together and the mesh and brand put on the cover.

Moving upstairs to the paint machines, the balls are suspended between three prongs which whirl it around as the paint is sprayed on. After drying and curing, girls fill in the indented brand and markings with a paint brush, wiping off the surplus paint.

RELAY OFFICIALS PLAN TO FORM WESTERN LOOP

Des Moines, Ia., April 23.—(AP)—A western relay association which will include representatives of seven major relay carnivals of the country may be organized here next week.

Edward C. Lytton, business manager of Drake university and a member of the Drake relay committee, said today that representatives of the Kansas, Illinois, Texas, Dakota, Rice, Central Intercollegiate and Drake relay associations had agreed to meet here the morning of April 29.

Classification of schools, transportation rates and the safe distribution of medals won at the various meets, will be discussed, Mr. Lytton said.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY DON MAXWELL.

The wires are freighted with rumors that Jimmy Walker, the jovial song writer who bears the title of mayor of New York, is to succeed Ban Johnson as president of the American league. Salary estimates are in line with the customary mythical figures of baseball. In Mayor Walker's case they are set at $100,000.

The American league magnates have accomplished a goodly number of comical misdeeds. Should they shelve Ban Johnson for Jimmy Walker they would perform a ludicrous achievement hitherto unapproached.

Picking presidents for the American league has been the vogue on dull days in sport ever since that meeting between Johnson and Landis failed to transpire last winter. John Tener, former president of the National league, and sundry other gentlemen of note for this and that, have been all but inaugurated. Meanwhile Ban Johnson has been directing the league. And he probably will continue to do so until his contract expires in 1935.

Should the American league directors in truth decide to achieve something funnier than before by picking a mayor to head their league, Chicago demands consideration for its candidate. Jimmy Walker might compose a nice song for the league, but William Hale Thompson would help make "American First."

News that the county has raised the rates on Forest Preserve golf courses fails to cheer the golf fans. Letters assailing the raise burden the daily mail.

In defense of the increase the county officials explain that the Forest Preserve courses have been criticized for poor condition. Weedy, rutted greens, unkept fairways, empty sand boxes nonserviceable traps that have annoyed the golfer only can be improved, the county officials say, at considerable expense. Former income has failed to provide this money and the playing fee was raised to overcome the difficulty.

If the county officials sincerely hope by raising the cost of playing 18 holes at Northwestern to improve the course the fan should not protest. Eighteen holes of golf on a well tended course is cheap enough at 75 cents.

It probably strikes some golfers that the easiest and most economical way for the county to improve its courses would be to fire the men employed last year to care for the greens and fairways. Most of them spent their alleged working hours reclining in the shade of a leafy tree.

Jack Dempsey, form chart maker extraordinary, and one of the best versed men in racing in the country, spent several days in Chicago this week. He made interesting comment on Derby prospects.

"The majority of the turf fans who indulge in the winter books," he observed, "have figured Boo to be the best of E. R. Bradley's three year olds. And I think they are wrong. Boo, it is true, won the Louisiana Derby and gained merited prestige. But I think Mr. Bradley has a better horse than Boo in Buddy Bauer."

Buddy Bauer with Jockey Alfred Johnson in the saddle and carrying an impost of 130 pounds galloped a mile over a slow track in 1:43 3-5. Boot to Boot, a good horse last year, had difficulty keeping up with Buddy Bauer in the stretch.

Clarence De Mar jogs 26 miles 385 yards in two hours forty minutes and twenty-two and a fifth seconds. And he does it under a hot sun over softened asphalt. The time in itself is not so remarkable since it is eight minutes over the world's record. The facts about Mr. De Mar's victory that are worth considering are that he is 38 years old and that it was his fifth consecutive marathon victory within a year.

How many Chicago business men of middle age could run five miles without ending the run in an ambulance?

It is not every one's ambition surely to be able to run 26 miles, but it ought to be every man's ambition to keep his physical machinery in such shape that the mere idea wouldn't sound fantastic.

The White Sox apparently have an infield with Sheely, Ward, Peckinpaugh and Kamm that compares favorably with those of other teams in the pennant race. The Sox pitching staff is above the average. But the loss of Johnny Mostil in the outfield has lowered the standing of the gardeners to a low level. Bib Falk is the one good workman.

Every baseball fan is anxious that Ray Schalk succeed in his first year as a big league manager. He can't do it with the outfielders now playing for the Sox. It is to be hoped that Mr. Comiskey does something about it. It might cost a good deal of money. But Mr. Comiskey has made a good deal of money out of the patronage of the White Sox fans.

BULLETIN FROM THE CHICAGO GOLF LINKS

DESPITE chilly winds, yesterday's sunshine brought golfers out to the courses in increasing numbers to limber up the muscles after the rain enforced layoff last week. Some of the clubs, especially those on low lying land, were still playing temporary greens, but most of them are on permanent greens. Though the fairways at some clubs were a little bit soggy, on the whole the courses are in splendid condition for so early in the season.

Oak Park country club began competitive play with a ball sweepstakes, in which more than seventy-five golfers competed. C. L. Peniston won with a card of 79.

About eighty played a round at Midlothian, where the members have never been forced to temporary greens, and more than a hundred at Evanston. Wilmette also had more than a 100. Sixty came out at North Shore, and Knollwood about thirty. At Briergate the play was light, but as the permanent greens will go into play today, a much larger number are expected today.

As a matter of fact nearly every club in the district was expecting an unusual crowd today for early in the season, providing there is no more rain.

Both of Jackson Park's courses were opened yesterday, and barring another return to winter, will stay open.

TROPHY AWARD STIRS INTEREST IN PREP LOOP

Delaporte Tells System of Picking Winner.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

H. R. COOK.

Although the schedule has been interrupted by rain and cold, interest in the baseball race in the Chicago High School league has kept at high pitch. This is due in no small measure to the announcement last week that THE TRIBUNE would award a trophy to the player of most value to his team.

The trophy award has created much comment, and the players on the twenty-three teams entered in the league are bending every effort to reach perfection in the diamond sport.

Only four games were played in league competition last week out of more than twenty contests scheduled. However, the athletic directors have arranged to play off the postponed contests in double headers and one off days, and the sectional competition is sure to be finished by May 28. No west section games have been played. The north and central section teams have played one game each, while two south sections contests have been run off.

Lane Has Strong Rivals.

There is much speculation as to the winner of the league championship. Lane Tech of the north section, the team that won the title last year and the school which for the last four years has had its team in the title running, will face stronger opposition this year, it is believed. Lane seems to have strong sectional rivals in Schurz and Senn for the north division flag. In the west section Crane and Austin loom as possible title contenders, while Phillips and Lindblom stand out in the central division and Parker appears to be the favorite in the south section.

E. C. Delaporte, athletic director of the Chicago High School league, announced yesterday the plans for determining the winner of the trophy. Each coach, working in cooperation with his principal and member of the board of control of the league representing his school, will select his three best players and grade them according to their scholarship, value to the team, playing ability, and sportsmanship and leadership. These reports will be turned in to Director Delaporte, who with his first assistant, H. R. Crook, the writer, and a committee of umpires of the league will make the final award.

Here's the System.

A percentage system will be used in picking the winner. Scholarship of the boy will count for 30 per cent. Value to the team will count 30 per cent, sportsmanship and leadership 30 per cent, and playing ability 10 per cent.

Several designs for a trophy are being considered. A new trophy is to be provided each year. The selection of the trophy will be made during the week and a photo will be printed in next Sunday's TRIBUNE.

MORTON OPENS CAMPAIGN FOR COLLEGE FUND

With "college educations for champions" as a slogan, more than 3,000 residents of Cicero and Berwyn paraded the streets of the two western suburbs yesterday in the start of a drive which has as its object the raising of an educational endowment fund for the basketball team of Morton high school, which won the national prep championship in the University of Chicago tournament a few weeks ago. Students and members of business men's organizations took part in the parade, riding in flower and hunting decorated automobiles, to increase interest in an endowment dinner at the school building tomorrow night.

The Twenty-second Street Business Men's association is backing the movement to assure the boys college educations, and T. W. Kurtz, head of the organization, expects 30,000 pledges will be turned in at the dinner. The boys who won the national championship by defeating Batesville, Ark., by two points are Edward Kawalski, Ossian Nystrom, Lewis Rezabek, Michael Rondinella and George Fencl.

MIDDIES OUTRUN MASSACHUSETTS TECH IN 2 RACES

Annapolis, Md., April 23.—(AP)—Navy eights triumphed twice over Massachusetts Tech here this afternoon, winning both varsity and junior events over the Henley distances of 1 5-16 miles.

Hitting a stroke of 42 to the minute, the varsity crew led their opponents by three lengths, covering the distance in 6 minutes and 43 seconds, against 6 minutes and 53 seconds by Tech.

The navy juniors led their opponents two and one-half lengths, covering the distance in 6 minutes and 42 seconds.

BOROTRA SAILS FOR FRANCE; SEES TILDEN AS CHAMP

New York, April 23.—(AP)—Big Bill Tilden "has a better chance than any one else to win both the Wimbledon and American tennis championships" this year, in the opinion of his French rival, Jean Borotra, who sailed for home on the Paris today.

"Any American team with Tilden and Johnston on it is extremely formidable," said Borotra in reference to his country's hopes in the Davis cup team contest. Borotra carried with him the American indoor tennis title won for the second time in the tournament here in March.

POST OFFICE LEAGUE MEETING.

Managers of teams in the Chicago Post Office Baseball league will meet Tuesday at 5 p. m. in room 356, Federal building. The schedule will open on May 3.

AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY

In the WAKE of the NEWS

AMATEURISM.

AMATEURISM is the most vexatious problem with which officials in various branches of sport have to contend. It apparently is impossible to draw hard and fast rules which will stand all tests. Perhaps the best plan is a measure of flexibility and decisions on individual cases as they arise, even with the resultant criticism.

Miss Mary Browne is no better golfer than before she signed for a fancy reward as a member of C. C. Pyle's touring tennis troupe and opposed the world famous Suzanne Lengien. But she has "capitalized her skill in amateur athletics." So rules the U. S. G. A. in barring her from tourneys under its jurisdiction.

It is obvious that a casual player, engaged in business and participating in sport as diversion, cannot compete on equality against one giving his entire time to his favorite game. Yet to become a champion in golf or tennis one has not much time for anything else.

American ideas revolt from a standard which makes wealth the determining factor. The U. S. G. A. has ruled that expenses of amateur players to tourneys must be borne by themselves. In theory, the idea is correct. It no doubt was so worded to correct abuses of the past. But it makes participation at any remote point a financial burden except to the well to do.

Bobby Jones is about to write a syndicate series of newspaper articles for which he will be well paid. If he were not Bobby Jones, they would not be of value. Yet we do not think Bobby Jones is a pro in spirit. Bill Tilden gives most of his time to tennis. His writings on tennis are a substantial part of his income. Yet he was a newspaper writer before he was a great tennis player. The border line in all such cases is close.

Custodians of amateurism are in a difficult position. We do not envy them their decisions, sure to be criticized, either by the stand patters or the liberals. Our inclination is to credit them with sincerity—unless palpable injustice is done—and allow them to rule on individual cases as they arise, even though hardships may be imposed in some instances.

By a Real Golfer.

If you don't hit the ball every time just right, what be you goin' to do? Throw down the club and tell the wide world that you with golf are through?
Of course you ain't. You'll take again the club and try and try some more, and soon you'll be hitting the ball on the nose and making a fairly good score.

When this does come you'll say "Ha! Ha! I've got her now, I'm sure," and you'll hunt up the fellows that gave you the laugh and show 'em you've now found the cure.
So stick to it, Harvey. Let the pro show you how; the grip, the stance, and the use of each club. And you'll soon be as good, no doubt, much better, than some of these fellows who called you a Dub. C. E. W.

BLACKHAWKS PAY $17,000 FOR 3 WINNIPEG STARS

Start Rebuilding for Next Season's Hockey.

The task of rebuilding the Chicago Blackhawks hockey team is under way. Purchase of three players from the Winnipeg team of the American Hockey association was anounced yesterday by Maj. Frederic McLaughlin, president of the Blackhawks.

The new men are Nick Wasnie, the big Icelander, who plays either defense or a forward position; Cecil Browne, a forward, who was the leading goal getter of the American association last year, and Charlie Gardiner, ranked as the greatest of the younger guardians of the net in hockey.

Pay $17,000 for Trio.

Barney Stanley, the new manager of the Blackhawks, who played with and managed the Winnipeg sextet last year, started negotiations for the purchase of the three players from the Canadian team a month ago. But it was not until Maj. McLaughlin made a trip to the northern city and unbuckled his bank roll that the deal went hrough. The Blackhawks paid $17,000 for he trio, which is one of the biggest hockey deals made in several years.

Wasnie is a fast skater and a brilliant defense player. Nick also can shoot the puck with speed and accuracy, and Manager Stanley is counting on the Icelander as a defense mate for Bob Trapp next season. Browne's ability is well known to Chicagoans who watched the Winnipeg outfit in their games with the Chicago Cardinals at the Coliseum last winter. Cecil was virtually the whole show for the Canadian team in its scoring attack. He is a tricky skater and adept at faking a goalkeeper out of position and shooting the puck home.

Lehman May Be Benched.

The addition of Charlie Gardiner probably will mean the sale or benching of the veteran Hughie Lehman. Lehman has gone back in late years in his goal guarding. Hughie's eyes aren't as good as they were in his younger days, and the veteran had trouble in several series last season.

Gardiner is a youngster who is going ahead rather than back and with a veteran team he probably will be one of the sensations of the National league next season.

Manager Stanley will come to Chicago within a month to talk over other deals with Maj. McLaughlin. The Blackhawks' boss wants to add a couple of more young players to his squad and develop more speed and team play than the Hawks showed last season.

OLYMPIC GAMES HEAD RESIGNS; REVEALS SCANDAL

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

THE HAUGE, April 23.—Serious charges were made today against the Dutch Olympic committee in Amsterdam by the general secretary recently appointed and who resigned after quarrelling with the committee. When interviewed he said he could not be responsible for the failure of the Olympic games through the stupidity of the committee.

He revealed that the seating capacity of the Olympic stadium, under construction, owing to a mistake, was only 35,000 instead of 45,000. Actually the new stadium has only 3,000 more seats than the existing stadium, making the new building an unnecessary waste of money.

Bob Gives Tip to Angler of Wily Trout

BY BOB BECKER.

Knowing how to handle a fly rod is, of course, a fundamental requirement if a fellow wants to fly fish for trout, but that one requisite doesn't make him a 100 per center in the trout game. Where to fish in a stream is more than half of the battle.

The brook trout (Salvelinus fontinalis, the boy with the red spots) favors eddies, riffles, pools, rocks, fallen trees, and holes under the banks. The fisherman just taking up the game of trout fishing should keep these preferred spots in mind when he dons his waders and starts to toss a fly.

You invariably can figure on an old whopper of trout hanging out under a cut bank of a stream with his nose not far from the turf, as he watches the main body of the stream for something to eat. If you can cast your fly close to the bank, or even flick it on the grass and then let it drop into the water and float a-la-dry fly style with the current, you're likely to start a scrap that you won't forget.

Every pool below a rapid or stretch of swift water should be fished carefully. Wade up to the lower edge of the pool, if possible, and cast your fly ahead, letting it float gently toward you. Then, if there is nothing doing, cast beyond or to one side for a spot about three feet away from your first attempt. In this way you can whip nearly every foot of the deep pool in which brook trout like to loaf as they watch for food.

In large broad rivers where the current [especially early in the season] is no easy thing to buck with big waders on, we fish down stream, always maneuvering through the shallow spots so that we can fish the deep holes from the side. This practice means casting to the head of the deep spots and then working the fly downstream and slightly across places where brook trout usually are found.

It is only through constant practice and fishing that the beginner in troutcraft learns water and how to fish it. Spend a few days with an experienced hand at troutin'. Watch how he picks the spots, the pools, the eddies, the riffles, and you'll soon learn where the big fellows can be found in a stream.

BALBOA MASTERS AURORA MUD TO WIN BY 12 LENGTHS

Takes $2,000 Snowbird Handicap.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Aurora, Ill., April 23.—Three horses staggered through the sticky and holding mud on a mile and a sixteenth trip, one of them twelve lengths in front of his nearest rival, the second horse thirty lengths in the lead of the distant trailer.

JOCKEY ALLEN.

That tells the story of the running of the $2,000 Snowbird handicap at the races this afternoon. Balboa was the horse which floundered around the track so far in front of his two rivals, Golden Mac, once a great mud runner, was the one to run in second place. Mud running old Arabian was that distant trailer at the end when Balboa passed the finish line.

Balboa Continues Victories.

Fresh from New Orleans where he had hung up six victories from the best handicap horses mustered against him, Balboa's fame had preceded him here and when the original field was cut to three starters by the withdrawal of Iron Mask II. because of lameness, the six thousand spectators turned their support to Balboa. It was a confident support, so confident that Balboa went to the post a 2 to 5 favorite, the shortest price choice of the meeting.

And Balboa made good every bit of that confidence. Before they had hit the first turn, Jockey C. E. Allen had rushed him into the lead. First he was leading by four lengths. Straightening out for the run down the back stretch he increased it to ten. Turning into the home stretch he spurted once more and his margin was twelve lengths. Jockey Allen took him in hands, raced him in the more solid going near the outside fence, and paraded home in a canter.

Arabian, always a slow beginner, was out of it before they had gone a furlong. He lost ground rather than made up any all the rest of the way home.

Iron Mask II., at his best, would have had his hands full with Balboa today. It is doubtful if he could have headed him.

Except for this uneven contest in the handicap, the rest of the racing was exciting and spectacular.

Many Horses Repeat Wins.

That the racing strip here, like Bowie in Maryland, may develop into a course that is highly favored by some horses and highly treacherous for others was indicated when four of the winners, on this afternoon's card were horses that had won races during the first two days of the season.

The first of these repeaters was William Diggins, in the first race. This was the horse that saved the family homestead for Bill Ware, on opening day, when he won a race with Ware so short of money he could not pay the jockey fee.

C. T. Worthington became a, two time winner when he won the second race and crippled old Monastery, suffering from everything under the sun according to his trainer, Tommy Doyle, grabbed off his second purse by galloping home an easy winner in the third. Then came Wise Guy, in the fourth to join the ranks of double winners.

Some fairly good sprinters met in the secondary feature, which was fifth on the program and brought the first victory of the season to Col. Bob Baker of Kentucky, when his 4-year-old Updike came from behind in the stretch and scored handily over Outlawed and Col. Schooler.

Favorites were marching home throughout the afternoon, and it was a profitable day for most of the players.

CRUSADER LOSES FIRST START AS FOUR YEAR OLD

Havre de Grace, Md., April 23.—[Special.]—Another racing idol was toppled into defeat this afternoon when the mighty Crusader, champion three year old of the 1926 season, was defeated soundly in the fifteenth running of the Philadelphia handicap. The son of Man o' War, carrying the stiff impost of 128 pounds, could finish no better than fifth in a field of ten that raced the mile and sixteenth of the featured number of the special half holiday program.

Crusader was in all kinds of trouble after the field had been held seven minutes at the post—a delay which did not help the handsome chestnut colt under his heavy burden. Laverne Fator, the riding ace of the Rancocas stable, had the colt in continual difficulties during the race.

Single Foot Wins.

The race was won by J. E. Griffith's five year old horse, Single Foot, and his four year old half brother, Canter, carrying the same crimson silks, finished half a length back of his stable mate. The Sagamore stable's Montferrat was half a length back to take third money by a length and a half from Edward Whitney's veteran, Joy Smoke.

The brilliant race, won by the Griffith representatives, was especially welcome to the great crowd of 20,000 which journeyed to the course, for both horses are Maryland bred. The stable paid $11.70 for each $2 ticket in the mutuels. Chalmers rode the winner, which ran the distance in 1:45 3-5.

Near Record Crowd.

The attendance was one of the largest that has ever crowded into the Havre de Grace course. The afternoon was cloudy and a sharp westerly breeze made heavy wraps necessary. In the parade to the post Crusader looked to be in the pink of condition and ready to run the race of his life.

MRS. WHITNEY'S ENTRY WINS AT BELMONT PARK

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Mrs. Payne Whitney's pink and black colors flashed to the front for the second time in the meeting in the classic Sporting Plate at the closing at Belmont park today.

Mrs. Whitney's victory today was achieved on Nitouche, a 2 year old bay filly which led the field of seven practically all the way to win by two lengths.

Honors for the closing day were shared by Mrs. Whitney with R. C. Winman, owner of the Windburn stable, whose Oyster Bed captured the steeplechase dinner stakes.

SANGOR, LENARD BOX TOMORROW AT WHITE CITY

Joey Sangor of Milwaukee, a contender for featherweight honors, and Henry Lenard of South Chicago, who won a decision over Andre Routis of France in a recent Coliseum show, will meet at White City tomorrow night in the most important fight to be held in Chicago this week.

JOEY SANGOR.

This pair of 126 pounders were matched to meet in the same arena a short time ago, but Sangor was compelled to call off the bout because of an infection in his nose. The boxing commission ruled that Joey must make his first appearance at White City following his recovery. Tomorrow night's fight is the result of this verdict.

Both Training Here.

Sangor and Lenard have been training at local gymnasiums for the last ten days. Sangor is a clever fighter, while Lenard, a southpaw, can punch hard with his left hand. The Milwaukee fighter, however, is sure to give Lepard a busy evening. He has too many important fights pending to drop the decision to the South Chicago fighter. Joe Medill and Paul Allen will meet in the semi-windup, which will be supported by four other bouts.

Fighters who will appear on Promoter Jim Mullen's card at the Coliseum on May 3 will settle down to hard training tomorrow. Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., who meets Abe Attell Goldstein of New York, former world's bantamweight champion, in one of the ten rounders, arrived from California yesterday and will resume training tomorrow. Goldstein will arrive today.

Canzoneri Arrives Tomorrow.

Tony Canzoneri of New York, who will trade punches with Ray Rychell of the stock yards in another ten rounder, will be in tomorrow, as will Carl Duane, who meets Tommy Grogan of Omaha. King Tut of Minneapolis, who clashes with Ray Miller, will be at work on Tuesday. Miller and Rychell have been training for the last week.

Winn Syndicate Acquires Control of Homewood Track

last night, by an outright purchase from Mondi by the Chicago syndicate. They were said to have offered him $125,000 for his interests. Mondi asked $150,000. A settlement will be reached Monday, it is said.

Besides the payments to Bourke, Cattaranich and Mondi other money that will be paid out, it is said, before the June meeting at the track include the following items.

$125,000—To other creditors holding mechanics liens which were due April 12.

Track to Make Big Money?

Out of the profits on the track this summer seven per cent interest is to be paid on the $350,000 loan and it is said that one per cent of the total mutuel take will be applied to the principal of the loan.

Aside from the class B stock now held by the Winn syndicate, Central and Sweitzer, $90,000 shares of class A stock were issued. A big part of it was sold in small quantities to Chicagoans who were interested in the revival of racing here. Before any dividends can be paid on this stock all the outstanding obligations must be paid.

Shrewd race track men have estimated that the track will clear a half million on its two meetings this season. But even at that this will be a long time before the small stockholders will begin to realize on their investment.

H. D. Brown, who played an important part in unraveling the financial situation, remained in Chicago last night. He visited the Aurora race track yesterday.

To hundreds of queries, "Are you coming into Chicago racing?" Brown only smiled and refused to say if he was or he wasn't.

CHICAGO Q BOATS TO RACE IN EAST ON 4TH OF JULY

Chicago "Q" Boat Owners association has decided to send two picked crews from local "Q" boats to Marblehead, Mass., over the Fourth of July to compete against the best the Atlantic coast has to offer in "Q" boat racing, officials of the association said yesterday.

Chicago, with nine "Q" boats in its harbors, will pick its representatives from the crews of the Verona, the Virginia, the Intruder, the Nabob, the Princess, the Chaperon, and the Jackson Park, all from local yacht clubs.

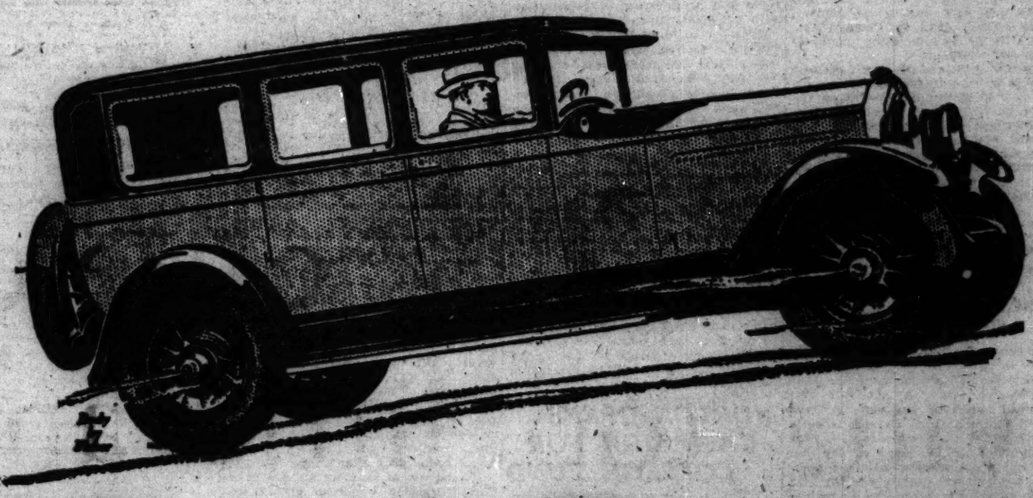
VALVE-IN-HEAD Buick MOTOR CARS



Buick Power
is proved on the "24-Hour Hill"

Buick does not guess about the power of the Buick Valve-in-Head Engine.

Buick knows this famous engine produces more power for its size than any other automobile engine on earth.

The "24-Hour Hill" is not a hill at all, but a device which faithfully duplicates the pull of any hill for any number of miles.

SEDANS
$1195 TO $1995

All prices f. o. b. Flint, Mich.; government tax to be added. Buick delivered prices are lower because the smallest possible handling charge has been established by the Buick factory. The G.M.A.C. financing plan, the most desirable, is also available.

Buick Sedans vary in capacity from five to seven passengers, and have two doors or four. Their Fisher-built bodies are famous for their superior coachcraft, distinctive beauty and added comfort.

The model illustrated is the five-passenger sedan, Series 120, $1495, f. o. b. Flint.

Natural grades are not long enough nor severe enough to adequately test the mettle of any motor car.

But by means of this mechanical "hill" Buick cars prove their ability to climb anywhere that wheels can get traction.

Test, not guess, is the basis for Buick design. Buick success is founded on this constant search for the new and better thing—on this accurate, beforehand knowledge of results.

Every Buick owner has a better motor car, because of the tests at the Proving Ground.

CHICAGOAN BETS $6,000,000 IN YEAR ON RACES

Tells His System of Beating Horses.

The story of how Kit Carson and Chicago O'Brien beat the races was told in last week's article of "The Races—Who Beats Them?" written by French Lane. In a preceding article he told of the wealth invested in American race track property and gate.

BY FRENCH LANE.
ARTICLE 3.

The largest race horse bettor in the country is a Chicagoan. Few of his business associates, for he is a man of big business connections, are aware of the fact that he bets huge sums on the horses. Last year he wagered $[illegible],000. A few weeks ago he told for the first time the complete story of his operations last year. That story is as follows:

"My father interested me in horses when I was a boy. He had a splendid farm where trotters and pacers were bred. I turned to racing for the enjoyment of it. I decided to try betting on a businesslike plan. I am convinced the haphazard gambler will lose. I decide to play the races for several reasons. First, because I like it. Life is a gamble. Everything points to the futility of trying to beat the horses, but I am convinced that it can be done if the bettor gamble on sensible lines. In other words, I think the race bettor has as good a chance to beat the game as any other business where chance is involved.

"When my friends laugh and call me a sucker, when they point to the innumerable gamblers just as keen as I who have lost fortunes trying to beat the game I do not argue. Reason tells me that my friends are right but my books show that thus far they are wrong.

Quick Action on Money.

"For a while I amused myself by dabbling in stocks. Brokers sometimes hate to call stock market buying gambling. They say it is speculation. But somehow I can't get over the belief that buying stocks on margin is no better speculation than betting your money on a horse. My father used to quote that old axiom of the race horse gambler which warns of the danger of betting on a two legged beast. Sometimes I think the fellow who bets on the doings of a man is taking much more of a chance than the fellow who bets on the performance of a horse.

"The man who bets on a horse gets quick action on his money. He helps fix the odds and create his own returns and no one can freeze him out before the transaction is closed.

"I never had advised anyone to bet on the races because I know better than most people how many hazards there are. A jockey once told me that there were more than a hundred ways for a horse legitimately to lose a race. I'll be darned if I don't believe it.

"Like a thousand other fellows I evolved a system for betting. Its a complicated and costly system. But in this game where every card is stacked against the bettor I believe the only way to beat it is to follow a business like plan.

Here's His System.

"I employ a clocker. Usually the clocker is a colored man, one who has grown up with horses, who has been a hanger on at the race tracks and who knows what the performance of a horse in a morning workout signifies.

"This fellow must be keen witted. He must be able to tell the difference between a real workout and a disguised one. He must find out if the owner is sending the horse out under cover of darkness, say at 3 o'clock in the morning and he must be at the track to time that secret trial. Sometimes he peeps through a hole in the fence, for the knowledge that he was clocking might cause the owner to have the horse held in.

"Sometimes he gets the time of the horses' workout from stable help. He learns that Vespasian has stepped through a sensational workout which the other clockers missed. Of course this stable information may be false and the clocker must be smart enough to sift it.

"Now from this clocker's daily information my handicapper submits the list of horses which he considers best for my day's operations. I pay my handicapper $100 a week to do nothing but take the information furnished by the clocker and figure out the paper chances.

"Sometimes the handicapper is at the track with my clocker. But if I am in Chicago and am betting on horses running at Kentucky, it is likely the handicapper will be with me in Chicago.

Is the Owner Trying.

"Before I place a wager on a horse I try to find out if the owner is out to win that particular race. The public imagines that everytime an owner starts a horse he's trying to win the purse. The sucker bettor thinks he's always getting a run for his money. Unless it's a rich handicap or a historic stake, the chances are about even the owner isn't even trying with the horse. There are several reasons for this. Frequently an owner is content to have his entry run out of the money in order that the odds against the horse will be increased for the race in which he intends to try.

"Another explanation of an owner's willingness to run his horse without the intention of winning is that the horse may run better tomorrow or the next day with the race of today 'under his belt.' Still other owners choose to qualify with a horse before they win with him. The owner may not know how good his horse is. In that case he will instruct his rider to finish as near the leaders as possible, but drop him back into fourth or fifth place at the finish. The jockey is told not to let him win. This is done in preparation for a betting coup to be attempted later.

"Now the surest way I know of learning whether the owner thinks his horse is in condition and is trying to win is to find out whether or not the owner is going to bet his own money on the horse.

"During my ten years of operation I have established connections with scores of horse race owners. They know I gamble big sums on the races and I have let them know that I will bet money for them, thus making it easy if they want to stage a betting cleanup to put up their money away from the track. So they usually let me know when they try with a horse. Word from them gives me the final answer to my first question. Is the owner trying?

How About the Jockey.

"Even with the owner betting I have to sort this information. There still remains a test of my own judgment and the judgment of my handicapper.

"Frequently in the morning before a race I get word from three or four owners of horses in the same race that they are trying. In such cases my decision on which horse to bet goes back to the figures of my handicapper and to the report of my clocker.

"Having satisfied myself that the owner of the horse which analysis and report indicate to be the best is trying, I endeavor to make sure that the jockey also will be trying.

"Jockeys at best, even though kids, are out for money. And there is many a slip between the barrier and the finish line which you can't blame on a horse or an owner. There are so many tricks that a rider can pull and which will decide the outcome of a race that to enumerate them would fill a book.

"A jockey may get his horse away to a bad start, he may continually ride him into a pocket, he may race him wide, he may misjudge the pace and he may not ride hard at the finish. He may know the eccentricities of a horse and do the very thing that will make the horse sulk. He may lose his whip and he may lose his balance and get the horse off stride. He can do all these things and scores of others without fear of detection.

"That's why I want to be sure that the jockey is trying.

Jockey Gets a Bet.

"So in addition to making connections with owners I have made connections with jockeys and their agents. I have loaned them money when they were broke. I have bet money for them when they were out to win. I've kept them in funds when sickness prevented them from riding. I've tried to win their confidence.

"Now when I decide that the horse and the owner are ready I get word to the jockey that I will bet $200 for him on this horse that afternoon. That's a pretty good guarantee that the kid will be riding to win.

"After I have picked my horse and tried to safeguard it, I'm ready to bet. This is how I do it.

The story of the Chicago business man who bet $6,000,000 on the races last year will be continued in article 4 of "The Races—Who Beats Them?" written by French Lane, in next Sunday's Tribune.

Here's the fine difference between paying too little and too much

To pay less than the price of White Owl for a cigar is needless sacrifice of smoking satistaction; to pay more is needless extravagance, pure and simple.

White Owl

. . . and here's why

No cigar at any price has the loyal patronage of White Owl—the largest selling cigar in the world. The advantage of this is obvious. It makes possible economies in production, enabling us to make White Owl far superior to cigars selling for a few cents less—and equal to or better than those which, because of lack of this patronage, must sell for more.

Michigan Captures Big Share of Honors.

GEORGE GUTHRIE.

Columbus, O., April 23. — [Special.]—Eleven university, four college, and two high school meet records were broken despite the bitter cold weather and threatened snow which featured the fourth annual Ohio relays in the Ohio stadium.

Kinsey, Olympic champion, defeated the other three stars by stepping the 120 low hurdles in 13.7 seconds.

SENN'S DEFENSE WABBLES; LANE WINS BY 2 TO 0

Lane Tech, winner of the championship in the City High School Baseball league last year, won its second straight game in the north section yesterday by beating Senn, 2 to 0, at Logan Square park. The Techs were held to four hits, but bunched them in the four inning for two runs.

Sommerfield and Portmess were the rival pitchers, and both hurled effectively, but the former was given better support. Senn made two errors, while Sommerfield, who struck out eight batters, received perfect support.

Graboski started Lane on its way to victory when he drew a pass. Lincke's single drove him to third base, from where he scored on a passed ball. Lincke crossed the plate a bit later when Robins sent him to the counting station on a one base drive. The score:

"the Greater Oakland Six continues to be the finest built car of its price in the world"

4-DOOR SEDAN

A recent Oakland advertisement contained a statement which has attracted extraordinary attention. It said in part, "... Oakland is going to unheard-of lengths to make certain that the Greater Oakland Six continues to be the finest built car of its price in the world." And in support of that statement there were listed some of the extraordinary precision operations employed in the manufacture of the Greater Oakland Six.

Now you may not be interested in the fact that Oakland piston pins are diamond-bored to three ten-thousandths of an inch—that all rotating parts from crankshaft to rear axle are balanced to eliminate vibration at every speed—that every connecting rod is inspected both for accurate weight and for proper location of center of gravity.

But if you are going to buy a car at anywhere near Oakland's price, you cannot disregard the fundamental meaning of such rigidly controlled quality——for it is the very source of long life and of satisfactory operation for month after month ... and no other car of Oakland's field embodies so many instances of costly car super-precision.

You can observe at a glance the rich external beauty of the Greater Oakland Six—for the bodies, finished in rich, new colors of Duco, reveal Fisher craftsmanship at its best. But to learn the basic reason for Oakland's ever-growing good will, you must actually drive the car and talk to Oakland owners—must experience the car's thrilling acceleration, handling ease and road mastery—must learn from those who know that exacting care in manufacture pays perpetual dividends in owner satisfaction! Come in—have a demonstration—and then compare values.

Oakland Six, $1025 to $1295. The New and Finer Pontiac Six—at New Low Prices—$775 to $975. Bodies by Fisher. All prices at factory. Easy to pay on the General Motors Time Payment Plan.

Lane Tech Takes Prep Honors.

The Division Street Y. M. C. A. Bulls won the lightweight championship of the Central A. A. U. basketball tournament at the Broadway armory last night, defeating the Peres council, Knights of Columbus team, 25 to 22. In the other final game of the evening the Lane Tech High school team, composed of boys eligible for next year's relay campaign, won from Loyola High school, 13 to 11. This is the second consecutive year Lane has won first honors.

In the lightweiht final, Peres went into the lead with a minute to play when Kluchinski, who scored seven baskets from the field during the game, shot successfully from the center of the floor. After taking time out, they were unable to stem the rush of the "Y" team, Singer scoring twice from underneath the basket for the winning margin.

The C. A. A. quintet, formerly the Lexington Chandlers, defeated the Harrison Flashes in a second round heavyweight conflict, 18 to 14. Harrison lost their chance they had when it failed to make good on numerous throws from the free throw line. Cisar led the attack for the west side team, scoring five points. Lineups:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Frank A. Reilly, 1713 West Eighteth street, was awarded the $5.

The Question.

Do you approve the U. S. G. A. ruling barring Mary K. Browne from amateur golf for playing professional tennis?

Where Asked.

Chicago and Michigan.

The Answers.

Lieut. Edward Kelly, 1248 Arthur street, police officer—Drawing the line between professionals and amateurs is rather difficult, but if the U. S. G. A. rules that Mary Browne is ineligible for amateur golf there must be a good reason. I think the golf officials try to be fair.

Mrs. Lillian Brown, 4751 North Monticello avenue, cashier—I never could understand some of the rulings of tennis and golf governing bodies. Bobby Jones is going to make money out of his amateur golf by writing newspaper articles and Mary Browne is barred because she has made money out of another sport. Figure it out for yourself.

Dr. B. J. Feinstein, 3844 Roosevelt road—I approve the ruling. I believe in enforcing the amateur code strictly, otherwise it is of no value. Mary Browne deserted amateur tennis; let her do likewise in golf.

Theresa Deitz, 924 North Winchester avenue, saleswoman—I think Mary Browne should be barred from amateur golf. If a college athlete plays professional football he hardly could expect to play on the college basketball team. Why then should a professional tennis player expect to compete in amateur golf?

Harry Halperin, 123 West Chicago avenue—The U. S. G. A. probably knew what it was doing when it excluded Miss Browne from amateur golf. I think, though, if the rule was enforced rigidly that many Chicagoans playing amateur golf also would be barred. How about baseball players, coaches, etc.?

22 Teams to Play in Four Divisions.

Banks of the city have banded together for a baseball league which surpasses any organization of its kind ever known to Chicago. Twenty-two teams already have entered the competition and two more banks are seeking admittance to the league.

The organization was founded by James Keown and M. J. Pauley, working in coöperation with American Institute of Banking officials. A schedule will be arranged this week. Play will be run off in four divisions.

The north and west division teams will play all of their games in a closed park, Logan Square Baseball park having been secured for the contests. The teams will play twilight games.

Paul E. Nordstrom of the A. L. B. has been elected president of the league. J. B. Clemens is vice president, John Cronin second vice president, Frank E. Pokorney secretary, and M. J. Pauley treasurer.

WEAVER MAKES SEMI-PRO BOW THIS AFTERNOON

Niesen Hammond Nine Plays Belle Plaines.

Buck Weaver will make his debut as a local semi-pro baseball player in a Midwest league game today, when the former White Sox star heads the lineup of Niesen's Hammond, Ind., team against the Belle Plaines at Hammond. The blacklisted third baseman, recently voted into the Midwest league, looked as good as ever in practice and should be in great form.

Another feature attraction on the league card will be the Quigley-Union Giant combat at the New Quigley field. Twenty-first place and Kostner avenue. Quigley has a host of semi-pro stars and started with a ten inning victory last Sunday. The Giants also won last week and a hot tilt is expected.

On the northwest side the most interesting game listed appears to be the T. J. Bowler-Bricklayer clash at Portage park. The Bowlers lost several stars to minor league clubs, but still are a strong combination, as are their visitors. Today's schedule:

Romeos vs. Previso at Previso.
Ridge View vs. Blue Island at Blue Island.
Evanston Giants vs. Des Plaines at Des Plaines.
Blue Bills vs. Chicago Stars at Wellss park.

VIENNA SOCCER ELEVEN MEETS NORTH SHORES

Buda Plays Coal City Today.

Two soccer games in the semi-finals of the Peel cup competition, one on the north side and one on the west side, make up today's schedule.

The North Shores of the Major league and the Vienna club of the International league will hook up at De Paul field, while the Buda A. A. and Coal City of the Major loop are billed to play at Sparta field, 27th street and Kostner avenue.

The Evanstonians face an untried eleven in the Vienna outfit. This International league club is making a strong bid to be admitted to the Midwest circuit and has been playing great ball in their league matches. Two weeks ago they defeated the Canadian club, 5 to 1, but the Canucks were short several regular players.

Coal City will present an All-American lineup. The miners are naturalborn fighters and make the Buda players, who are leading the league at present, step at a lively gate. Manager Bob Frye promises to have all of his regulars on the job.

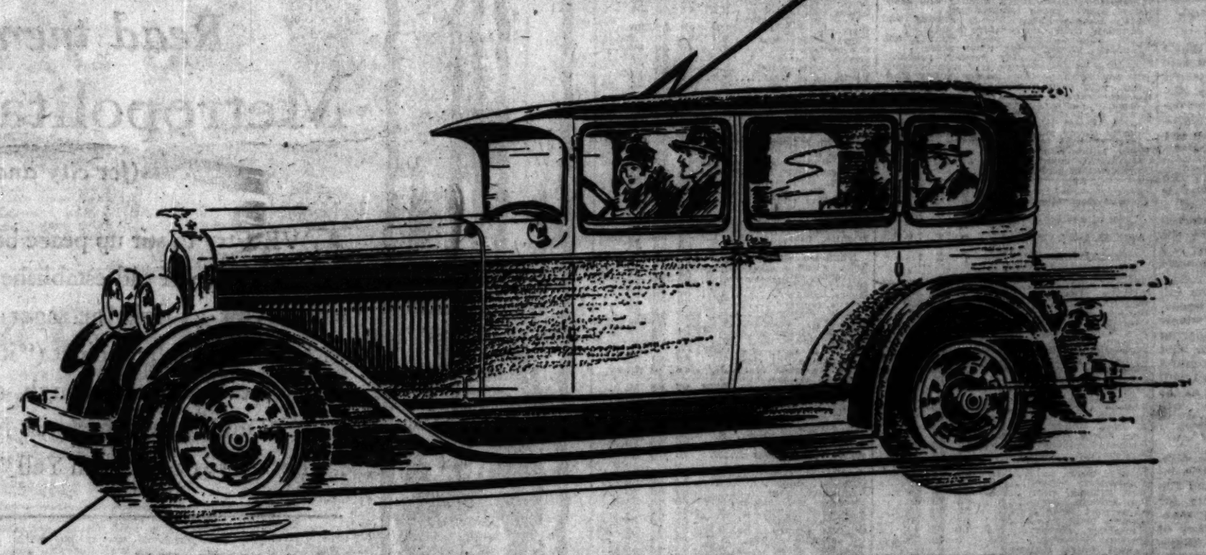
AMERICA'S FIRST TRULY FINE SMALL CAR

What $1895 will buy in the little MARMON 8



The greatest new idea in years in motor car manufacture.

—an automobile made small, but with all the luxury and good taste of the major fine cars, and with these outstanding characteristics—

Performance that issues a standing challenge to anything in traffic or on the open road—70 honest miles per hour, if you care to go that fast. Fastest acceleration ever known—45 to 50 miles per hour in second gear (new system of equi-distant down-draft manifolding gets rid of "starved" cylinder problem and means absolutely even explosions in all cylinders under all conditions, down to less than two miles per hour in high gear—no buckling—no labor.)

Riding ease such as you have never experienced in any car, regardless of size or price. The longest springs in proportion to wheelbase of any car in the world. Springs mounted in husky rubber knuckles instead of shackles, thereby dampening out many sharp road shocks. Built-in Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers.

Lightning-quick handling. Short turning radius combined with light, wristy steering, quiet, easy gearshift, ankle-action clutch and brake pedals and sturdy four-wheel brakes that stay equalized.

Durability and stamina guaranteed first by Marmon precision methods and two years of testing under every conceivable road and climatic condition, and now by the experience of owners, many of whom have driven their cars close to 10,000 miles. Complete line of body styles all under $2000, f. o. b. factory.

Did You Know

that under the Marmon Banking Plan you can drive a new little Marmon 8 out of our salesroom for a down payment of $701.70? The balance in monthly payments of $128.60. Your present car can apply as down payment.

GUNS OF U. S. DRY AGENTS FAIL TO HALT RUM FLOW

Liquor Plentiful Despite Florida Killings.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., April 23.—[Special.]—The third year of the grim "intensive" drive against prohibition violations along the Florida east coast, now waning, is enlisting some interest as to results, locally, as the upshot of recent conflicts in which the coast guard has figured. The much heralded federal "intensive" has been carried on by the coast guard prohibition agents and customs officials and men. The campaign has been prosecuted at a cost of many hundred thousand dollars. The net visible results appear to be included in the following summary:

A vast increase in the amount of rum, gin and whisky imported into Florida, with a present stock at least double that of a year ago, at the end of the tourist season.

The gradual reduction of prices for rum, gin and whisky to a range of from $25 to $40 a case, owing to large supply.

Fire on Private Yachts.

The firing upon a score of private yachts and launches, and in some cases the wounding of owners or guests, in and about Miami harbor.

The nonchalant killing of prisoners by coast guards while captives in the act of surrender or after having submitted to custody.

A great increase in the per capita consumption of liquor in clubs, hotels, and private homes over pre-prohibition days.

Elimination of the casual or occasional rum runner through the "cooperation" by local authorities with federal agencies, and the strengthening of prestige for large rum running fleets with powerful influences ashore.

Twice in the last year important figures in the rum trade have been "bumped off" by coast guardsmen after arrest.

Last year "Red" Shannon, a fleet owner, was captured at the Flamingo hotel yacht basin in Miami Beach in sight of hundreds of tourinsts strolling about the Flamingo grounds. He was ordered to put up his hands, and did so. A guardsman thereupon drilled him through the heart with a rifle bullet. He was indicted, but has not yet been tried.

Last week Charles Waite, a fleet owner, with his Negro chauffeur and engineer, whose boat had grounded a short way south of Miami harbor, was captured and, the trio placed on a coast guard picket boat, which started ostensibly to bring them to Miami.

Throw Prisoners Into Sea.

Somewhere on the journey Waite and his chauffeur were unloaded into the sea, and the surviving prisoner testified that Waite was finally dispatched by a pistol shot as he struggled in the black water, it being night. The Negro was booted back into the sea, the prisoner said, when he attempted to crawl aboard. The survivor, after being shot through the neck, was kicked overboard, after it was found that Waite had pulled a guardsman with him as he was shoved overboard. The guardsman and the survivor were hauled out together and brought to Miami. The others were left to their fates.

The incident might have gone unnoticed excepting for the fact uncovered by the attorney for the widow that Waite owed and was preparing to pay the sum of $84,000 for last year's income tax. As matters stand the blunder of the coast guard will probably cost Uncle Sam $84,000, as the Waite estate, so far as shown, will probably not pay any part of it.

Widow Demands Inquest.

The attorney representing Mrs. Waite has demanded a coroner's inquest in the death of Waite and the possibility of state indictments for something more serious than manslaughter is promised if the story of the surviving companion of Waite stands up.

A fortnight ago E. H. Jones of Coral Gables, navigating his own yacht in Biscayne bay, with three guests, was fired upon by coast guards, and Jones finished his pleasure cruise with a bullet through his head. He was taken to Tallamon hospital and died a week ago. The county authorities are endeavoring to fix blame for the attack, but thus far have been unsuccessful.

The Jones episode was one of a long list of marine engagements in the vicinity of Miami, in which private craft were made targets for coast guard cutter fire. Some complaints, when victims have been prominent enough, have gone to Washington, but no serious prosecutions have resulted.

WOMAN ADMITS PART IN MURDER FOR INSURANCE

Mrs. Lillian Fraser, 45 years old, changed her plea yesterday from not guilty to guilty when she was called before Judge Phillip L. Sullivan in the Criminal court on a charge of participation in the murder, Dec. 6, 1926, of William Lindstrom, 2114 West North avenue. Sentence was deferred until May 6, at which time Loren Patrick, who admitted beating Lindstrom to death with a lead pipe, will also be sentenced on his plea of guilty.

Mrs. Catherine Kassler, 45 years old, of Crown Point, Ind., a co-defendant, persisted in her plea of not guilty and she will be tried by a jury on May 6.

According to Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayers, Mrs. Fraser desired to have Lindstrom killed so that she might collect his $1,000 insurance and return to her husband. Patrick was employed to do the killing, it is charged, through Mrs. Kassler.

Three Arrested as Auto Thieves; Cars Recovered

Charles Kempf Jr., 34, of 913 Concord place, a board of review employé; Leo Podgorfek, 1578 Clybourn avenue, and Samuel Festoso, 1846 Mohawk street, were arrested yesterday when the police discovered that a car parked in front of Podgorfek's home had serial numbers which had been tampered with. At Festoso's home the police found another stolen car, and on information given by them Kempf was taken into custody.

MANY YANKS TO ATTEND JULY 4TH FETE IN DENMARK

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, April 22.—This year, for the fifteenth time, Americans in Europe will assemble in the American National park at Rebild, among the Jutlandian hills, from where the Cimbrian hordes went against the ancient Romans, to celebrate American Independence day, July 4.

Dr. Max Henius of Chicago, the president of the park's American committee, announces that the main speaker will be the American minister to Denmark, Percival Dodge. The Danish king, who fifteen years ago inaugurated the American park here, will be present when Minister Dodge speaks on "The Early Danish Settlers in America." Then the king may deliver a short speech and the American and Danish national hymns will be sung by the assembly, among which will be some hundreds of members of various Danish societies from America.

From the international Rotary congress in Ostend it is expected some 5,000 American Rotarians will go north and visit Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, and they are invited to attend the Rebild festival.

Prof. Arthur J. Todd will preside as toastmaster, and the speakers will include the Rev. John A. Ryan, Dr. Graham Taylor, Jane Addams, Willoughby Walling, and former Mayor William E. Dever.

Members of the committee in charge include Gen. Abel Davis as chairman, Dr. Herman M. Adler, Judge Victor P. Arnold, Mrs. George V. McIntyre, Clifford W. Barnes, Judge Mary Bartelme, Miss Jessie Binford, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, Marion Prentiss, Louis M. Cahn, George W. Dixon, the Rt. Rev. Edward F. Hoban, Miss Amelia Sears, Joel D. GARY SAYS RIGHT REPLACES MIGHT AS BUSINESS ROD

New Standards in Last 25 Years, He Asserts.

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—Within the last twenty-five years there has been a noteworthy change in the standards and practices of American business, a new technique of morality has been evolved and business affairs are now conducted in accordance with belief that right is superior to might that morality looms as large as legality, and that a due observance of both is essential to worthy achievement, according to Elbert H. Gary, writing in the May issue of the Century magazine.

Ethical management brings additional profits to business, and sooner or later it pays in dollars and cents, he believes.

"Public opinion has aroused and probably always will arouse the conscience of men and women," Judge Gary writes. "Our sleep is broken, our digestion interrupted when we oppose the will of the majority; and we can not long enjoy life in the face of public disfavor. We dread the condemnation of the general public, especially if there is reason for it.

Consumption Is Wage Fixer.

"It is not certain that business men have always treated their employés exactly right, or that employés have always been paid adequate compensation for their services. If it be said the employers paid as much as their business would afford, the answer is: the producer should have charged more for his commodities, and the general purchasing public should have shared the burden of increased wages.

"About twenty-six year ago the United States Steel corporation, as a completed organization, established offices and opened its books. The stockholders and the general public have been informed in great detail by its regular reports annually and quarterly from the beginning of the growth and volume of its business and its financial resources and balances.

Steel Is Trade Barometer.

"The iron and steel industry has long been known as the barometer of trade. Occasionally the industry is the thermometer of conditions as well; it is like the mercury moving up and down in accordance with the weather, and that is the saddest and one of the most serious things about it. Why, we ask ourselves, are we not always successful in our business? It is because of a lack of confidence in one another. Often we do not credit fully what our business neighbors say. We suspect they are moved solely by selfish considerations, and possibly this may be true; but do we not overlook the fact that it may be just as true of ourselves?

"A robust faith in the good intention and integrity of one's fellows and a tranquil confidence in the continued well being of this richly endowed country should be a part of every business leader's equipment. The lack of these qualities amounts to a disease and must bear its share of blame for whatever failures American business has suffered.

Golden Rule for Business.

"The iron and steel industry in the United States can do much to promote the golden rule in business. Not only individuals but aggregations should become active participants in promoting the golden rule. Much of large business is negotiated; that is, many of the biggest commercial transactions are consummated in discussions between two or more parties, dealing as man to man, but at arm's length.

"Frequently there are no fixed prices or precise bases for measuring or for valuations, and there is the need of reaching an agreement which is mutually satisfactory or at least acceptable. Under these conditions neither side is obligated to expose what is in its mind as a minimum or a maximum of possible terms or prices. Yet in such cases there can be no excuse for misrepresentation or fraud of any kind.

"It has been said on occasions that certain individuals absolutely have been dominant in the control and management of the United States Steel corporation. Such a statement is wholly contrary to fact; indeed, contrary to reason. Although in the earlier years there were differences of opinion, the corporation's plans and policies have always been carefully considered and harmoniously approved by our finance committee and by our board of directors.

Steel Corporation Has a Soul.

"The United States Steel corporation has been characterized as 'a corporation without a soul.' Whether or not the characterization is true might depend upon one's definition of the word soul. A definition acceptable for this purpose is that a soul is a controlling influence, possessed by individuals or corporations, which recognizes, as of equal importance with its own, the rights, interests, and welfare of others —no greater, no less.

"Under this definition, the United States Steel corporation has striven to secure in all who are interested in its conduct the conviction that it is possessed of a soul. To say that it has sometimes failed in this effort is but to assert that its managers are human."

MEN SEIZED AS FLIRT.

Warren avenue police yesterday arrested Moe Samalack, 24, of 1621 South Homan avenue. Women complained he had sat in a car at Madison street and California avenue and had attempted to flirt with them.

Engineering Feats Increase Safety for Car Drivers

Wacker Drive Cited as an Ideal for U. S. Cities.

POINTING to the engineer as the man who will ultimately relieve the traffic congestion situation, the report of the street traffic committee of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, filed with the directors of that body last week, lists seven leading projects which promise safer driving conditions. All these constructions have either been built or have been approved for building.

"Engineering improvements do not relieve the individual driver of responsibility," says Alvan Macauley, in submitting the report for the committee, "but they do provide highways adapted to modern use, with consequent reduction of probable hazard. The list of improvements does not aim to be complete but merely illustrates what can be done."

Fatal accident records for the larger cities for the first two months of this year were 17 per cent higher than the same period last year. Winter figures may or may not be an index of the trend for the year, since weather conditions have a marked effect on totals during the winter months. In 1926 the totals were very low during the winter yet the year showed an increase.

The introduction of compulsory insurance in Massachusetts has not had the effect of reducing accidents claimed for it, as far as present records indicate. It is believed by leaders in the motor industry that compulsory insurance does not have any beneficial effect in the curtailing of carelessness. If anything, it is felt that it tends to decrease the driver's sense of responsibility. The increase in Massachusetts totals, on the other hand, is believed to be due to a more open winter rather than to any relationship with the insurance.

The projects pointed to as indicating engineering movements of the future are as follows:

Pedestrian subways in Los Angeles.

West side super highway in New York, which will open the lower "dead end" of Riverside drive.

Wacker drive in Chicago, now completed, which has cleared up river front congestion in Chicago.

Proposed main highway reconstruction in Providence, R. I., which will clear up the bottle neck to eastern New England.

WORLD'S GREATEST GARAGE

Framed by this magnificent skyscraper background, which has formed a new skyline along the river since the war, this lake front storage place has become one of the features of Chicago's traffic system. Thousands of cars are parked there daily at 25 cents a car. It is the world's largest outdoor parking place, and in it the city gains its greatest present relief from loop parking congestion.

Receding Floods Leave Roads Fair for Early Tours

Road Crews Prepare Many Detours Around Improvements.

GRAVEL and unimproved highways are somewhat better during the last week through the southern section of the north central states, but remain generally in bad condition for travel in the northern half of this area, according to the touring bureau o fthe Chicago Motor club. High water has caused some trouble along the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, but this does not seriously affect travel. Construction work for 1927 is now under way in many sections. Detours will be marked and maintained in good condition.

Considerable rainfall is reported from several sections of the southern states, and high water will be encountered on some routes. Motorists are advised to secure latest information before traveling through the south.

Light rain during the week had little effect on eastern road conditions. Important routes through the eastern states are improved and in good condition at all times; detours also are improved and maintained in good condition.

Heavy rain is reported from most sections of the central plains states during the week and roads will be muddy for a few days. Continuous rainfall in Oklahoma for several days will make travel uncertain except on hard surfaced highways. Light snowfall is noted through the states of Montana and Wyoming and in Yellowstone park. This, however, should cause little trouble except in case of more snow or rain. Southwestern trails remain in excellent condition.

Work has started on the improvement of Indianapolis avenue from the Illinois-Indiana state line east to Calumet avenue. Other Illinois reports follow:

Peoria—Recent rain made earth detours poor, but these types are settling rapidly and will be in fair condition for travel after a few days.

Bement—Surfaced highways in Platt county are in good condition and free from water. Motorists should avoid earth roads.

Cairo—Floods in this vicinity, especially on Ill-2, have receded and there is no danger of this highway being closed into Cairo. Ferries are operating between Cairo and Bird's Point regularly. Conditions between Cairo and Memphis are good.

Alton—High water of the Mississippi river has caused the Alton ferry to suspend operations. All roads in the Mississippi bottom are covered with water, and it will be several weeks before these roads can be used.

Ill-3—Earth fill washed out north of Alton, but has been repaired for temporary service. Motorists are advised to use care in driving across the temporary bridge until the fill has settled. The river is high at Beardstown, and traffic using this route may be compelled to use ferry at any time.

Ill-4 and 24—Motorists are using 1,500 foot detour and temporary bridge around Sangamon river bridge, which is flooded by water.

Ill-9—Water has been over the pavement between Peoria and Canton, but traffic is having no difficulty at the present time.

Ill-13—This route will be covered when water is high east of Harrisburg during the spring rains.

Ill-21—Bridge out 2.5 miles south of Wheeling; detour is marked over the Winkleman road to Sanders road, then back to Ill-21 over the Palatine road; detour is fair crushed rock.

Ill-26—A temporary bridge has been built across the creek near Berry and travel is again going through over this route. Ferry at Illinois river operating during day only at the present time.

Ill-42A (Green Bay road)—The state tractor has started work on the 13 mile unpaved stretch which will connect the pavements of Ill-43A and Wis-57.

Motor Army Prepares for Biggest Move in U. S. History

THE magnitude of the motor tourist movement in the United States and the record figures it is expected to reach in 1927 are shown in a report received by the Chicago Motor club.

This great migration of nearly a third of the nation seeking health and happiness will move in 10,000,000 motor cars.

Approximately $3,300,000,000 will be spent during this gerat flow and counter-flow of humanity.

The figures represent an estimate that the 1927 touring season will show an increase of ten per cent over last year. This estimate is based on reports from touring bureaus of the 562 American Automobile association affiliated clubs throughout the nation.

Signs of Spring.

Showers and flowers are not the only signs of spring. Detour signs, the "pet peeve" of motorists, are also making their appearance here and there, and more of them are due in a week or two. While weather conditions have delayed starting of all highway work, most of the grading contractors will be busy before the end of the month. Only a few who had work in deep cuts and fills have worked all winter or started in March. Paving work will not start until the subgrade is dry and settled.

Slow Danger.

Recent investigations by the Chicago Association of Commerce's traffic committee cite the "10 mile an hour roadways" as the cause of traffic delays and accidents. It is found that the "slow poke," as well as the speeder, is responsible for accidents and that safety is best achieved when uniform speed in the traffic lane makes it unnecessary for the fast driver to "cut around" the slower one.

RIGHT OF WAY.

Contesting for the right of way is listed by the California State Automobile association as one of the principal causes of automobile accidents.

Grade Crossings in U. S. Called Greatest Menace

Unprotected Traps Take Heavy Toll in Lives.

CALLING attention to the enormity of "the grade crossing crime" in the United States, the American Automobile association has made public figures disclosing that for the year 1925 one motorist out of every nine thousand registered in the United States lost his life in a grand crossing accident as compared with one out of every sixty-five thousand in Great Britain and one out of forty-five thousand in France. The figures cited by the national motoring body, which has constantly urged a greater degree of protection at grade crossings, are based on careful checks made on all main highways.

	United States.	England.	France.
[illegible]	2,206	23	22
[illegible]	19,000,000	1,500,000	1,000,000
[illegible]	2,000	65,000	45,000

"Aside from the reasons and whatever the variations in the cases," continues the statement, "the fact remains that the death toll at grade crossings in the United States is seven times what it is in Great Britain in proportion to the registration and more than five times what it is in France.

"On the English standard of safety, its total number of grade crossing fatalities in the United States should have been not more than 250 as compared with the actual 2,206 in 1925, while on the French standard of safety, the number of grade fatalities in the United States should have been less than 400."

The answer to this striking disparity is found largely in the much greater degree of protection afforded motorists at grade crossings in the European countries selected for the purpose of comparison.

"For out of 232,755 grade crossings used by motorists in the United States only 27,161 have protection in any shape, manner or form," according to the A. A. A. statement, "thus leaving 205,594 entirely unguarded. On the other hand, out of 32,500 grade crossings used by motorists in France, 26,498 are thoroughly protected, leaving only 5,849 unprotected.

"In other words, only eight per cent of the grade crossings in the United States are protected, as compared with eighty per cent in France. Great Britain makes an even better showing in the percentage of protected grades.

"The United States falls short not only in the number of protected crossings, but also in the nature and the efficacy of the protection afforded, for oftentimes what we call protection here is little more than a flimsy excuse—a slow stick held horizontal in front of a grade through which the instantly driver too often crashes his way into a passing express train.

"The 32,000 protected grades in France have real gates as well as day and night watchmen. The same is true of Great Britain. On the other hand, our 27,000 protected grades are guarded as follows:

So-called crossing gates	6,298
Crossing watchmen	7,902
Audible and visible signals	5,710
Visible signals	1,602

"The facts speak for themselves and point to the urgency for action, looking to the diminution of this standing danger to human lives. Our motorists are assuredly not less intelligent than foreign motorists and there is no reason to believe that they are more reckless. The odds are against them in this particular matter."

Big Saving.

Motorists in the United States are saving $2,500,000,000 a year on gasoline, tires, parts, upkeep, renewals and all phases of operation, due to the improved highways of the country.

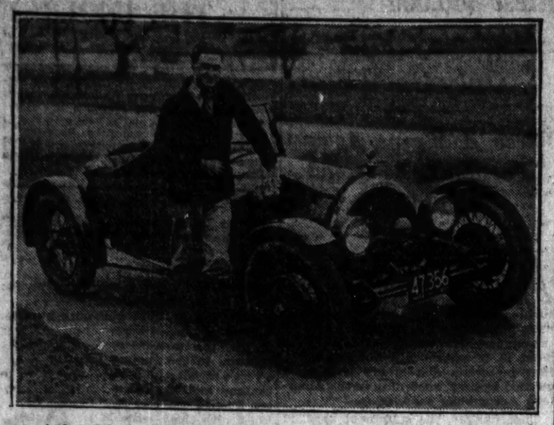
Wider Highway.

Contract for construction of a section of the Lincoln highway wide enough for four lines of traffic between Downingtown and Philadelphia was recently awarded by the Pennsylvania highway department. A section of the Lincoln highway wide enough for four cars abreast now extends from Downingtown eastward beyond the Pottstown Westchester crossroads. The contract awarded will add five additional miles of wide road.

Careless Work.

Sliding the wheels is usually due to a lack of foresight. It not only wears out the tires, but reflects on the driving ability of the operator of the car. Slamming on the brakes is by no means the sign of a good driver. Apply your brakes gradually and save tires and put less strain on the car.

COLLEGE BUILT SPEEDSTER



Automobile prohibition has not yet darkened the lives of technical students, and Arthur Nichols, an undergraduate engineer in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, intends to enjoy to the full this classy little speedster which he built in 365 hours of his spare time last winter. The car, built entirely of spare parts and employing the new front drive principle, has a speed of more than sixty miles an hour.

"WORK BENCH WISDOM"

THE SUPERCHARGER.

IF a supercharger can be designed that will result in higher engine power at low engine speed it will not only result in greater power from an engine having a given piston displacement, but will also give greater flexibility, and that will mean modification of the transmission of the car, said C. R. Short of the research division, General Motors, in an address at the annual meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The use of such a supercharger would permit the size of the engine to be reduced to that required for normal operation on level roads, with the supercharger assuring the necessary reserve power for hill climbing and quick acceleration. The engine could be run at maximum efficiency speed, and the heat generated by the compressor, together with the pulverizing effect of the air blast on the fuel as it enters the cylinders, would result in better mixture distribution with the present motor fuel and the possibility of using heavier fuels successfully.

The object of supercharging, Short explained, is to inject a greater quantity of air and fuel mixture into the engine cylinder at each filling than would normally be possible, and thereby to obtain a greater horse power output from the additional heat units set free during combustion. A pump of suitable design is provided to compress the mixture to the desired pressure and to force it into the cylinder.

The present most successful blower type of supercharger for racing cars is used on the Duesenberg and Miller racing engines. These devices embody a gear driven turbo-compressor and are based on developments by Prof. Rateau in France and Dr. Moss of the General Electric company, at McCook field, Ohio, for airplanes, in which the compressor is driven by the action of the exhaust gas on a turbine.

The requirements for supercharging passenger automobiles vary greatly from those for racing cars, airplanes, and heavy oil engines. Mere intake manifold pressure without other changes will result only in increase of power at maximum speed. The problem, said the speaker, is to design a supercharger that will result in higher engine torque at low speed.

Yankee Builders Seek World-Wide Transport Plan

Automobile Makers Reach Out for Wider Markets.

LOOKING upon the automobile as as a world wide industry, Roy D. Chapin, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, has called for a world wide transport program.

International coöperation with motor manufacturers abroad is forecasted by Mr. Chapin, following the principles developed for the American manufacturers by Col. Clifton, who became honorary president recently.

It manufacturers in all countries will work together for reasonable taxes, adequate highways and low service costs, the volume of increase in motor transport use will be so vast that the manufacturers of all countries will have a much larger business, Mr. Chapin indicated.

"Every country needs an adequate supply of automobiles and commercial vehicles just as much as it needs rail and water service," he said. "The public everywhere will support improvements which will help the growth of motor transport service, as soon as they realize the big economic gains which come from adequate transportation.

"Official figures show that on the average the dollar of 1914 will buy only 60 cents worth of goods today, while the 1914 dollar of the automobile purchaser is buying $1.16 worth of automobile today. Such is the difference between the increase in prices in most commodities, compared with the reduction in the price of automobiles.

"This sound business program of constant striving to reduce prices and increase quality is the basis on which our industry can and I believe always will perpetuate the present favorable attitude of the public toward it.

"I look for a great increase in the world use of the motor vehicle. Our chamber is now joining with the motor manufacturers of Europe in a coöperative effort to assist the undeveloped countries of the world in their problems of highway building, sound taxation of the motor vehicle, and other questions that are incident to the motorizing of those countries.

"At the same time we are particularly mindful of the responsibility upon us in America, for our industry has placed upon the roads more than 26,000,000 cars, trucks, and buses.

"So our whole industry is earnestly behind the proper regulation of traffic for the safer use of the streets and roads, and the production of economical transportation with a maximum of safety and efficiency, and the minimum of cost."

HARDWOOD USERS.

According to estimates of statisticians the automobile industry consumes considerably more hardwood than the furniture and building trades combined.

Short Turns Make Encores in City Traffic Accidents

TRAFFIC checks made by the Chicago Motor club disclose the fact that many motorists are making short left hand turns. It is easier for the driver to make this kind of turn, but it is highly dangerous. A vehicle making the short left hand turn confuses pedestrians and the drivers of other vehicles, for it gets on the wrong side of two streets where it is not expected.

The driver making a short left turn crosses traffic diagonally, making it almost impossible for pedestrians or the drivers of other vehicles to judge the direction or speed of his car. It creates a situation similar to that experienced by the jay walker who crosses a street intersection on an angle. When traffic meets at a right angle, pedestrians and drivers cross with little difficulty, but where an acute angle is established, confusion multiplies with the increase of the angle, and the speed of the vehicles.

This point can best be illustrated by stating a concrete case:

A driver traveling south in the lane to avert an accident. If, however, none turn left. First of all, he cuts off traffic going in the same direction using the inside lane. A collision may result. Traffic, meanwhile, is proceeding in the opposite direction, and a car traveling north has reached the cross walk at the time that the driver making the short turn cuts over. A pedestrian crossing the street from east to west at this point has waited for the north bound car to pass, and just as he steps from behind it, the other car comes at him from an entirely unexpected angle. Neither the driver nor the pedestrian has the time to avert an accident.

The proper way to make a left turn is to move over to the center lane of travel, reach the center of the intersection, and then turn. A signal, of course, must accompany this maneuver.

In making a right hand turn, the driver should get close to the outside lane of travel, and make his turn.

LIGHTNING FAST

...and must be...

BIG bumps, little bumps, holes, ruts, humps—thousands of road irregularities to the minute. Car-springs must work like lightning in cushioning us from these irregularities.

And like lightning also must be the control of spring-recoil, otherwise there is no control because "too late" is simply too late. No place for a lagging mechanism.

The control must do its work in time with the spring-action. One whit slower and its opportunity has gone forever.

Stabilators flash to position and are "on time" to do their work—unfailingly—always. They dissipate each part-up force of the bump-compressed springs before they can lash up at the car body and passengers.

Result!—Results which every motorist wants and which two million motorists are today enjoying.

That Stabilation is the correct means to easy riding and Relaxed Motoring is attested by the number and standing of the Automotive Engineers who have endorsed it. The following have adopted Stabilation as Standard Factory equipment:—

Motor Industry Thrives on Dose of Spring Tonic

Mergers and Mysteries Feature Week in Detroit.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, April 23.—[Special.]—That arrival of real spring weather is acting as a tonic to motorists and prospective motorists is illustrated by the increase in the demand for automobiles, announced by both dealers and manufacturers during the week just closed. The big motor plants have not as yet experienced a deluge, but orders are being received in sufficient numbers to justify the belief that the real buying season is about to climb to a high point.

Since the first of the year there has been nothing to indicate an inactive summer for the great industry. Demand for vehicles has been steady, with a gradual upward tendency. Manufacturers themselves have had no fear of a disastrous slump, or a great falling off of sales. On the whole the industry has shown a condition slightly above normal, with a healthy, upward climb at the present time.

Although the industry will not admit it, there is a distinct uneasiness regarding the plans of William Durant and what his announced drive will develop into. This, with the plans of Ford still unannounced, has unquestionably proved a business drawback in the automobile industry. This spring is no different from others of recent years so far as the public demand for cars is concerned, but prospective buyers are "looking them over" more carefully than ever before.

Employment in the various Detroit automobile plants and accessories shops was practically stationary the last week, as evidenced by the official announcement of the Employers' association. A drop of 435 was registered from the figures of the week previous, leaving a total of 244,654 men employed. This is a decrease of 41,000 from the corresponding week of 1926.

United States financiers are said to be behind the plan of the Austin company of England to enter the American field of manufacture this year. The car mentioned is the Austin seven, 75 inch wheel base car, with an all over length of 110 inches, with standard equipment. Forty thousand cars, built on this chassis, have been produced and sold in the British empire. Tentative plans are for the manufacture of about 25,000 of these cars during the first year of production in this country.

A merger of the Hayes Wheel company of Jackson, Mich., and the Kelsey Wheel company of Detroit is now before the federal department of justice for approval. The announcement brings substantiation of recent rumors that the two companies were to combine. Both are leaders in the automobile wheel manufacturing business in this country. The consolidation was agreed upon by the fact that many automobile manufacturers have taken to making their own wheels.

Failing to obtain sufficiently high bids for the plant of the Rickenbacker Co. at auction sale this week, the Federal court refused to accept any of the bids made. Other bids will be asked.

The company recently was declared bankrupt, a receiver appointed and the plant sold at auction. An estimate placed the value of the property at $4,350,000. The highest bid made was $1,050,000. Prior to the sale, a letter was sent to the stockholders by the receivers suggesting that they form a syndicate to bid in the property as a going concern. The suggestion, however, was not acted upon.

Official production figures just made public show conclusively that Chevrolet is leading the whole industry. In March the plant turned out 107,000 passenger cars and trucks, a daily average of 4,316 units. This compares with 43,495 units in March, 1925 and 65,167 on March, 1926. The total for the first three months was 267,393, a schedule which if maintained, will put the figures for the year well over the million mark. There are employed at the Chevrolet plants a total of 33,142 workmen, an increase of 48 per cent over the corresponding month of 1926.

Note the Number.

Be sure you know the engine number on your car as well as your license number. Often, a motorist is at loss to identify his car when stolen or wrecked because he has no record to check on the machine.

Note the engine number and license number of your car in some secure place so that you can refer to it at any time. Knowing the engine number of your car is a protection against theft, and it is astonishing to know how few motorists have ever checked up on this important item.

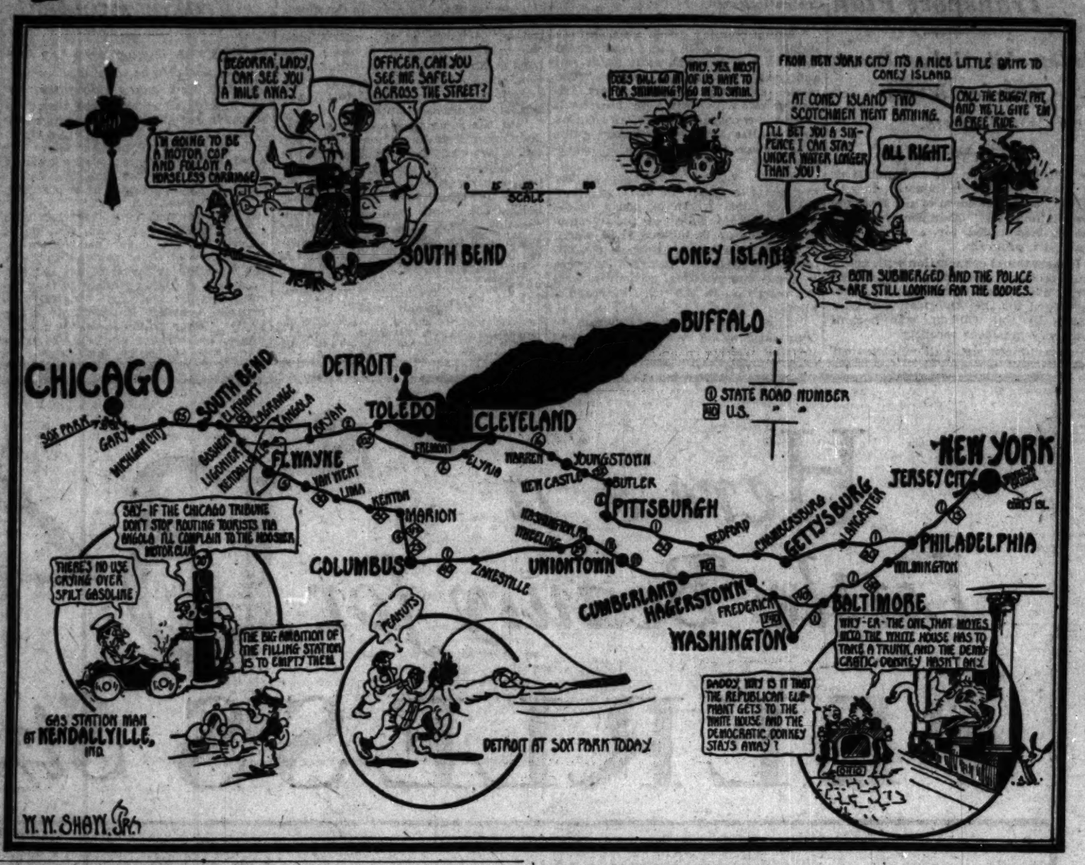
In checking the motor number, do not take for granted the motor number on your registration slip, but investigate for yourself and see that the car which you drive is the car described on your license certificate.

Warning Signs.

Cooperating with city and school authorities in safeguarding children going to and from school, the California State Automobile association has made arrangements to install school warning signs in two more California cities. The association road-signing department is engaged in installation of 14 warning signs near schools in Coalinga, and will also erect 136 similar signs near schools in Sacramento.

TRIBUNE TOURS

VI.—SCENIC EASTERN CIRCLE.



Road for Cuba.

A road building project undertaken in Cuba will make some of the highway builders in the American states look like pikers. Contracts have been let for a paved road 705 miles long, from Pinar del Rio via Havana, Matanzas, Santa Clara and Camagney to Santiago. It is to be paved the entire length, to a width of 20 2-3 feet, with six foot shoulders. The contracts call for completion of the project in five years. The total cost is $75,870,000, or an average of $107,465 per mile. This is more than three times the cost per mile of the 18 foot highways built by the Minnesota highway department, including grading, bridges and right of way.

Accidents Reduced.

During a "no accident week" campaign conducted in Chattanooga, Tenn., recently there were only eight minor accidents and not a single fatality. This record demonstrates conclusively that accidents don't just merely happen but are caused and can be prevented, points out the Chattanooga branch of the National Safety council.

WITH high water and spring rains menacing the main motor routes to the west and south, eastern pavements show up this week as the one best bet for early tourists.

This week's map and tour suggestion shows an unusually interesting circle tour to New York through some of the country's most scenic spots. The roads shown are reported to be in fair to excellent condition. They combine pavement and heavy gravel and stone little affected by wet weather. For drivers heading east the southern route via Columbus and the National highway is recommended with a return over the northern sweep.

First 500,000 Highway Miles Only Good Start

AMERICA'S present highway system far surpasses anything the world has ever known, embracing more than 500,000 miles of surfaced roads threading their way with imposing effect into all parts of the country. Marvelous as this achievement is, it embraces a subtle danger that motorists and others should be warned against, according to the American Automobile association.

That danger, the statement says, is the temptation to become satisfied with the present situation, to regard the present hard-surfaced highway mileage as sufficient for the nation's needs.

"The public and the public official must realize constantly that the time when it may rest upon its oars in the matter of highway building is far, far in the future," the appeal adds. "Our progress in road building has been remarkable. But, if the fine promise of the automobile for even further strengthening the economic fabric of America is to be realized fully, we must make even more remarkable progress."

The millions of motor tourists are peculiarly susceptible to the temptation to regard the present road mileage as ample if they limit their travel to the more progressive sections of the country, the A. A. A. points out.

"It is true that, in greater or smaller degree, a vast majority of America's 22,000,000 motor car owners go in for touring. This driving, in the main, is confined to the best mileage of the more than 3,000,000 miles of highway that exist in the United States. Because of this fact, the motorist is likely to judge the whole highway system by that part of it over which he travels.

"It is the old story of judging the box of strawberries by the large, luscious fruit on the top. Just as the berry buyer regrets his purchase when his error is discovered, so the motor car owner eventually will bemoan his bad judgment if he assumes the national highway system to be perfect because his touring has been confined to the best of the roads. It is a mental trap into which one easily may fall unless one is wary of the danger of its presence.

"America has enormous floor space and tremendous resources in the important matters of finance and genius and the automobile needs increasingly more room in which to fulfill its promise. Thus, while the need is present, the means by which it may be met also are available.

"Bringing the two together is a matter of constant alertness, constant realization that the need for expansion exists. This task does not belong to the few far-sighted individuals among public officials and motor club executives. It is one for the multitude.

"For this reason, no motorist should allow himself to regard the highway system as adequate merely because it provides him, personally, with sufficient good hard surfaced mileage. There are millions in all parts of the country whose automobile travel still is confined largely to muddy, rutty, almost impassable roads. In addition, there is convincing evidence even in our large cities and contiguous territory that the automobile rapidly outgrows what may appear to be a more than sufficient network of good streets and highways."

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, Jesse Lathrop, 2323 West Walnut street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What precautions should be taken and changes made in the car now for the spring and summer?

Where Asked.

State street and Austin avenue.

The Answers.

Ivan Biggar, 5634 Kenmore avenue, superintendent — First of all, the anti-freeze solution in the cooling system should be drained and the radiator flushed out and refilled with clean water. Top hose and cooling connections should be gone over and repaired or renewed. The cooling system is probably the most important unit of the car in hot weather.

C. G. O'Dell, 822 Lawrence avenue, service man—The owner who wants to get most out of his car this spring and summer and save repair bills will have the entire machine inspected and everything tuned up to the minute right now. Oil should be changed, grease changed in the differential and transmission and the motor gone over.

J. R. Hamilton, 3444 North Ridgeway avenue, mechanic—It is a good plan to have the car thoroughly inspected by some good mechanic now and to take care of the many little things that grow into big repair bills if they are allowed to pass. The front wheels should be measured up and aligned, the motor cleaned and tuned, oil changed, and the body bolts tightened for summer driving.

Arthur Hawkett, 1110 Conway building, manager—The motor should be given a going over about now, the cooling system cleaned out and the electric system checked for shorts and loose wires. Winter driving is hard on a car and leaves it with many little repair jobs. Warm weather affects the tires that have been given hard use in the winter time. It pays to inspect the tires for small cuts and breaks.

Bernard Borst, 2515 Fargo avenue, real estate—The car should be given a thorough oiling and greasing and the motor should be gone over. The carburetor should be reset for warmer weather and the cooling system cleaned out. A thorough inspection by some good service station pays dividends in economy operation.

Mark the Tube.

After having gone through the trouble of locating a small puncture in an inner tube an excellent idea is to mark a ring around the puncture so if by chance you lay the tube down you can easily identify the damaged part without having to again spend a great deal of time and patience locating the tantalizing pinhole puncture.

Prices on all classes of live stock for last week, hogs establishing new low levels for the last two years. Cattle broke sharpest after mid-week, finishing at the low point of the month and lost to $1.00 under last week's peak prices.

The week's general average price of good beef cattle at $10.80 stands lowest since week ending March 26, but is higher than any corresponding period since 1920. Receipts of cattle at 37,100 were within 2,000 of the largest since last January.

Calf receipts at 17,100 were third largest in nine months and pressed prices down 50c to $1.00, closing sales showing losses of $3.00 since three weeks ago. Top beef steers at $13.65 compare with $14.00 last week and with $10.50 a year ago. Yearlings in bad lots stopped at $12.85, two head averaging 1,115 lbs bringing $13.25.

More Hogs Come to Market.

The increased marketward movement of hogs last week in face of narrowed shipping outlet, precipitated prices to the lowest level since 1925. Arrivals during the week totaled 138,600, showing a gain of 21,800 over the preceding week and stand greater than a year and two years ago. April hog receipts are running 20,000 larger than the corresponding period a year ago.

Medium and weighty butcher hogs were more plentiful and advanced the estimated average weight to 242 lbs, within 2 lbs of the heaviest since early last October. Barring a year ago, hogs are averaging heavier in weight than in any corresponding time in over five years. Prices during last week averaged $10.85, lowest since December, 1925, and $1.70 under a year ago.

A slight "comeback" featured the hog market on the week-end session, but offerings were hardly large enough to establish quotations. Quality was lacking and top and general average remained unchanged at $10.90 and $10.45, respectively, against a top of $11.85 and average of $11.00 the previous Saturday. Daily top prices during the week tumbled from $11.50 to $10.90.

Sheep Receipts Small.

Dwindling sheep receipts, the total for the week at 60,900, being smallest since June, 1926, failed to check the downward swing of prices, which closed at the low point of the week. Matured fat suffered the most loss, finishing $1.00@1.50 below a week earlier and lowest in a month's time. Top woolskin lambs during the week stopped at $13.75, with short stock at $16.10, and native springers, for "Greek" trade, at $17.50.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 30,000 cattle, 28,000 hogs, and 12,000 sheep, against 19,761 cattle, 40,996 hogs, and 13,811 sheep a week ago, and 29,679 cattle, 33,943 hogs, and 18,625 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 57,000 cattle, 130,000 hogs, and 50,000 sheep, against 98,879 cattle, 132,509 hogs, and 9,700 sheep a year ago.

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

Foreign demand for cash wheat was fairly good, with sales of 500,000 to 600,000 bu in all positions, largely Manitobas, with 50,000 bu rye. Exporters bought 250,000 bu rye Friday from Duluth at 9¼@9½c over Chicago May c. i. f. Montreal and 150,000 bu Canadian.

Chicago handlers sold 10,000 bu wheat, 162,000 bu corn, and 35,000 bu oats to the domestic trade.

Demand for cash wheat was fair, with the spot basis here and in the southwest unchanged. No. 2 red brought ¼@1c over and No. 2 hard 2@4c over May, with No. 3 red ½@5c under and No. 3 hard May price to 4c under.

Offerings of cash corn were very small, hardly sufficient to establish a market, with the basis steady to ½c higher. No. 3 grades were ½c over to 2½c under May, No. 4 grades 1¾@3½c under, No. 5 grades 2¾@5c under, and No. 6 grades 4¼@6c under. Outside markets were unchanged to ½c higher.

PROVISION TRADE LIGHT

Interest in provisions is limited and prices had a small range with lard futures 5@7½c higher, owing to lighter pressure from sellers, while short ribs were 5c lower to 5c higher, and bellies 2½c lower to 7½c higher, the latter on July. Shipments of meats were nearly 5,000,000 lbs less than last year, and lard was 1,000,000 lbs more than a year ago, counting the week's returns. Exports of lard on Friday were 2,942,912 lbs and bacon 50,000 lbs.

Hogs were 10c higher, with 4,000 received at Chicago, and estimates are for 38,000 for Monday and 130,000 for next week. Western points had 23,400 for the day, against 28,707 a week ago, and 33,858 hogs last year. Packing in Chicago since March 1, aggregates 868,000 hogs, compared with 757,000 last year. ADDRESS T T-273, TRIBUNE

WINNIPEG ACTS AS BOOSTER OF PRICE OF WHEAT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Strength in wheat in Winnipeg offset to a large extent the effect of favorable weather conditions over the southwest and west, and after an early break prices rallied to above Friday's finish, easing off again toward the last on week-end evening up, and closed ⅛c higher to ¼c lower with May $1.33¾@1.33⅞; July, $1.30⅛@1.30¾, and September, $1.29¼.

Corn declined early under local pressure, but advanced 1@1¾c from the low with unconfirmed reports of liberal cash sales, and closed ¼c to ⅝c higher with May, 71¾c to 72c; July, 77¾c to 77⅝c, and September, 81½c to 81¾c. Oats lost ⅛c to ¼c, with May 44¼c to 44⅜c; July, 45¼c to 45½c, and September, 44¾c. Rye advanced ⅝c with May, $1.02¾; July, $1.00⅝, and September, 95¾c.

Wheat Higher for Week.

A slight change in crop conditions in the winter wheat belt, with apprehension of damage due to freezing temperatures, led to increased interest in the wheat market and a higher level of values, the finish being 1¼@2¼c higher, as compared with the previous week, with July leading.

Corn gained 1⅞@2c; oats, ⅝@¾c, and rye ½@1¾c for the week. Provisions were unsettled, and while lard finished 2½c lower to 2½c higher, short ribs were off 45c and bellies 77½@80c for the week.

Local traders were on the selling side of wheat early, and there was pressure on May from houses with northwestern and eastern connections. Winnipeg, however, showed strength and the pit element quickly changed to the buying side, making a rally of ⅝@¾c from the early low, with July showing relatively more strength than May, the spread at the last being 2¼c. Winnipeg was ⅛@¾c higher at the close, with buying to remove hedges against export sales a factor.

Weather conditions over the belt were more favorable, with the weekly forecast for occasional precipitation with temperatures normal or below. Northwestern messages claimed seeding would be general within a few days with continued favorable weather. The seaboard reported export sales of 500,000 to 600,000 bu in all positions. Liverpool closed unchanged to ¼d lower, and Buenos Aires ½c lower.

Less Pressure on Corn.

The pit element were on the selling side of corn early, but toward the last there was scattered buying on unconfirmed talk of liberal shipping sales, and the close was at the top. Commission house interest was light. Local arrivals were only 16 cars. The trade looks for a fairly good decrease to be shown in the visible supply on Monday.

More favorable weather for oats seeding led to a lower range of prices, although investors bought July and September, and cash interests took the May and sold July.

Rye showed independent strength on prospects of a liberal reduction in the visible supply. Duluth shipping 1,261,000 bu to eastern ports, and seaboard reported 50,000 bu sold to Germany, while Norway asked for offers. The May-July spread narrowed to 1⅞c at the last, against 2c at the finish on Friday.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Grain traders are moderately bullish and buying on breaks and taking profits on the quick bulges where possible, although the volume of trade coming in from the outside is too light to permit handling of good sized lines without affecting values on both sides of the market. The disposition is to sell May wheat and corn on bulges with expectations that May wheat will drop to about even with July, while in corn, carriers are taking the May and selling the July. The spread yesterday was 5½c. In all, it is largely a pit traders' market, with weather and crop conditions the most important factors.

Large shipments of grain suggest a good decrease in Chicago stocks for the week and expectations are that there will be a liberal decrease in the visible supplies of all grains in Monday's statement. Kansas City, Minneapolis and Duluth stocks are to decrease heavily as the latter market has been a large shipper by lake during the last week.

Estimates on world's shipments of wheat for the week, are for 14,100,000 bu, compared with 14,221,000 bu the previous week, and 10,374,000 bu last year.

"Damage from floods and freezing is problematical, but delayed seeding of the spring crop is a certainty," says J. P. Griffin of J. S. Bache & Co. "Any further interference with the operations will result in reduced acreage. Meanwhile, the old crop position in wheat looms up more bullish. Broomhall estimates that the world's visible supply of wheat and flour has decreased 30,000,000 bu since last month. This is a fabulous shrinkage when measured against the enormous world's shipments. Production seems to have been accurately gauged, but there is no doubt that requirements have been under estimated. We see no probability of any serious decline from this level from the most favorable conditions."

Reports from Springfield, Ill., said that corn shellers were running full blast again, which should increase receipts of corn in a week or ten days.

New York reported arrangements for four full cargoes for grain, spring shipment, a small premium being paid for bookings over prevailing quotations

NEW YORK, April 23.—SUGAR—Sugar has developed into a better demand and prices yesterday were strong to 5 points higher on raws. A general renewal of domestic and foreign buying, combined with coverings by shorts, were the main feature. Reports from Cuba are of irreparable damage, as the usual spring rains have been lacking. LEECH DEPICTS ROME AS TRUE MARXIAN STATE

BY HARPER LEECH.

Now that Mussolini apparently has achieved the miracle of setting up a syndicalist state, which substantially conforms to the canons of the I. W. W. and elicits the praise of Wall street, a pop-eyed world is entitled to speculate on what next!

Suppose the superman decides to be a Constantine as well as a Cæsar? He may convoke an oecumenical council to purify and regenerate the gospel according to Saint (Karl) Marx. This writer can pretend to no canonical authority, but it is certainly no rash intrusion into the fold of another social faith to pronounce the schismatics and sectaries of Moscow heterodox.

They have departed from the fundamental of the Communist manifesto—the materialist conception of history. Their Lenin worship with its parades, pilgrimades, pictures, and images is clearly a mystagogue Gnosticism. Their speeches and printed propaganda for consumption outside Russia reek with 18th century bourgeoisie clap trap about "liberty, equality, and fraternity" long since pronounced anathema by Marx and Engels. Mussolini is the only orthodox socialist today—even if he has harnessed nationalism and international finance to the bizarre team which pulls his socialist chariot.

Mussolini, in putting the Italians to work, has harnessed the most sturdy European race, some observers think. High birth rates, high death rates—in other words natural selection, have winnowed out chaff for several generations. In concentrating on hydro electric development the Duce is tackling the job other civilization fumbled.

Right now on the Mississippi we witness the same old failure of man and his engineering science to cope with the problem of an alluvial river. Only on the Nile, where nature herself provided the storage headwater lakes, have floods ever been reliable in volume and time. On the Po and the Chinese rivers this ancient failure is written large, but Mussolini is catching his rivers by the head, not the tail, and bridling and bitting them with dams and dynapos.

Newspapers are eloquent documents, if you read them right. A Tokio cable the other day mentioned the failure of the "Nobles bank." It was founded when the feudal diamios of Japan were given bonds in exchange for their ancestral lands. No other oriental society, except Japan, ever passed through such a period of feudalism and chivalry. That's why the western white man and the Japanese have so much in common, despite the chasm of color and breed. Their cultural and ethical heritage are much alike. Both are masterful and aristocratic in tone.

The most authentic and indigenous part of the westerner's cultural heritage may be found in the ideas of the King Arthur legends. One must go as far back as Homer or as far east as Japan to find much stuff like that. It helps to explain why the Japanese took so readily to the white man's latter day culture—his industrialism, political state, armies, navies, and so called "imperialism." It helps explain the similar attitude of the authentic westerner and the Japanese toward the servile revolts of China.

It suggests why Americans in the Russo-Japanese war instinctively sympathized with yellow men of partly similar mental habits against fairer men, more foreign to them in the world of ideas.

Chicago's Cotton Trade Making Good Enlargement

Cotton trading in Chicago has increased materially of late and reached the largest volume since it started. On Thursday sales were 50,000 bales, and on Friday 46,000 bales, while Saturday's business was also good sized. Chicago has the making of one of the largest cotton markets in the country, as the situation favors continued enlargement.

In Chicago net gains on futures were 19 to 25 points, and in other markets 18 to 24 points. Spots were up 20 points, with New York 15.52c, New Orleans 14.75c, and Houston 15c. Prices in leading markets follow:

"Ticker Topics"—A Tipster Publication.

"Ticker Topics" is another tipster service similar to those against which we have warned our readers in a number of former articles.

Like other publications of this type, an attempt is made to get the reader's confidence by an alleged analysis of the market in general and by a discussion of the market position and future movements of a number of high class stocks such as Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, United States Steel, International Harvester, General Motors, etc.

Cleverly linked with these, as if it were in the same class, is a discussion of the stock they are really trying to foist on the public.

In the bulletin we have before us the pet stock is "Perpetual Petroleum," a stock of which we have never heard and concerning which we are unable to get any information.

The bulletin says:

"We advise the immediate purchase of this stock and believe it is the outstanding speculation of years. If you do not buy Perpetual Petroleum in our opinion you should stop speculating."

It then goes on to state that, if a well should be brought in on the company's property, the stock [which is selling on the Boston curb for a fraction of a dollar per share] could easily be worth about $16 per share.

There is nothing to indicate that this stock has any intrinsic value or is anything more than a hazardous speculation —or that the company even has a single oil well—and yet the reader is led to believe that he has a rare opportunity to make a fortune in this stock.

Subscribers to such "services," or those who are unfortunate enough to be on the mailing list to receive them gratis, should realize that they are not published in the interest of the investor but purely to promote the sale of stocks—and those usually of the wildcat variety—in which the publisher is personally interested.

There are several reputable investors' services which give impartial advice.

These have no ax to grind. They are not interested in the sale of any stock, but make their money out of the subscription price.

Such services are conducted by men well qualified and versed in financial matters and base their opinions on carefully compiled statistics.

While such services are far from infallible—as it is not possible accurately to predict the market—they, at least, are unbiased and their advice and prognostications are more authoritative than those of the layman.

They are not investors' services but promotion literature for the sale of stocks in which the publisher is interested.

They cannot be expected to give impartial advice.

The real purpose of "Ticker Topics" is divulged in this statement appearing in fine print at the bottom of the bulletin:

"We are often personally interested in securities which we discuss and recommend."

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

New York, April 23.—[Special.]—With trading on the stock exchange the heaviest today of any Saturday since Nov. 14, 1925, transactions were marked by the same backing and filling that has been familiar in recent weeks. Certain issues, mainly in the railway group, were bid up actively, but these gains were largely offset by equally sharp reactions in other sections of the market.

Delaware & Hudson was the leader of the rail group, showing a net gain of six points. The Missouri Pacific issues were on heavy buying. United States Cast Iron Pipe attracted most attention among the industrials with a net gain of 7¾ points. Freeport Texas, Du Pont, General Motors, and United States Rubber sold off from two to more than three points.

U. S. Steel Shows Strength.

United States Steel common regained its market supremacy over General Motors when it duplicated its previous high of 173⅝. Wall street is eagerly watching the relative movements of the two stocks, which are the traditional bellwethers of the market.

The shares of the Briggs Manufacturing company were sold heavily following the reports of the explosion at its plant in Detroit. The total turnover was 21,-00 shares. The stock sold off for a loss of 1½ points, closing at 29½ after touching a low of 25¾. The partial recovery at the close was due to reassuring statements by officials. The shares of automobile manufacturers which are supplied with bodies by Briggs were not affected.

Railroad Group Moves Up.

Railroad shares finished the week with a flourish. In addition to Delaware and Hudson, Atchison at 136⅝ and Reading at 114⅜ both represented new high records for many years, while Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central, Lehigh Valley, Chesapeake and Ohio and Southern Pacific and Union Pacific constituted the upward marchers in the high price rail parade.

Activity and an upward price range also prevailed in the lower priced rails, among the leaders being St. Paul issues, Chicago and Great Western, New York, Ontario and Western, Peoria and Eastern, Reading 2d preferred, Western Maryland and Western Pacific.

The gains that prevails in petroleum securities circles sent Marland, Phillips, Sinclair and Standard Oil of California to new levels for the year.

New York Banks' Loans Rise.

Loans, discounts and investments of the New York clearing house banks and trust companies this week increased $21,-58,000, according to the report issued today. Excess reserve increased $21,174,-00 to a total of $22,290,270, and aggregate reserves was $627,714,000. Net demand deposits increased $20,058,000 and time deposits decreased $10,658,000.

YELLOW TRUCK SALES EXPAND, PROFITS DROP

Keen competition in the motor truck and bus industry is reflected in the annual report of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing company, a division of the General Motors corporation. Although net sales last year were $44,-196,127, an increase of $16,966,445 over 1925, net profit dropped to $1,125,922 from $1,530,742.

Last year's net income was equivalent, after preferred dividends, to only 6 cents a share on 1,809,000 class B shares, compared with $2.12 a share on 600,000 class B shares and to 91 cents a share on the combined class B and $00,000 common shares in 1925. After payment of preferred and class B dividends last year there was a net loss of $627,578.

Surplus at the beginning of 1926 was $1,981,348, but earned surplus at the end of the year was reduced to $1,073,770. In addition to this earned surplus there is a paid in surplus of $7,000,000 representing the $10 a share received in excess of par value on 700,000 class B shares issued during last year. Last year's earnings and the surplus include the profit of $375,744 earned by the Yellow Manufacturing Acceptance corporation, a subsidiary.

The balance sheet as of Dec. 31, 1926, shows current assets of $28,855,339 and current liabilities of $3,515,712. A new item of $5,946,180 is shown as investment in affiliated companies. Total assets are $47,607,647.

PRACTICAL, BEST DESCRIBES THIS SIX ROOM HOUSE

Has Full Measure of Charm, Also.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

The physical comfort which is afforded by a correctly planned house is as great proportionately as the joy which comes from a house artistically and handsomely designed.

LOUISE BARGELT.
[Perry-Atlas Photo.]

No real boon is ever conferred upon a family by trusting into its hands a house which is inconvenient to live in. Constant irritations arise from illy arranged rooms.

In the end the home owner is antagonized and becomes distinctly rebellous against all aspects of home ownership. His discomforts are quite as actual as those of the man who finds himself the possessor of a badly constructed home, one which requires constant repair bills in its yearly upkeep.

This is where the competent architect figures so importantly.

An architect's plans and specifications insure a charm of exterior rendering, a correct placing of the house on the lot that the maximum landscaping possibilities may be brought out; an interior comfort which has been thoughtfully worked out in detail.

In addition to these features he makes possible an economy in the actual building construction and low maintenance bills from year to year.

Attractive and Practical.

The architects of this house shown today are Edward D. James and Joseph D. Small, 241 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind. They were given the eighth prize in the six room division of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Homes Competition.

The reasons briefly stated for awarding a prize to this design were the attractiveness and practicability of the dwelling from every standpoint.

It is the type of house which can accommodate itself to almost any size lot. Designed so that it can be placed on a thirty-five foot frontage, there is no room which depends for its air and sunlight on either side exposure. This means that even should a house be built closely on each side of it, all the rooms would have a generous allowance of sun and air.

Allowance has also been made for landscape development, both at the front and the back, so that with no undue expense both lawns could be charmingly enhanced by flowers and shrubbery and incidentally the material value of the residence greatly increased.

Salmon Colored Brick.

The exterior walls are to be of salmon colored brick with stone trim of lintes and soft yellows. If a brick veneer construction is employed, air space should be provided between the sheathing and brick as insulation against air leakage due to shrinking of wood construction at all windows and doors.

Much of the attractiveness of a brick wall depends upon the pattern in which the brick is laid and on how the mortar joints are finished.

The roof is of variegated slate. Observe its graceful lines and the characterful appearance of the chimney. One can not say too much regarding good chimney design and good construction. This is of brick, with fire clay lining and all angles and points where pipes on chimney pass are flashed.

The entrance hall reveals an economy of floor space in its slim length and leads to the living room, the rear entry and to the stairs which lead to the second floor.

The hall and living room are finished with heavy board floor, 6 inches and 8 inches wide with the joints V grooved. The stair railing is of wood with heavy turned balusters, one to each step.

A Fireplace.

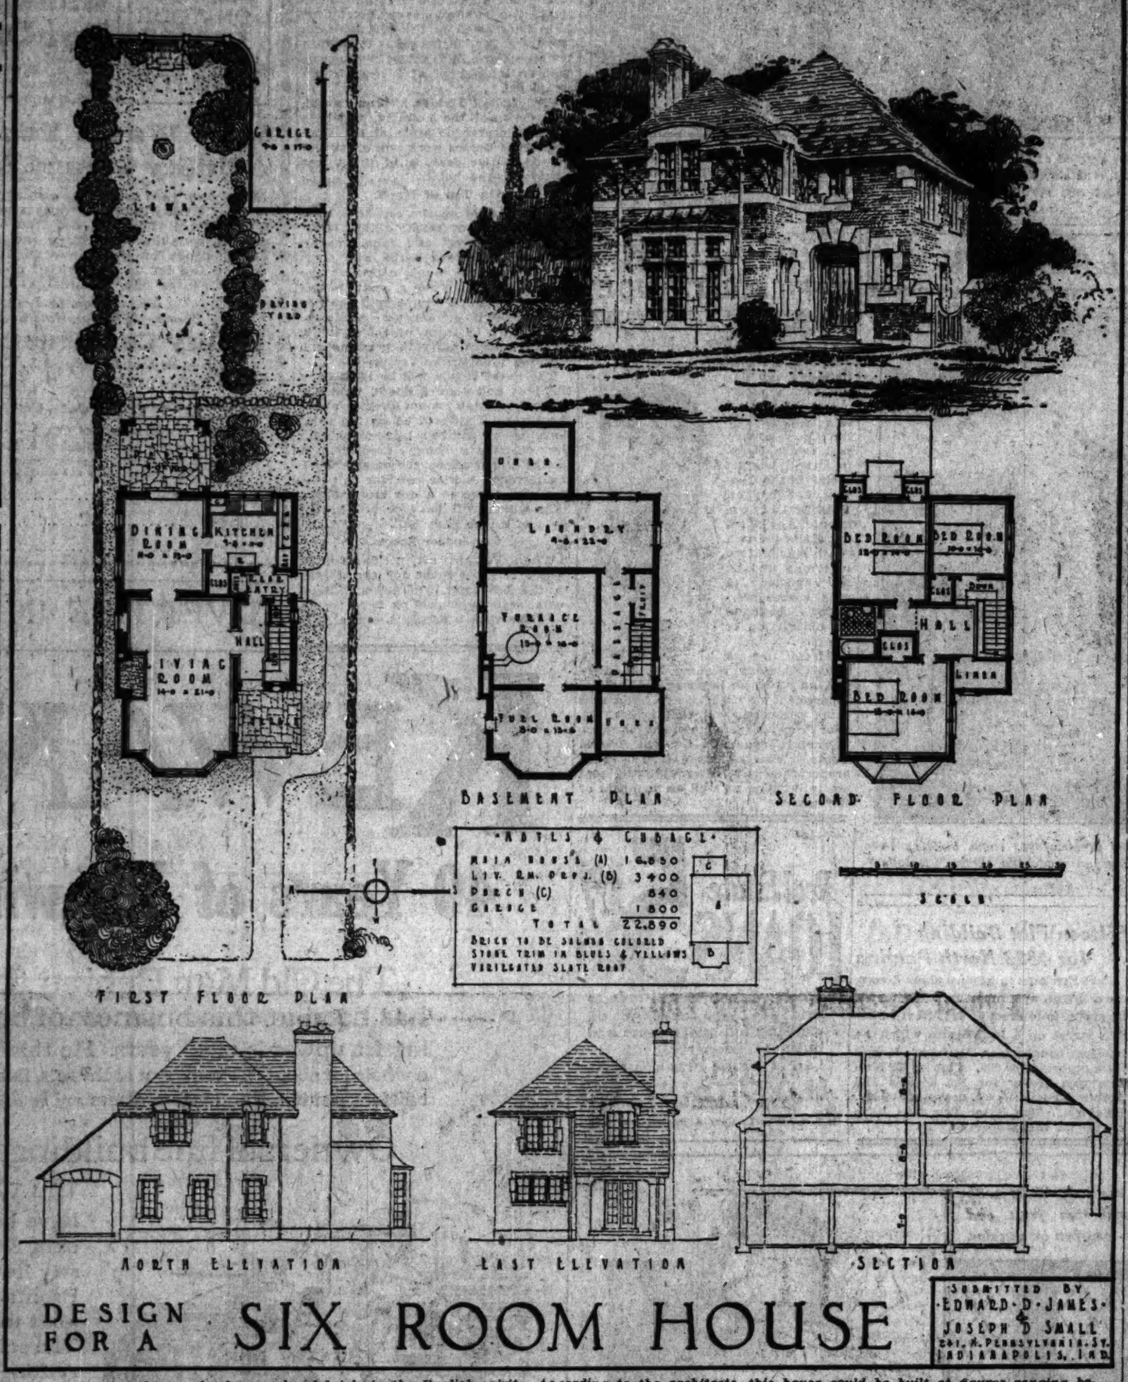
The fireplace in the living room is of stone of simple Jacobean design with space allowed for a wall hanging over it. The ceiling here is beamed by doubling the flooring joists of the second floor and putting them two feet on center. The plastering of the ceiling will be 6 inches above the bottom of the floor joists. In the angle between the ceiling panels and the walls there will be a small wood molding.

The baseboard and window and door trim in the living and dining rooms and hall will be of gum of the simplest possible design. The baseboard is to be 4 inches high and ⅝ inch wide, absolutely plain, with a plain shoe mold. The window and door casings will be 3 inches wide and plain.

The kitchen is to be finished in two tones of gray with a black composition floor and black trim to doors, shelves and cabinets. The main part of the cabinets and side walls will be the same gray and ceiling will be a much lighter shade of gray.

Upstairs, the treatment will be practically the same for the bedrooms as for the main downstairs living rooms. These are to be papered with typical cretonne print papers. In the bathroom the floor is of tile, with wainscot 4 feet 6 inches high, and shower attachment in the tub recess.

IN THE ENGLISH SPIRIT



DESIGN FOR A SIX ROOM HOUSE

SUBMITTED BY EDWARD D. JAMES & JOSEPH D. SMALL 241 N. PENNSYLVANIA ST. INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

A six room house of salmon colored brick, in the English spirit. According to the architects, this house could be built at figures ranging between $8,500 and $10,000. It is the eighth prize in the six room division of The Chicago Tribune Homes Competition; architects, Edward D. James and Joseph D. Small, 241 North Pennsylvania street, Indianapolis, Ind.

OVERLOOKING THE RIVER

Vitzthum & Burns' designed the above building, which the La Salle club announces for the southeast corner of Wacker drive and Wells street. Details in another column.

LEASES SOUTH EAST CORNER FOR 99 YEARS

Members to Use Ten Upper Floors.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Wacker drive, long predicted home of theaters, clubs, and hotels, and at present minus any of the trio so far as actual individual buildings are concerned, is going to be the site of what will be one of the city's most imposing club structures if present plans are carried out as announced. The La Salle club yesterday secured the southeast corner of Wells street and the river boulevard on a 99 year lease and state a thirty story club and office building is to be erected when present leases permit, which will be within a few months.

W. H. DANGEL.
[Moffett Photo.]

Vitzthum & Burns have drawn plans for a skyscraper which will be just twenty feet west of the Builders' building. They promise that the south wall of the new club building, which will be visible from all parts of the loop, will be architecturally treated and of the same materials as the front elevations. The east wall, which will be visible from the east and north east, also will be properly cared for architecturally, it is stated by the architects.

Will Use Ten Upper Floors.

The club will use ten of the upper floors and will have the usual features the modern metropolitan organization of this kind boasts. The swimming pool will be on the eighteenth floor. There'll be approximately 300 sleeping suites.

According to William H. Dangel, president of the Lovejoy Tool works, who is head of the La Salle club, the commercial part of the building will extend from the first to the seventeenth floors, inclusive.

Thomas J. Sullivan, managing director of the club, outlines an ambitious and comprehensive plan to make the building an "executive headquarters of industrial associations and foreign consuls."

"It is expected that at least thirty-five foreign governments will take advantage of the privilege of maintaining permanent exhibits of the outstanding products of their countries," said Mr. Sullivan.

Will Wreck Present Building.

The club site, fronting 80½ feet on Wacker drive and 150 feet on Wells street, has been leased for ninety-nine years, beginning May 1, 1927, from the Garrett Biblical institute. The average rental is reported to be $61,582, making a gross of approximately $6,098,664. On a 5 per cent basis this makes a land value of $1,231,650, or $102 per square foot. The present five story building, bought by the club, will be wrecked as soon as leases permit.

The officers of the club are: Mr. Dangel, president; Earl L. McClatchie and Warren C. Burgess, vice presidents; William C. Calvert, secretary; Thomas J. Sullivan, treasurer. The directors are: Hans Mendius, J. Edgar Lee, Harry F. Prussing, Bernard A. Lund, Karl A. Vitzthum, George F. Killinger, and S. Mayer.

First Announced in 1925.

The La Salle club was first announced in the Chicago papers on April 12, 1926. It was then stated that a site on La Salle, north of the river, was contemplated. On July 9, 1925, a proposed Greater Chicago Community club was announced, which would have "as a subsidiary organization, the La Salle club." It was to be housed in twin seventeen story buildings. The present club's executive offices are in the Stock Exchange building.

Prussing & Co. were brokers for the club in acquiring the site and Fred J. Tucker of Willoughby & Co. represented the lessor. Winston, Strawn, Shaw & McKinley, Killinger & Babb were attorneys.

FINCHLEY HOUSE

This quaint bit of English architecture is soon to be found in the loop for Finchley & Co., a New York clothing firm, which proposes to erect the building pictured above at 19-23 East Jackson boulevard. The design is by Beverly S. King of New York, in association with Alfred S. Alschuler of Chicago. E. W. Strauss & Co. have underwritten a $750,000 loan on the project.

City's Biggest Book Shop for New Tower

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Here's a bit of real estate news that ought to make pleasant reading for book lovers, book worms, first edition hounds and just the common garden variety of readers. Brentano's, Inc., has leased approximately 16,000 square feet of space in the Pittsfield building where it will open next spring the largest and one of the most handsome book stores in the city.

MARSHALL FIELD.

The Pittsfield building is under construction at the southeast corner of Washington street and Wabash avenue for the estate of Marshall Field and incidentally it was named in honor of the little town in Massachusetts where Mr. Field got his first taste of work. It is to be ready for occupancy in October.

Brentano's present store is at 218-24 South Wabash and its new emporium will have a frontage of forty-five and a half feet on Washington street, at the corner of Garland court, and will extend the entire depth of the building on both the first floor and in the basement.

Twenty Year Lease.

Dating from May 1, 1928, the book firm's lease is for twenty years and calls for a minimum rental of $1,250,000 over the period.

At that rate it looks as if Peggy, the well known chorus girl, will have to be educated to the advantage of owning more than one book so she can do her part in keeping the wolf away from the Brentano door.

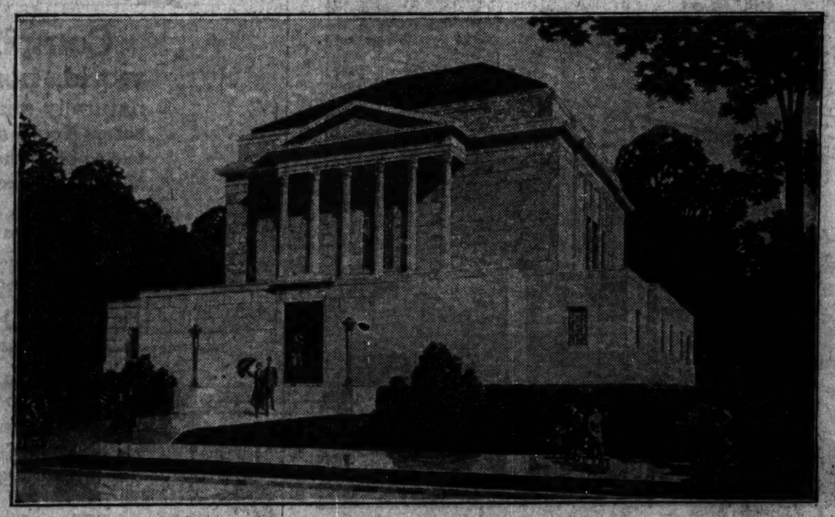
But then Brentano's will probably know how to do this, for the firm has been in existence since 1853. It was founded by August Brentano in a small New York news stand and now has shops in New York, Washington and gay Paree.

Here After Twenty Years.

Brentano's returned to Chicago in 1923, after an absence of twenty years, when the company took over the retail business of A. C. McClurg & Co. on their decision to confine their operations to the wholesale business. Besides books and periodicals, Brentano's sells stationery and office supplies.

And with the new store, which will probably open next March, this part of the downtown district will form quite a book center. Field's, Carson's, and Kroch's have large book stores in the immediate vicinity and there are smaller houses nearby.

SCIENCE TEMPLE FOR CHICAGO HEIGHTS



Charles D. Faulkner, Chicago architect, designed the above unusual church edifice for First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Chicago Heights. It'll stand on a wooded lot on the bank of Thorn creek, and will seat 800. The exterior will be of artificial stone. The design is Greek. The main architectural feature of the exterior is the portico above the front entrance. There are six columns, with a pediment above.

OPTICIANS AND GLOVE CONCERN IN LOOP LEASE

Further details on the change in the famous old "Peacock corner"—at State and Adams—beginning May 1st have just been told by Gilbert E. Keebler of E. F. Keebler & Co., who reports several leases which total $2,700,000 in rental for nineteen years.

The Schulte Optical company has leased a store 15x50 and the Moss Glove and Hosiery company, a California concern with forty shops, has taken space 10x50. Both front on State. The Spaulding Dress shops will occupy a shop 28x40 on Adams.

ARE YOU BUILDING A TRIBUNE PRIZE WINNING HOUSE?

THE TRIBUNE believes that views of some of the prize winning designs in its recent homes competition, as actually built in Chicago or suburbs, would be interesting to readers. Although several thousand of the Tribune's Book of Homes and also the working plans for prize winners have been sold, there is no way to check on who actually goes ahead with construction.

It is suggested that any one who has completed a house from THE TRIBUNE designs, or who has one nearing completion, write to Louise Bargelt, TRIBUNE Home Builders' editor, Tribune Tower, giving name and address and how far along the house is at present. Arrangements can then be made for photographing and also for getting a story about the construction of it and how much it cost, etc.

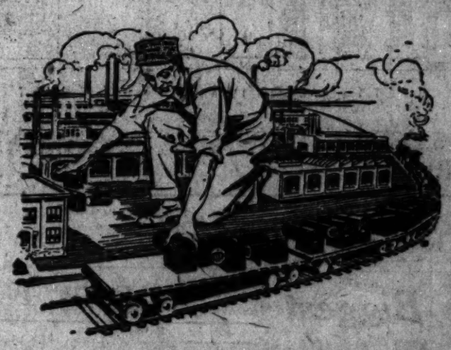
KEWANEE

40 Years of Knowing How

The Old Man Behind the Boiler has been at this business of boiler-making for upwards of 40 years. He thinks he knows a whole lot about it. Prominent architects, heating engineers, builders, plumbers and steam-fitters say he does.

Owners of fine buildings all over the world, who have been and are, using Kewanee Boilers, say he is a wizard. Profits prove it. Satisfied tenants prove it. The sales-value and renting-value of the buildings prove it. The action of the boilers and their steady, economical performance under all conditions prove it.



Compliments from all over the world, none of them solicited, would naturally stimulate The Old Man to make better boilers if such a thing were possible. The Old Man has been told so often that he is making the best and the most honest all-steel riveted boiler in history that he is mighty proud of his product. Added to this is the extreme satisfaction of making millions of human beings comfortable.

The biggest and most durable things of life are made just as this boiler is made—of all steel (riveted). Apartments and flats are made cosy and comfortable to a degree, so that it has come to be the custom among flat dwellers to LOOK IN THE BASEMENT FIRST—meaning, that the happiness of flat life begins right there.

The heating boiler is no longer regarded as just part of a building. It is the very heart of it. And the Kewanee All-steel (riveted) firebox boiler is the healthiest heart you ever saw.

FINDS TALK OF 5 DAY WORK WEEK IS MOSTLY TALK

No Pay During Time Off; That's the Rub.

BY THOMAS WREN.

Establishment of the five day week in industry is not needed at the present time and a shorter work week now would not entail any economic advantages to wage earners, according to George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union of North America.

While considerable talkfests abound in the building industry about the inauguration of a five day work week, most of the comment on the matter emanates from employers. Surveys show that only a medium of agitation for the shorter work week exists among the building trades of the country. With building slumping in various sections of the nation, building trades seem to be contented with present high wage scales and the five and a half day work week.

When George L. Berry speaks on labor matters the organized labor movement of the country listens to his talk with attention. During the war Berry was a major in the army and was elected vice commander of the American Legion for one term.

"Recently some considerable momentum was given to the shorter work week as a result of the announcement of Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer of Detroit, that his factories would be operated upon a five day week basis," Mr. Berry said.

No Work, No Pay.

"Mr. Ford's five day week plan, as it is understood by many, represents no new industrial condition, for the reason it provides no benefit for the workers. There would be no serious difficulty as between the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America and employers in arriving at a five day week, such as has been established by Mr. Ford, for the reason that the compensation allowed by Mr. Ford is upon the five day week basis.

"There is no economic value in reducing your hours of employment if at the same time you reduce your earning power. As a matter of fact, there presents a disadvantage, because the reduction of your work week with a reduction in your income would invariably increase your expenditures. Certain it is that it decreases your economic power one-sixth by virtue of the fact that you lose one day's income.

Need Money to Pay Money.

"The regulation of the work week in America, as well as in other countries, is an economic problem of the first water. You can't pay money out unless money is made as a result of work.

"Labor constitutes 62 per cent of the cost of building the average dwelling house, while materials represent 38 per cent, according to a study of construction made by the United States department of labor.

"The labor department's apportionment differs slightly from recent figures compiled by contractors, which are now being studied by Washington officials. These figures apportion to labor a cost of 60 per cent and to materials 40 per cent.

Rates of Cost.

"According to the new figures, the foundation and masonry work represent 35 per cent of the total cost of the completed job. The second largest item of cost is 29 per cent and were carpentry, both labor and materials. Plumbing fixtures plus their installation are reported as 10 per cent. Heating is rated at 9 per cent of the total cost, while hardware is apportioned as 3 per cent, painting, including materials, as 6 per cent, lighting fixtures and installation represent about 2 per cent.

Warner S. Hays avers the average income of American wage earners is 1½ cents a minute. He says President Coolidge received 50 cents a minute, and Gloria Swanson $7.40 a minute for an eight hour day.

Wasted Seconds Costly.

"Try to sixty cents a minute," says Mr. Hays. "is the average pay for railroad presidents, heads of insurance companies, and leading bankers.

"When the mass of American workers waste a second it costs $9,980. Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks are paid $6.67 a minute. Will Rogers $1 a minute and Judge Landis, high commissioner of baseball, is paid 42 cents a minute. The income of everybody at work is approximately $550 a minute or $33,000,000 an hour."

RIVER FOREST TO HAVE A BIG FLAT BUILDING

Old English Design to Be Used.

River Forest, a suburb which is almost entirely a town of individual homes, is going to have its first large apartment building. Howard Ullrich, who is responsible for the erection of many of the attractive homes in River Forest and Maywood, has broken ground for a twenty-five suite building at the northeast corner of Thatcher and Central avenues, opposite the Chicago and North Western station.

The site overlooks two small parks with a south frontage on Central avenue of 175 feet and a west frontage on Thatcher of fifty-five.

The Forest Manor apartments, as they have been named, will be of old English design from plans by the late Francis E. Dunlap and George L. Lindeberg, associate architect. The lower stories will be of brick and stone gradually diverging into brick and half timber construction in the upper floors.

The suites will be of three and four room kitchenette type. The windows will be plate glass and the roof red tile. Completion is promised by Sept. 15th.

Figures compiled by seventeen of the city's building supply dealers indicate that the building industry in the Chicago metropolitan district is progressing at a faster gait than during last year, which was a record breaker. This is especially true of that part of the industry devoted to homes.

Out of seventeen companies interviewed by Herbert F. Steger, special representative of the Chicago Trust company, with a view to obtaining an insight into the building prospects for the year, eight reported that business for the first three months of 1927 was much better than the first three months of 1926. On the other hand, five claim that business has been the same this year as last thus far, while three say that business has shown a slight decrease in sales for January, February, and March of 1927.

Exceptionaly fine weather, sectional building booms in almost every part of the city, together with the rapid development of the west and northwest suburban areas, are given as the principal reasons for the decided increase of this year's business over that of last.

On the whole, material companies, real estate men, and contractors are optimistic over the outlook for the building industry during the present year.

The seller was Charles Pohlman of Norwood Park and the price was a reported $26,250. O. Guy Russell was the only broker. Joseph Fitch of Benson, Fitch and Heineman was attorney for the seller.

HARVEY TO HAVE 7 STORY HOTEL; COST $300,000

To Contain Banquet Hall and 125 Rooms.

With tall apartments and hotels bobbing up all over Chicagoland, Harvey, one of the city's busiest little suburbs to the south, has missed its share, but this lack is about to be corrected, for it has been announced that Dr. P. J. Teeling will erect a seven story hotel on the west side of Center avenue, between 153d and 154th streets.

The Teeling is the name of the new inn and it will occupy a site fronting seventy-five feet on Center. It's to take up the entire seventy-five feet on the first floor, but above it will be set back some feet from the lot line, permitting a side court to extend to the rear.

There will be a drug store, barber shop, beauty parlor and coffee shop and restaurant on the ground floor. All will be connected with the lobby. And further, there will be a banquet hall and ballroom adjoining the lobby to the rear of it. A portion of this lobby is to be screened off to provide a sitting room.

The basement will contain a bath department and the various service rooms.

Proceeding to the upper floors, they will contain some 125 rooms. These will be divided into apartment, suites and the usual type of hotel rooms. The apartments will be of the city type with dinettes and kitchenettes, and will consist of two and three rooms.

Designed by Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman, the architecture will be of conventional modern design. Construction will be of reinforced concrete and the exterior will be finished in ornamental terra cotta, stone and brick.

Plans are now being drawn and work is expected to start in about two months, with completion set for a year later. It is stated that the cost will be about $300,000.

THE KINGSTON IS NEW CO-OP RISING ON SOUTH SIDE

Work is under way on a cooperative apartment building at the northwest corner of 76th street and Kingston avenue. It's to be called the Kingston and when completed will contain three six room apartments, nine five and three with four rooms.

Designed by Kocher & Larson, the Kingston is to be of Spanish architecture. The Spanish effect on the interior will be carried out by arched doorways, grilles, and the like. The exterior will be of a light colored face brick, with Bedford stone trim.

Of course each apartment will have the latest equipment. So there will be electric sinks, which it is said make dishwashing almost a pleasure; mechanical refrigeration; kitchen ventilators to take the curse from the corned beef and cabbage or fish days, and radiator cabinets.

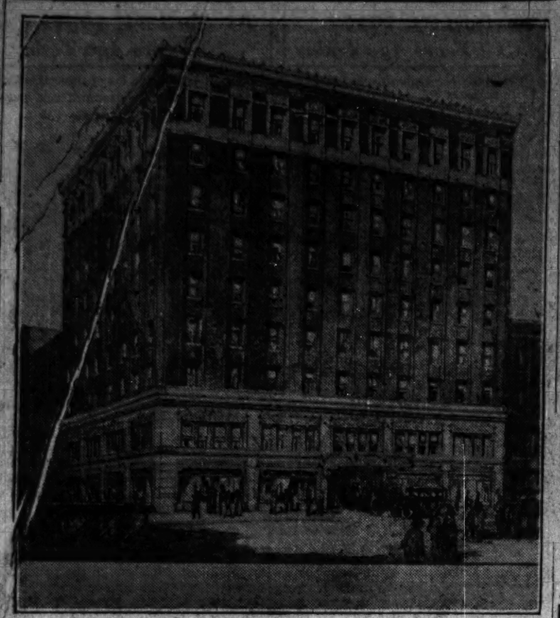
It is stated that the Kingston, which is scheduled for completion early in the fall, will represent an investment of $225,000. It's being erected by a new firm—Anders, Jones & Fox. Erhardt Anders has been a south side contractor for thirty-five years: Harry W. Jones formerly was with H. H. Decker & Co., and William Fox formerly was with the South Shore Investment company.

Matthew Owings Sells Flats at 7030 Cregier

Matthew W. D. Owings sold to William Gould and Hugh Boyd the thirty apartment building at 7030-38 Cregier avenue, site 100x161 feet, for a reported $194,000. M. Hoffman & Co. were brokers.

NEW WAUKEGAN HOTEL



The B. K. Gibson company, Chicago architects, designed the above nine story 150 room hotel to be erected at the southwest corner of Washington and Utica streets, Waukegan. It'll be built by the Hotel Realty Building company, composed of several Freeport [Ill.] men. The Hi-Way Hotel company will operate it. Percy Hale Lund made the sketch.

THE TEELING

Above is the seven story Teeling hotel, which Dr. P. J. Teeling will erect on the west side of Center avenue, between 153d and 154th streets, Harvey. Zimmerman, Saxe & Zimmerman are the architects, and the drawing was made by L. B. Sugarman. The cost is estimated at about $300,000.

PLAN $400,000 450 CAR GARAGE FOR BROADWAY

Building Will Be Near Argyle Street.

Construction is to start at once on a $400,000 six story garage at 5050 Broadway, near Argyle street, from plans by Huszagh & Hill. Attorney Stephen A. Malato is president of the Argyle Building corporation, owners of the property.

STEPHEN A. MALATO.

For the driver who has difficulty in getting his car in or out of the proper stall a uniformed flunky will be on hand, according to Mr. Malato. This gorgeously attired gentleman will take possession of the steering wheel as soon as the car drives in and gently escort it into its appointed resting space. On phone call this same radiantly garbed garcon will drive the bus round to the owner's front door, in case he doesn't feel inclined to walk even as far as the garage.

The garage will contain an elaborately furnished and decorated lobby, adjoining which will be an automobile display room and "accessory salon."

The building will be of fireproof construction and will accommodate 450 cars. The exterior will be of gray brick, with terra cotta trim. Some of the latter will be a vivid orange hue.

Huszagh, Musson & Co. have underwritten a first mortgage on this project. Completion is set for next October.

Safeguarding Your Home

When you build or buy a home see that it is safeguarded against costly replacements. Corrodible metals are slightly cheaper when first cost is considered, but they soon rust. Repair bills follow. In a few years this totals many times what it would have cost to install rustproof metals.

Insist on COPPER gutters and leaders; BRASS pipe for plumbing; solid BRASS or BRONZE hardware and lighting fixtures. These metals cannot rust. They will last as long as the house stands.

Should you like additional information on the uses and merits of COPPER, BRASS or BRONZE in your home, write to our Building Service Department. There is no cost or obligation on your part.

WORK SLATED TO START SOON ON NEW CLUBHOUSE

Erected by Columbians, Catholic Golfers.

It is stated that work will start shortly on the clubhouse for the Columbian Country club, an organization limited to Roman Catholics, which is situated on Milwaukee avenue, not far from Wheeling. Thomas Gorey has been given the general contract for the building which it is stated will cost $125,000.

First mention of the project was made in these columns on Oct. 4, 1925. The American Park Builders, architects and landscape architects, with L. A. Harding as designer, are responsible for the new clubhouse—to be in the early English mission style of architecture.

The clubhouse will be 270 feet long and will face Milwaukee avenue, being set back 600 feet from the road. On the first floor there will be a large dining room, a main lounge, a men's lounge and grill, a women's lounge and a locker room. The porch is to overlook a two acre lake.

The club will have an outdoor swimming pool and tennis courts. The eighteen hole golf course is nearing completion and it is expected to have it ready for play by Decoration day. The clubhouse will be finished by fall.

Officers of the organization, which it is said now has 378 members with a roll limited to 500, are F. E. Bourget, director of organization, Charles J. Dewan, president, and Robert E. Hayes, treasurer.

ELIZABETH GARY

probably talks homebuilding with more people than any other woman in America. She has over 58,000 visitors every year at her cottage. Read her important article below.

Cool rooms in summer, cheery warmth in winter, are yours when Celotex is built into the walls and roof of your home...

By ELIZABETH GARY
Hostess, Celotex Cottage

NOW it is possible to build into your home greater comfort than you ever thought possible.

When summer's sun beats down upon the roof, your rooms can be refreshingly cool. In winter, when icy blasts roar outside, the living room can be cheerily warm. And all year 'round your home can be quiet; free from nerve-wracking noise. Celotex is the modern magic that brings these comforts within your reach.

Women, especially, see in Celotex far more than a building material. They are the ones who have to live in a house, day after day. To them, Celotex means a lifetime of greater home comfort... new enjoyment of family life... better health... freedom from heating worry and less furnace drudgery... a home to be proud to live in.

Built into walls, ceilings and roofs of new homes, Celotex resists the passage of heat far more effectively than wood, brick, tile or other ordinary building materials. In homes already built, lining attic and basement with Celotex gives partial insulation that is a great improvement over out-dated heat-leaking construction.

Best of all, Celotex actually pays for itself. Properly used, Celotex makes possible a smaller heating plant and less radiation; saves one-third your fuel money every year. This saving soon repays the small cost of Celotexing your home.

My Celotex Cottage on Michigan Avenue, Chicago, has set a new standard of home construction. Over 58,000 visitors call on me every year, and leave amazed at the new comfort and economy Celotex can give. In five short years the comforts of my cottage have been built into more than 119,000 homes. When you come to Chicago, be sure to visit me at Celotex Cottage. See how Celotex combines low cost with greater year 'round home comfort.

Meanwhile, let me send you an interesting booklet describing my cottage and telling all the facts about Celotex. Just mail the coupon below.

Celotex should always be built into both roof and walls. (1) As sheathing, Celotex replaces wood lumber and building paper... adds greater strength... costs no more. (2) Under plaster, replacing lath, Celotex builds stronger walls and ceilings... less apt to crack... free from lath marks. (3) and (4) Celotex is used as interior finish and attic lining either in its natural tan color or decorated. (5) As roof sheathing, Celotex provides insulation where it is most needed. (6) As garage lining it helps protect the car against freezing.

Government Digs Up Facts About Marketing Charges

Finds Farmers Paid Fifty Millions to Stock Yards in Year.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

LIVE stock men of this country are becoming deeply concerned about the costs involved in the selling of their cattle, hogs, and sheep at the terminal markets. The practice of selling live stock direct to the packers to avoid paying central market charges is spreading. The number of animals traveling over the direct route is increasing. Fewer animals are being killed at the seven principal markets; slaughtering is being decentralized.

William M. Jardine, secretary of agriculture, is investigating the reasonableness of charges for stockyards services here at the Union stockyards.

Federal government marketing specialists say the farmers of the United States paid $50,000,000 to cover the terminal marketing costs, including commissions, yardage, and feed at fifty-two leading markets in 1924. This does not include freight and insurance and the losses farmers pay in the shipping and marketing of the live stock. A dozen markets are not included in the above figure.

Ten Million for Ma.keting.

Calculations show that the yardage, commissions, feed and insurance charges on the animals marketed at the Union Stockyards last year amounted to more than $10,000,000.

It costs from two to two and a half million dollars a year for the feed given animals handled at the Chicago market. This is shown in the government's figures given in the following table which was prepared in reply to questions answered by officials of the packer and stockyards administration of the federal department of agriculture, at the direction of Secretary Jardine, Washington, D. C.:

"How much feed was bought by the Union Stockyards and Transit company in 1926? How much feed was sold by the Union Stockyards and Transit company in 1926?"

Feed Figures.

	1925	First 10 mos., 1926.
Corn used for regular stockyard feeding operations, bu.	976,364 6-28	616,148 4-28
Corn sales as actually billed for regular stockyds. feeding operations, bu.	1,003,614⅛	618,248⅛
Tame hay actually used in regular stockyard feeding operations, lbs.	58,167,881	38,646,763
Tame hay sales as actually billed for regular stockyard feeding oprs., lbs.	52,833,255	38,472,095
Prairie hay actually used in stockyard feeding oprs., lbs.	8,038,589	7,051,651
Prairie hay sales as actually billed for regular stockyard feeding oprs., lbs.	8,994,485	7,029,800

Feed used at Chicago in 1926, figured on the basis of twelve months with corn at an average of $1.35 a bushel and hay at $38 a ton, amounts to a total of $2,025,621, and in 1925 it was $2,525,076.

The yardage charges amount to about $2,500,000 a year; commissions $5,000,000, and insurance $40,000 at the Chicago market.

Facts About Strayed Animals.

Concerning the lost or strayed animals at the Union Stockyards the packers and stockyards administration officials give the following information in answer to the questions below:

"To whom do the profits on strayed or lost animals in the yards accrue?

"[a] What was the amount of money collected for strayed or lost animals in the Chicago yards in 1926?

"[b] How much was refunded?"

Answer—"During the year 1925 the Chicago Union Stockyards and Transit company handled 15,853,466 animals of all species. There were picked up and sold by the company 2,343 stray animals, for which the company received $36,624.27. Of the animals picked up and sold, the ownership of 1,234 was established, and $26,718.22 was paid to the owners. At the end of 1925 ownership of 1,109 animals had not been established. The yard company had received for these animals $9,911.05, which it held for payment subject to establishment of ownership.

"An analysis similar to that shown above has not been made for 1926. The records in the accounts with respect not only to lost and strayed animals, but also including those in which the stockyards had a liability by reason of damage or mixing, show a net balance of $285.98 for a period of ten months ending Oct. 31, 1926."

Questions and Answers.

Other questions and answers given by packers and stockyards administration officials follow:

"Is there any regulation governing the amount of earnings which may be approved for a public utility such as the Union Stockyards and Transit company?"

Answer—"The rate-making provisions of the packers and stockyards act require that rates and charges made for stockyards services shall be just, reasonable, and nondiscriminatory. Such rates as do not fall within this category are prohibited and declared to be unlawful. No criterion of reasonableness, such as a specific return upon the value of the property, is suggested. In the determination of what constitutes reasonable rates the secretary is left free to use whatever criterion of reasonableness may appeal to him as fair and proper. He may give such weight to earnings as he sees fit. Any order of the secretary made under the act is subject to review by the courts."

"What is a fair valuation of the present yards and equipment owned by the Union Stockyards and Transit company, Chicago?"

Answer—"The secretary of agriculture is now engaged in an investigation of the reasonableness of all rates and charges for stockyards services at the Union stockyards, Chicago, Ill., and testimony has been taken as to the value of all property devoted to the rendering of stockyards services. The secretary has not yet determined the fair value of the Chicago Union Stockyards and Transit company."

"What factors are considered in arriving at a decision in fixing rates for yardage and feed charges in the Chicago yards?"

Answer—"A case, docket No. 7, involving the reasonableness of yardage and feed charges now in effect at the Chicago yards is before the secretary of agriculture, but has not been disposed of. It is not possible, therefore, at this time to enumerate the factors which will be considered in the determination of rates and charges made for yardage and feed."

The secretary of agriculture started the investigation of the case, docket No. 7, June 8, 1922.

Stockyards' Records.

"Are the records of the stockyards available to the public?"

Answer—"Under this act the secretary of agriculture is empowered to require the stockyards, by general and specific orders, to file in such form as the secretary may prescribe annual or specific reports and answer specific questions as to business conduct and practices. He can, from time to time, make public such portions of information thus secured as may seem expedient to him, with the exception that he may not reveal trade secrets or the names of customers. Section 306 (a) of the packers and stockyards act provides that the stockyard owner shall print and keep open to public inspection at the stockyards schedules showing all rates and charges for stockyards services. There are no provisions of the act which give to the public generally access to the books and records of stockyards companies. Section 9 of the federal trade commission act, incorporated by reference in Section 402 of the packers and stockyards act, provides that the secretary or his duly authorized agent or agents shall at all reasonable time have access to for the purpose of examination and the right to copy any documentary evidence of any person subject to the act and being investigated or proceeded against."

Last year farmers in this country shipped 87,511,279 head of cattle, calves, hogs, and sheep to sixty-four central markets, compared with 90,095,832 the year before. Many of these animals went over the direct route from the farm to the packing plant and were not handled by commission men.

At Chicago receipts of cattle coming direct to the local packing houses increased 156 per cent last year over the year before. Animals shipped direct to the Chicago packing plants come direct from the feed lot or from other markets. Shipments of both cattle and hogs coming to Chicago over the direct route to the packing houses increased in March this year over last year.

OPEN AIR "HOTEL" FOR LIVE STOCK.

The bill included yardage charges of about $2,500,000; commissions, $5,000,000; corn and hay, $2,500,000, and insurance, $40,000. Freight and losses in shipping and marketing of live stock is not included in the $10,000,000, the amount farmers pay annually to have their live stock moved across Union Stockyards.

Farmers pay about $50,000,000 a year for yardage, commissions and feed at fifty-two of the terminal markets in the United States, federal marketing specialists' figures show.

HOME OWNERS TO MAKE CITY BLOOM FOR CENTENNIAL

Chicago is going to doll up its lawns and lots in preparation for the centennial in 1933. It takes time to primp a city the size of this one. Exposition officials of the Chicago Garden and Flower show are going to keep reminding home owners that there is a big job ahead. The exposition will serve as an annual school and a central place where the best horticultural ideas will be collected and disseminated among the home owners of Chicago, who will have the fun of growing flowers, shrubs and trees to make the city truly beautiful.

Next year's flower show will be held during the week of March 25 to April 1. John A. Servas, manager of the recent show, who will also manage next year's event, has begun the work of designing the gardens.

Officers of the centennial committee will be invited to attend the next flower exposition meeting to discuss reforestation and revegetation plans for the city.

Garden clubs and the city's park systems are backing the city beautification movement fostered by the flower show.

The centennial is six years away but Chicago will need six years to plan and plant and grow sturdy young trees, shrubs and flowers. In that length of time growers will be able to paint the city green and send out blossoms for every visitor that comes to Chicago's century birthday party.

HOME BUILDERS' DEPARTMENT

WEEK ADDS 203 GARDENERS FOR TRIBUNE TESTS

Entry Lists Will Close on May 10.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

More than 200 names of gardeners have been added to THE TRIBUNE'S home garden contest list during the last week, bringing the total up to approximately 1,500.

Growers in district 2 will have to compete with at least 628 other gardeners who are competing for the $1,000 offered by this newspaper for the best home gardeners in Chicago and the suburbs within a radius of about forty miles of The Tribune tower.

Garden Raisers to Date.

When the contest editor made his second count last night the total number entered in each of the six districts of the contest area was as follows:

	Contestants.
District 1	225
District 2	628
District 3	393
District 4	361
District 5	122
District 6	68
Total	1,497

Only sixteen more days are left for gardeners to send in their entry coupons. After May 10 no gardener will be permitted to enter THE TRIBUNE flower garden contest.

Asks for Early Entries.

The contest editor asks gardeners to help along with their coupons. He says you can help the judges by sending in your entry coupon this week instead of holding until the last. Immediately after the last coupon is in its final counting and verification work will be done and the contestants' names and addresses will be turned over to the district judging committees, who will start making visits to the contestants' gardens about the first part of June unless the season is unusually late.

Home gardeners are still attempting to enter by letter. Don't take time to write a letter or even look for a pair of scissors; tear out the coupon and mail it. Your name, address, and district number should be clearly printed or typewritten.

Many Gardeners at Work.

Despite the rainy and cold weather, many gardeners have been able to dig up their plots and some have sown their earliest flower seeds. James and Joseph McKiernan, Oak Park's twin gardeners, warn their competitors that work already has been started in their garden.

Here are the names of the 203 new gardeners who entered the contest during the last week:

TWIN GARDENERS

Joseph and James McKiernan, Oak Park twins, are entered in The Tribune's $5,000 flower garden contest. Two years of gardening experience have taught them all about the value of the "early bird" advice and the value of teamwork. Their bulbs have been in the ground for many days, and they are shown here digging up the main part of their garden, getting ready to run a hot race for the $1,000 grand cash prize offered by The Tribune. In their garden, at 1226 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park, Ill., the McKiernan boys will grow roses, annuals, and bulbs in their combination planting scheme. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

RULES.

1. The Tribune will pay $5,000 in cash for the best flower gardens in Chicago area. A grand prize of $1,000 is offered. Separate cash prizes will be awarded on both late and early gardens.

2. The contest will be limited to gardens located on land on which the contesting gardener lives and in the territory within a radius of approximately 40 miles from the Tribune Tower. The garden may be any size, shape, style, or type, if it covers at least 200 square feet or the equivalent of a plot 20 by 10 feet.

3. The Tribune flower garden contest area is divided into six districts. Each contestant must indicate on the coupon the district in which he lives. Copies of the contest district map will be sent free if request is accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope. In the inner Chicago zone districts 1 and 2 are divided by the north branch of the Chicago river, while Nos. 2 and 3 are divided by south branch of the river.

4. You need not be an experienced gardener to compete.

5. Estate gardens, commercial gardens, and all other forms of gardening professionally conducted or maintained by paid professional gardeners or landscape architects are barred; the contest is open only to home gardens.

6. Every gardener in the prescribed area who complies with the above requirements may compete for the cash prizes, excepting employes of The Tribune and their families. Vegetable gardens or combination flower and vegetable gardens are not eligible to compete in this contest.

7. All entries must be in The Tribune office not later than May 10.

8. The exact judging dates, which will be announced later in The Tribune, will depend upon the season. The early gardens probably will be judged in June and the late ones in September.

9. Each garden will be judged upon its merits as a whole—not upon any particular plant or flower or other outstanding feature. Design, color harmony, balance, appropriateness of plants, and neatness are all points to be taken into consideration by the judges.

10. District judging committees will visit each garden and make the district awards on both the early and late gardens. Winners of the first prize in each district will compete for the grand prize, which will be awarded by three expert judges. The three final judges will visit in person the six first prize early gardens and the six first prize late gardens.

11. To compete for the grand prize of $1,000 the contestant must have both early and late gardens. The contestant is eligible to compete for the grand prize if he is a winner of a first district award in either the early or the late garden. A contestant may win prizes on both the early and late gardens and then compete for the grand prize.

12. The only requirement in entering the contest is to properly fill out the coupon, mail it direct to the Garden Contest Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill., and your garden will be visited at the proper time by the judges. The coupon must show the contestant's name in full, address, and the number of the district. The publishers of The Tribune will not be responsible for loss, delay, or nondelivery of coupons.

13. Watch The Tribune from day to day for further details and contest news. Helpful suggestions on flower gardening will be published in the paper from time to time.

ATTENTION PAID SCREENS BRINGS BIG CASH SAVING

Home Owner Must Watch Their Installation.

BY HOMER GRANT.

The home buyer or builder this spring who proceeds to occupy his new house and finds it all perfectly equipped with modern screening is indeed fortunate.

Often, however, it happens that the house which has been built especially for the dweller by a general contractor is left without screens. This lack may have been caused by a lack of funds at the last minute, or because the "screening" was not a part of the contractor's contract. Or again, if a man has purchased a house already built, he finds that screens have not been included in the finished home which is offered for sale.

In which case it remains for him immediately to set about screening his house amply and substantially; amply for comfort's sake and substantially for durability reasons.

If the windows are double hung the matter is simple enough; not quite so easy, however, if they are casement.

Inside Screens Excellent.

Most casements open outward. Therefore the screens are located inside between the curtains and the sash. These inside screens are excellent for they stay clean a long time and do not soil the curtains.

If provision has been made for the screens by building in arm rests and setting inside window trim as a screen base the screening job is not difficult. More expense is entailed if this is not the case.

By far the best thing to do if one is building a house is to make thorough provision for the screening process and installation in the plans and then see that the work is accurately done.

Screen frames of enameled pressed steel cost more than wooden frames, but they make up for it in the long run and look well with the metal casement window. Bronze frames are lovely of course and rustproof, but they cost quite a little more than the steel.

Horizontally sliding screens are especially good with windows made up of several casements joined together with the couplings called mullions.

Many Improvements.

Many improvements have been made in the patterns and styles of roller screens. Now their cost is not prohibitive, they fit perfectly, are always in place summer and winter, and when they are not needed on cool days they can be rolled up and out of sight.

Rustproof screens are naturally the best buy. They pay for themselves over their added cost, even though one uses wood frames.

However, if a paint protected wire is used its length of service can be greatly extended by careful attention. The wire should be repainted each year, and screens of this sort should last from five to eight years if handled carefully.

Winter storing is an important part of screen care. Proper storage contributes several years to the life of a screen. A clean, dry place, where the screens can rest vertically and where they will not gather dust, is the ideal place to keep them.

In screening, therefore, one should buy the best quality of material which can be afforded. If rustproof roller screens are out of the question, then one should keep the ordinary wooden framed and paint protected wire ones in condition. Time and wear take their toll of every screen, but a still heavier toll is taken when it does not receive the proper care during the winter months when it is not in use.

It has been estimated that if all home owners took proper care of their screens the annual output of screen manufacturers in this country could easily be reduced one-third. And the home owner in every instance would be the saver!

Mechanical Refrigeration Great Convenience in Home

One of the joys of electrical refrigeration is that you can have your refrigerator any place in the kitchen that you want it. It does not need to be near the door so that the iceman will track up no more of a clean floor than is necessary. Nor does it have to be in the very coolest place to save on ice. The temperature automatically is kept constantly the same.

If Painting House and Garage Use Same Color

If one is going to paint his house and garage this spring he will find it much cheaper to use the same color on both. One coat may be enough in this case. If one is painting concrete or masonry or tile the surface should be perfectly dry.

HOW OTHERS ACQUIRE HOMES

The Tribune will print experiences of home owners—letters telling how the home was financed, how the initial payment was gathered, how the mortgages were paid off, how the upkeep was managed. For each letter printed The Tribune will pay $10. Letters should not exceed 500 words. Address them to Small Homes Department, Sunday Tribune Chicago.

Building Up a Business.

THE first two years of our married life were spent in a city apartment, which experience gave us a strong desire to own our home. We had almost no capital, but were optimistic and not afraid to work, so we borrowed the money from kindly relatives and bought a tract of land near a Chicago suburb, paying cash for it.

DELIA R. BARNES.

There were no buildings or improvements upon the place. My husband first built a shack, long and narrow, which could later be used for a chicken house, partitioned it into four rooms, and there we lived for the next three years.

We also built another of the same size and shape, which was used to house our first flock of 1,200 baby chicks, purchased that spring. Of these we raised nearly 900.

The following winter our 350 hens from that flock averaged 150 eggs per day, paying our living expenses. In the spring we bought 3,600 baby chicks and built another chicken house, upon borrowed money, and by fall had a flock of 1,000 hens.

We made a substantial profit from them during the winter and the surplus earnings went into still another building. The following spring we again bought 3,600 baby chicks and saw a corresponding increase in our profits that winter. Due to my husband's scientific knowledge of chicken raising our losses were minimum.

By that time our business was well established and furnishing a substantial income, and we were able to procure an additional loan to build a real home.

To make a long story short, we started in the poultry business five years ago with almost nothing. Today our land is all paid for, we have made our first payment upon our modern six room house, and we have a thriving business.—Delia R. Barnes.

"Nothing Ventured, Nothing Gained."

WE WERE married in 1920. My husband had $500.00 in his savings account. This money went as a down payment on some house furnishings.

We rented a flat from my sister and her husband for $35 a month, and within one month they raised our rent to $39.

MRS. W. S. BOISCLAIR.

My husband's salary was $25 a week at that time, so I at once set my heart on owning our own home. I had about six years' experience as a telephone operator, so I went back to work. I worked mornings and evenings and in that way I kept up my home duties.

We rented out one bedroom for $6.00 a week, which almost paid our rent. And each week I would deposit my check in the bank. This would amount to $30.00 a week, some weeks, with overtime work. When we had enough money to buy a gold bond, we did so, and in the course of one year and a half we had saved $1,800.00. We paid $1,500 down on a frame cottage for which we paid $5,500. It had a first mortgage on it for $2,000.00.

We made monthly payments of $50.00, plus interest.

After we had bought our home I was forced to give up my position. Then my husband obtained a position at an amusement park when it opened and held down two positions, working days at the office and evenings at the park. He worked this way for three summers.

My husband and I often talk over the struggles of those days and always come to the conclusion that "nothing ventured, nothing gained" is a true slogan.—Mrs. W. S. Boisclair.

Folding Stairs Make Attic Much More Accessible

In considering possible improvements in the home this spring, one can reflect on how simple a matter it is to convert useless attic space into usable attic space by the installation of drop stairs or folding stairs. The different kinds of stairs which may be installed are manufactured at reasonable prices. They come, if desired, in all metal for fireproof homes. The folding kind of stairs opens and closes from above or below, and there is no obstruction to the attic floor when it is being used.

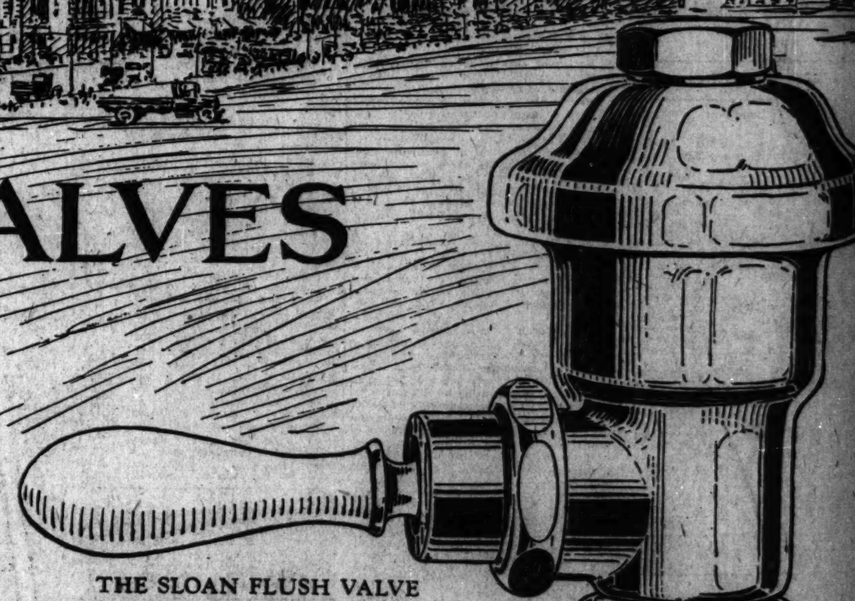
MICHIGAN BOULEVARD "SLOAN" EQUIPPED

SLOAN FLUSH VALVES

ON MICHIGAN BOULEVARD—from the majestic new Stevens Hotel, with its three thousand rooms, to the stately Tribune Tower—Sloan Flush Valves are used in every one of the buildings named above. In many of these buildings, Sloan Flush Valves were installed during the course of construction; in the rest, they were selected to replace other flushing equipment. Because Sloan Flush Valves meet the most exacting demands for lasting efficiency and economy of operation, they are selected everywhere by Architects, Owners, Contractors and Engineers who plan and construct such buildings as those on Chicago's famous thoroughfare.



THE SLOAN FLUSH VALVE
Giving the same efficient service in thousands of homes and small apartments as in the larger type of buildings.

Made to Last a Lifetime

The first Sloan Flush Valves installed in a Michigan Boulevard building have had many years of constant use and frequent abuse. Today these same Sloan Flush Valves are giving as dependable service as the ones recently installed in the newest building.

Every Sloan Flush Valve is backed by the resources of a great organization devoted, for over 20 years, to the manufacture of nothing else but flush valves. The efforts of hundreds of experienced craftsmen, the finest materials and the most exacting tests insure lasting and dependable performance.

Cut Down Water Bills

Savings in reduced water bills are effected wherever Sloan Flush Valves are used. They measure the flush, delivering the exact amount of water required by the fixtures—no more nor less, regardless of how operated. About a gallon of water is wasted for every second other flush valves are held open. You can't hold Sloan Flush Valves open to waste water, because closing action is automatic and wholly independent of the operator.

This Automatic Closing feature, found only in Sloan Flush Valves, offers positive protection against wasteful flushing.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Separate Frock for Spring Carries the Truly Feminine Touches of Ruffles, Lace and Fine Tucks, and Calls for a Big Hat Trimmed with a Flower or a Plume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashion makers seem to have some sort of advance information as to weather conditions for the coming summer, because they are advancing the coatless dress. It is often of sheer material and calculated only for a period of usefulness when the sun is tempering the wind so that it will be comfortable in its shorn state.

During the absolute monarchy of the ensemble, even for the hottest weather, the frock alone lost much of its decorative aspect. Particularly as coats have been chiefly straight and narrow, so that bows, flares, and other departures from the pencil line made ugly bumps in the contours of the coat. However, this season, when dresses are to be smart without any sort of wrap, they are reappearing in their decorative form. This means complication of lines and details, as well as the familiar complication of cut that has been a distinguishing feature of smart clothes for some time. The whole aspect of the woman, indeed, changes when these single frocks are worn. Big hats, trimmed with both flowers and plumes—one at a time, of course—are worn, handbags are more elaborate, and, in fact, all details are more decidedly feminine. This kind of chic is not exactly the fluffy ruffle type, but it is as dainty as the romantic garb of the civil war period.

The practicability of this kind of wrapless ensemble will depend, naturally, largely upon weather conditions, but all we can do is to hope, for the best Parisiennes are hoping, and they have sufficient faith to make this mode a success already in France, which is often a semi-frigid zone all summer long. Perhaps it is because they so love being all that is feminine in dress as well as in nature. There certainly is an allure about the dainty and vaporous frock worn with a big hat which man finds irresistable, and no Parisienne is superior to exercising it.

The all lace frock for daytime comes back in force with the return of the single dress to fashion, and laces in every hue are worn. However, the smartest colors for the daytime frock are beige and the new ibis, which is a sort of soft peach shade. These frocks do not, generally, employ any large quantity of material. They are rather straight in line, but are not less feminine because of this.

Our second model shows a combination of materials that is perfect for the dressy single frock, and that is taffeta and organdie. Boué Soeurs, who created this model, have combined two tones of blue—navy blue taffeta that forms the sleeveless over dress and pastel blue organdie that is used for the under frock. Blue is without doubt the favorite color this spring, and blue in two or more tones in one ensemble is a poplar color combination. The over dress of this model has a bloused waist, without sleeves or collar, and open in an inverted V at the center front to show the foundation.

The foundation frock has a long straight blouse cut in a basque-like V at the hip line and edged with a plaited ruffle. The buttons are of dark blue taffeta. The skirt is plaited. Sleeves are flared from the armholes and the lower part being plaited. Their flare is also increased by a narrow plaited ruffle. The round collar of the under dress lies over the blue taffeta. This kind of double dress is most practical, for it may be worn with or without the over dress of taffeta, thus being suitable for moderate and very hot days.

Our third sketch shows a different kind of solitary frock, and one that presents a striking color combination, being made of three shades of fuchsia, ranging from the violet purple to the purple red. The dress proper is of violet crêpe de chine, and the wide bands and godets at the sides of the skirt are made of the violet red that is generally called fuchsia in two tones. The application of these shades is cleverly achieved in the blouse by overlaying the bands at the sides with a triangle that is slightly deeper in color. This is done by wide and narrow bands on the unusual flared sleeves.

The deep collar and gilet are of violet crêpe. Doucet achieves a charming flare to the skirt by means of alternating godets and panels in the three shades. The narrow violet belt has a fantaisie buckle of black enamel inlaid with red and violet.

The fourth sketch shows an afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier. This model is made of a deep maize yellow crêpe satin, and it is trimmed with bands showing the reverse, crêpe, side of the material. The motif of the diagonal is used to give a graceful line, the diagonal closing to the blouse, and the diagonal tiers in the skirt meeting at the left side, where the two tiers form a drooping drapery Tiers and closing are edged with crêpe bands. A large buckle of Indian red stones is placed at the waist line. The tight sleeves are banded above the wrist with the crêpe side of the satin. With this frock is worn a close fitting hat trimmed with two pompoms of ostrich, also a creation of Marthe Regnier.

The lace dress, beige in color and trimmed with bands of black net, has a novel tunic and a single flower of scarlet silk. It is shown at the extreme left.

Crepe de chine in three tones of fuchsia makes this Doucet frock, with its flaring skirt, that is made bouffant by godets in the three shades. Third from the left.

HOW TO HAVE A LOVELY SKIN

by Antoinette Donnelly

Soap and Water and a Soft Brush Are the Greatest as Well as the Simplest Aids to a Beautiful Complexion.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Of all the ills that flesh is heir to or acquires by unhygienic living, I do not believe there is a single item which causes more actual unhappiness and mental torture than a blemished complexion. Almost any one can laugh and be fat; be fearfully skinny and laugh with her tormentors; lose a few handfuls of hairs and be terrified, yet still be able to extract a smile over the remaining ones. But for a young person whose skin is marred with acne, blackheads, or pimples there is nothing but abject misery.

Time after time girls, and boys, too, write me they are ashamed to go out because of their poor complexions. A pity when, with the exception of a few rare cases, it is something that may be remedied, and in a comparatively short time. In fact, ninety-nine cases out of a hundred may be prevented by the simplest precautions—for the most part the free and generous application of nothing more complicated than soap and water and, as grandma used to say, "elbow grease."

There are some fortunate persons with that quality of skin so fine grained that blackhead trouble, and consequently pimple and acne conditions, escape them entirely. Few, however, may lay claim to a spotless reputation as far as blackheads are concerned. At one time or another they have had to face the disfiguring comedoes and apply a few extra measures to make good their departure.

Treating Skin Troubles.

In treating all three of the most frequent complexion ills you may boil your energy down to an attack upon those blackheads already imbedded and on their prevention. Pimples and acne are really nothing more nor less than an inflammation of the sebaceous glands and hair follicles, the tiny comedo being the root of the evil of inflammation.

If the skin is kept free from blackheads, which usually begin to make their appearance on the face at the self-conscious age, the humiliation and mental distress would be reduced to almost nothing.

Blackheads are masses of fat and debris of the skin which have imbedded in the glands. These masses act as foreign bodies, irritate the skin, and become infected and then inflamed.

Most frequently the face is chiefly affected. Again, the face, neck, shoulders, and chest are troubled. If treatment is not given early there is great danger of scars from prolonged inflammation. At any rate, enlarged pores will result, which give the same pitted effect to the face.

The prevalence of acne during adolescence is due to the fact that at that time the fat glands, like the hair follicles, take on a new activity. The secretion of fat is greatly increased, and it requires only a slight disturbance of the function to cause the accumulation of fat in the glands and the formation of blackheads.

Persons with coarse pores and large, fat glands have the worst cases of acne. Conditions of the general health influence the development of this trouble. Not infrequently it is found association with cold hands and feet, and not uncommonly with dyspepsia and constipation, or other irregularities which lower the vigor and impair the resistance.

Why the Face Suffers.

The face is most troubled because it is the most exposed part of the body and because sweat glands are abundant there and are easily clogged with dust and grime, which add to the disfigurement.

With normally healthy people, then, it is a matter of local care almost exclusively. If the circulation is good, the digestion good, and elimination regular, you may pin your faith on the flesh brush, soap, and water.

The vigor with which you scrub is determined by the condition of the skin. A thin and dry skin will perhaps be less affected, but will require care to prevent an unduly dry or chapped condition. In severe blackhead trouble, however, if the skin is greasy and thick, there is little danger of scrubbing too vigorously.

Mild cases of blackheads are frequently cured by bathing the face with soap and warm water, using a complexion brush and scrubbing thoroughly the affected parts. Rinse in warm and then in cold water. In more exaggerated cases, steaming the face is advised. First, cleanse with a cold cream. Applying the cold cream first often helps to soften the hardened substance, so that they are more easily removed. Have two towels ready for steaming. Apply them alternately after wringing out in hot water. Then remove as many blackheads as you can remove easily with a comedo extractor or with the fingers. If with the latter, use on the fingers a clean piece of linen, and also extract the blackheads with as gentle pressure as possible. Do not try to force out the tiny masses that will not come with moderate pressure. Wipe with a solution of hydrogen peroxide or alcohol. When this has been done apply cold water freely to the face and finish off with an ice rub.

Avoid Creams and Oils.

Severe cases of pimples and acne are known to be caused primarily by an increased activity of the fat glands. Therefore, the use of creams and oils on the face for cleansing and other purposes should be avoided in acne cases.

Obstinate cases of acne require the skill of an experienced physician. X-ray is the specific treatment which cures the vast majority of them. You are particularly urged to trust the work only to one with skill and experience, however.

In home treatment, which is sufficient for milder cases, the washing of the skin is the most helpful thing. One vigorous scrubbing a day with soap and water must be given, followed by a sponging-off with alcohol to cleanse it further. The washing not only gets rid of extraneous dirt but it tends to prevent further infection and reduces the excessive fat to the minimum.

After the face is washed the pimples that show they have come to a head by a distinct yellow point should be opened with a needle. Before they are opened the surface should be wiped with alcohol; also after the pus is extracted. The needle should be sterilized for each attack by dipping in alcohol, tincture of iodine, or peroxide of hydrogen.

Be careful not to overdo any of these operations. Remove only the blackheads and treat only the pimples that are ripe for removal and treatment. Massage is advised against in severe acne cases because of the danger of spreading the infection.

Answers to Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Queries.

EAGER: Substituting stuffed dates and salted nuts for candy will avail you nothing in your desire to reduce. You want to eliminate and not substitute. The nuts and dates are fattening, just as the candy is. You need my booklet on reducing, which may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

ESSIE H.: Ingrown toenails are caused by ill fitting shoes. If your shoes are too narrow or too short the toenails come to run diagonally on the toes instead of parallel. The shoe pushes the front end of the nail around and causes the opposite corners to dig into the flesh. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the treatment of ingrown toenails.

E. M.: Your trouble is too much sleep and not sufficient exercise. Eight hours' sleep in a well ventilated room is sufficient for the average person. A walk of four miles a day, and exercises to be done on arising are what you need. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for them.

ETTA H.: Brushing the hair gives it the luster you desire. It keeps the scalp in a healthy condition. Brush for five minutes every morning and night with businesslike strokes, until there is a feeling of life in the scalp.

A. T. V.: Fruit juices, grape juice, apples, oranges, and lemon juice—stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten before going to bed, followed by brushing the teeth, will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night.

V. H.: The shooting pains in your legs are undoubtedly the result of wearing shoes with too high heels. For business wear they are not only harmful, but are not in good taste. Have yourself fitted to a pair of street shoes with heels about an inch and a half in height.

MRS. C. S.: Whiteheads are chalky deposits under the skin. They are an imprisoned blackhead. Apply hot towels to the face to soften the skin. Then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents with the needle. Wipe the spot with peroxide and gently massage with cold cream. For treatment of dry skin send a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARION H.: Equal parts of camphor and glycerin massaged into the hands several times a day will soften and whiten them. Stains may be removed from the hands by lemon juice. It is advisable to keep a lemon handy for this purpose. Better send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the "Care of the Hands." It has many helpful suggestions for you.

MRS. J. B. N.: A vegetable diet tends to keep the intestines active. This is particularly true of fresh green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, asparagus, beet tops, and celery. On such a diet you are not liable to grow stout. Eat sparingly of potatoes, as the starch in the potato is the hardest of all starches to digest.

E. B. G.: The hollows will remain in your cheeks until such time as you have the spaces caused by loss of teeth filled in by bridgework. Loss of teeth is responsible for much digestive trouble, the food not being properly masticated. And hollows give an expression of age, which no woman wishes to have.

MRS. M.: KEEPING THE TONGUE CLEAN PROTECTS the teeth, as the tongue collects tartar and bacteria, particularly near the root. Fruit acids are cleansing, as is also a weak solution of vinegar.

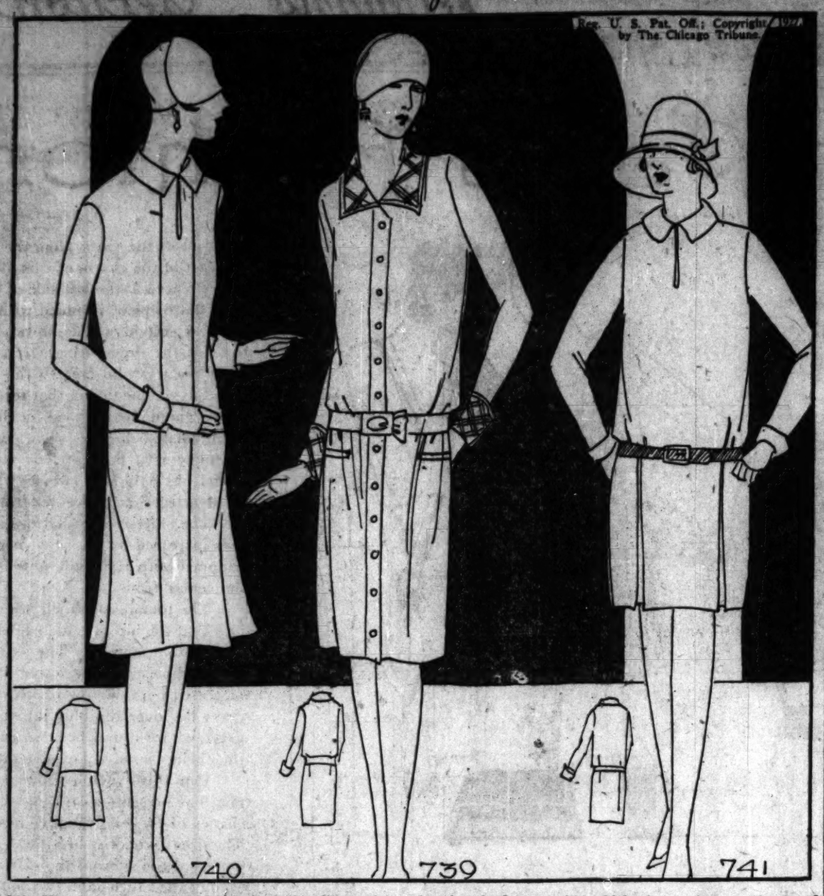
MRS. F. L.: OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THE CAUSE of eczema. In some cases there may be a slight tendency to inheritance, but it is not generally considered in the majority of cases. The treatment depends upon your general condition and the part of the body affected, and should be determined by a competent physician after making an examination.

JIM G.: SKIN GRAFTING IS NECESSARY TO REMOVE deep tattoo marks. Work of this kind is done by skin specialists

DOROTHY M.: DEEP BREATHING EXERCISES IMprove the circulation, develop the bust and chest, and often will cure headaches. They start the blood flowing vigorously through your veins and for one with weak lungs there is nothing better than deep breathing.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde



740—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

739—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

741—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 2⅝ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

FLAT crepe in a crushed raspberry shade, with collar, cuffs and front panel in a deeper shade would make up charmingly by pattern No. 740. The dress isn't at all difficult to make, and the straight lines with the gracefully flaring sides will be universally becoming. Three shades instead of two could be used in making this dress, making the main part of the dress of one, the panel of a second, and the collar and cuffs of a third.

The circular skirt is seamed together at the sides, and French seams will be right to use. Put the right side seam in by hand, then turn to the wrong side, baste and then stitch the wrong side seam on the machine. Finish the seams of the waist in the same manner. The panel front can have the edges turned in, laid in place on the dress and stitched close to the edge. Or the dress can be laid over the panel edges and stitched in place.

The seams would look well with a narrow piping of the dress material, and if this is used, the same method should be followed in putting the waist and skirt together. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, and the edges bound.

The collar can be made double, or if you prefer to make it of a single thickness it will be pretty to finish the edges with a narrow, bias binding. The cuffs should be made the same as the collar. The sleeves are full length and close fitting. Notches on the sleeves pattern show just where the outer edges of the sleeve is to be gathered to make fullness at the elbow. Take the smallest possible stitches in gathering, distribute the fullness over the given space evenly, and press carefully. This fullness makes the necessary "pocket" for the elbow. It is a good idea not to make these close fitting sleeves too close fitting. They are not only uncomfortable, but they don't look well. A sleeve of this kind can be made reasonably close fitting without being actually tight.

Pattern No. 741 is an excellent design for a dress for school wear. The dress is cut with the back in one piece, and in the front the dress is slashed under the belt to allow for the plaits. There is a slashed opening in the center front and this allows the dress to be slipped on and off over the head. Pretty little collar and cuffs finish the neck and sleeves; and the latter are full length and close fitting.

Kasha in a becoming color, or one of the other woolens in a small check, might be used. Even though warm weather isn't far away there are many days when a dress with a little warmth isn't uncomfortable. Challis is an excellent material for this kind of a dress, and unless the trimming prevents, it can be washed as satisfactorily as a linen handkerchief.

The narrow belt may be made of the dress material, or one of calfskin may be chosen.

Navy blue crepe de Chine, with one of the plaid taffetas was used in making the dress by pattern No. 739. This is one of the straight line designs that is so generally becoming; and a feature that will appeal to most women is that it opens the length of the front. There is an applied plait of the dress material the length of the front and this gives a good finish there. Two inserted pockets in the skirt add to the attractiveness as well as the usefulness of the dress, and the broad suede belt gives the right finish at the waistline.

Take great care in cutting and measuring for the buttonholes. Then overcast every one from the wrong side before working. One of the heavier crepes or satins would also be suitable materials for this design, and two tones of the same color and material could be used in the making.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

BABY ARTICLES ARE GLADLY WELCOMED.

DON'T all of us like to think that the arrival of a baby means happiness for every one—happiness for the mother, for the family, and the promise of a happy childhood for the little newcomer? In our families, we see everything possible is done, and somehow we like to think that every baby and mother receive similar care.

Yet our files are filled with cases where parents are facing the prospect of a little one with nothing done, and absolutely no means of providing for the baby. Illness in many of these families has consumed the family savings, and all these expectant parents want the little newcomer to have every advantage—but they simply cannot provide unless we help them.

An infant in any family of comfortable circumstances seldom wears out his first clothes, and there they are, ready for a lot more service. Gifts from those whose babies have outgrown their first outfits, infant clothes, cribs, carriages, and beds will be welcomed. Many of us can give these articles, and think what they will mean to the many poor expectant mothers.

If you have some of these baby articles which have outlived their usefulness to you, let me know that you will help! I can place everything of the sort where it will mean the difference between happiness and misery. So please let me know what you have to give!

If You Have a Car.

"I am coming to you in the hope you will be able to find some one who is willing to give pleasure to a shutin. My sister, who has been sick for a year, is now able to go out for a short drive, but is too weak to walk. We do not own a car and I wondered if it would be possible to get in touch with some one who has leisure time and a car who would be glad to do an act of kindness. M. R. G."

If you have an automobile and would like to devote a little of your time to making others happy, this would be a splendid opportunity, and probably would be the means of restoring this young woman's health.

For a Convalescent.

"Do you think you could get me a tennis set and a racket? I have been sick for a long time and the doctor tells me to get out in the sun. I like to play tennis, but I can't afford to buy either of these articles. A. S."

Have you either of these articles, which will help make our correspondent a strong and healthy young woman again? She'll be most appreciative for them.

Out of Work.

"I have been out of work for some time and I need a spring overcoat, size 42. Do you think one of your readers has an old one to give to me? "E. H."

Last year's top coat might do this correspondent quite well. May he not have it?

Two Small Boys Need Shoes.

"I know of two boys who are needing shoes badly. One is Sam, 13 years old, whose father deserted and left his mother with five children younger than him to support. He wears shoes, size 8, in a man's size. He goes to school and is trying to make good so he can help his mother support his little sisters. The other boy is James. His father has been ill now for three months and it has been necessary to go into debt to pay the rent and buy food. He is a little tot and wears size 8 in children's shoes. H. J. A.

Spring showers mean wet feet and resultant ill health when little boys' feet are not well shod. Can you give Sam or James a pair of shoes?

Victims of Sickness.

"I am a widow depending upon my sons for support, but they have so many expenses, there is never enough for clothing for us. We have had a great deal of sickness and doctor bills, and my youngest daughter, who is just getting well, needs a coat, size 16 or 18. I am in need of clothing, too—a coat and a black dress, size 44. If you can help us, we will be most thankful. Mrs. P."

When one has the expense of ill health to cope with, it is hard to provide the necessary clothing. I am sure you can help in this case with a cast-off garment or two.

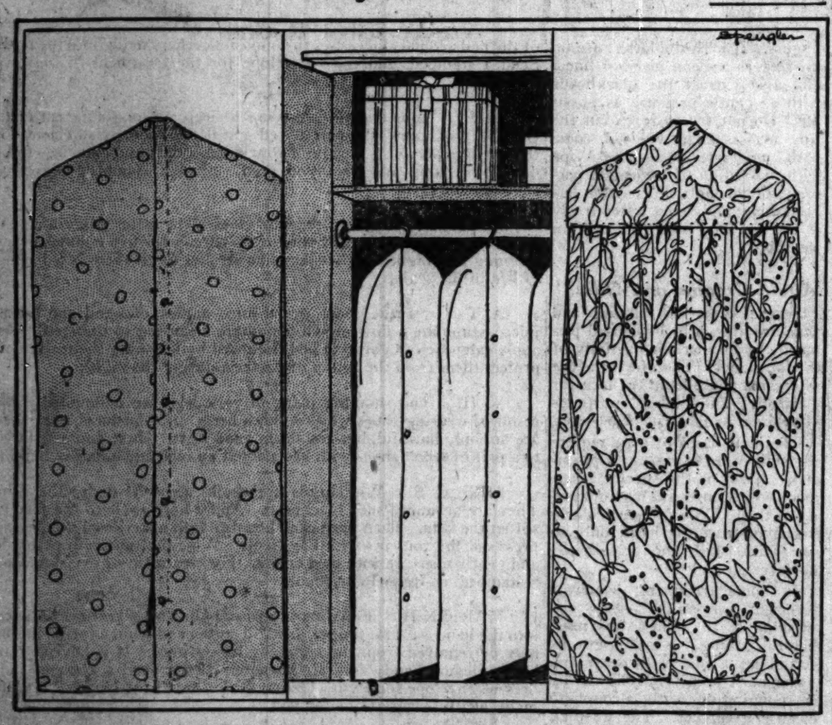
Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



Dress Bags Are a Joy to the Woman Who Likes to Keep Her Gowns Fresh and Attractive.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

DRESS bags are really a necessity, if we are to keep things looking fresh, and this is especially true in towns where soft coal is used. Of course, you can buy pretty, satisfactory bags in a great variety of designs, but there are many women who actually making these things, and in so doing a considerable sum of money is saved.

About 2¼ yards of 36 inch material is needed, or if you buy anything narrower you will need 5 yards for one bag.

Some bags are made the shape of a clothes hanger at the top, and the rest of the way the bag pieces are perfectly straight. One piece makes the back, and in the front there are two. These front pieces are hemmed down one edge, using an inch wide hem, and the strips cut wide enough to seam to the back, and allow the hems to lap. These hems may be stitched together down from the top for six or nine inches, then fastened the rest of the way with several buttons and buttonholes.

Another style of bag is made with a sort of yoke top, back and front. This is cut the shape of the hanger across the top, and measures nine inches deep. To this the lower parts of the bags are gathered, allowing one and one-half across for fullness. In the front there are two pieces, the same as in the other one. There are lapped, hemmed edges that button together, or they may tie if you prefer. While patterns for these bags may be bought one shouldn't be necessary, and if you are not used to cutting patterns, do it first in paper—of course making the width ample so a dress won't be crushed.

Women the World Over

There are 160 units of women police in America.

Mrs. Isabella Huggins has been station agent at Sabula, Mo., for more than 20 years.

In Portugal it is popular for the girls to wear their hair shingled.

Women represent about 2 per cent of the law makers in the United States.

Among the membership of the British Astronomical association are 70 women astronomers.

SAM 'N' HENRY - - - - By Correll and Gosden

It Seems to Be A Horse on The Two Boys

[The boys are in Pete's office preparing to sign the papers for the horse they have just purchased from him.]

Sam—What is we gotta sign, Pete, dat's whut I wanna know?

Pete—Yo' boys have a seat heah an' I'll go out an' see if I can't dig up some refreshments. I'll be back in a minute.

Sam—Take yo' time, Pete, take yo' time. We'll wait heah.

Henry (after Pete has left)—Yo' is de dumbes' man I done eveh seed.

Sam—Whut is I done done now, Henry?

Henry—In de firs' place, I tol' yo' dat dat broken down nag dat he got out in de yard dere is li'ble to die any minute from old age.

Sam—Well, whut is I gotta do wid it? I can't help it if he dies, kin I?

Henry—De mo' I talk to you, de dumber yo' gits. I tol' yo' dat hoss wasn't worth fifty dollahs, an' when Pete started bluffin' us by tellin' us he had a offer of a hund'ed dollahs, yo' had to holler up an' ast him if he'd sell us de hoss fo' a hund'ed.

REFRESHMENTS

Sam—I didn't want nobody else to git de hoss, Henry, 'cause I don' know where I kin git anotheh hoss.

Henry—After yo' said dat, yo' heard whut Pete said. He said, "Sold," so quick dat he like to knocked us both down.

Sam—Well, anyway we got a hoss, Henry.

Sam—Wait a minute. Heah come Pete back heah now. Don' say no mo'.

Pete—Well, boys, I got a little bottle heah of impo'ted stuff. I sort o' anti-ticipated yo' boys comin' oveh t'night.

Sam—We don' want yo' to anti-ticipate nothin' though, Pete. Ain't no use to do dat but we WILL have a little drink heah on yo'.

Henry—Well, I kinda feel poorly t'night.

Sam [losing no time in refreshing himself]—Well, heah I go.

Henry [taking bottle from Sam]—Wait a minute heah. Leave some in dere.

Sam—Um-um—ain't dat sompin'. Dat's pretty good, Pete.

Pete—Go ahead, Henry.

A SECOND BOTTLE

Henry—Well, heah's lookin' at yo' boys.

"'Tain't nothin' de matter wid dis stuff, is it Pete?"

Sam—Good stuff, ain't it, Henry?

[Pete opens a closet door in his office and brings out another bottle for his own use.]

Henry—Whut is yo' fixin' to do, Pete?

Pete—I got anotheh bottle o' stuff heah in de closet. Yo' boys go ahead an' drink de bottle I brought yo'—I'll drink dis.

Henry [suspiciously]—O—O.

Sam [frightened]—Awa—Awa—'tain't nothin' de matteh wid dis stuff, is it, Pete?

Pete—Oh, no. But I been drinkin' dis same stuff heah fo' years an' years an' I ain't neveh been sick from it.

Henry—Check me out from now on.

Sam—Well, let's git to talkin' heah 'bout de hoss.

Pete—Now, boys, I done done yo' a favor an' sold yo' de hoss fo' a hun'ed dollahs. Now heah is de papers fo' yo' boys to sign.

Sam—Whut is we gotta sign sompin' fo', Pete?

READING THE PAPERS

Pete—Wheveh yo' sell a hoss yo' gotta sign sompin'. Dat's a rule among hosses. Henry knows dat 'cause Henry's got a lot o' brains, ain't yo', Henry?

Henry [flattered]—O, yeh; Pete's right, Sam.

Sam—Whut do de papers say, Pete?

Pete—Well, I anti-ticipated sellin' dis heah hoss today so I had a friend o' mine to draw up de papers—an' heah dey is.

Sam [as he takes papers from Pete]—Mus' I read 'em, Henry?

Henry—Go ahead, read it out loud.

Pete—Don' yo' boys want anothen little swig o' dis stuff heah?

Henry—No mo' swigs till we git dis heah hoss thing set.

Sam—Well, heah I go; I goin' read dis thing now, Henry.

Henry—Go ahead; lemme heah it.

Sam—Heah I go——[Reads]. Dis—argument——

Pete—Dat word's "agreement"—"agreement."

Sam—Dat's right. [Reads again.] Dis—agreement—entered into—dis day of—a—nothin' heah—by an' between—Pete Willis—de party o' de firs' part——

Henry—Wait a minute heah. Where is de party goin' be? I don' wanna go to no mo' parties.

Sam—I don't know, Henry. 'Splain dat to us, Pete.

Pete [taking papers from Sam]—Betteh lemme read dat, Sam. I'll git it oveh to yo' quicker. Dat means dat I is de party o' de firs' part an' Sam Smith an' Henry Johnson is de party o' de secon' part. Dey jus 'put dat in to keep from mixin' us up.

Sam—O, yeh, I see. Go ahead, read some mo'.

DE HOSS' AGE

Pete—Whereas, both parties agree to de followin'. De party o' de firs' part agrees to sell de party o' de secon' part a certain hoss—an' de party o' de secon' part agrees to buy from party o' de firs' part, a certain hoss—de price to be twenty-five— [Catching himself.] Wait a minute heah; de man done made a mistake—dat should be a hund'ed. I'll change dat right now. Lemme git de pen an' ink heah.

Pete—Yo' understan', don' yo', Henry?

Henry—Oh, yeh—sho'—go ahead, I'm listenin'. [Doubtful.] Yo' sho', though, Pete, dat dat twenty-five dollahs don' b'long in dere, is yo'?

Sam—Read on dere, Pete.

Pete—Now den, it say heah dat—after dis agreement is signed, de said hoss is in de possession o' de parties o' de secon' part an' regardless o' whut happens to de said hoss, de party o' de firs' part is no longer responsible—or even when de party o' de secon' part go to get said animal an' find him in bad condition, includin' death, he shall still be in de possession o' de party o' de secon' part, an' de party o' de firs' part is immune, exempt an' ev'rything else from bein' li'ble.

Pete—Now listen heah, boys; jus' calm down now. I had de lawyer to put dat in fo' yo' own protection. Yo' might not understan' it, Sam, but Henry do, don' you', Henry?

Henry [overcome with flattery]—O, yeh; Sam, Pete is right. Me 'n' yo' is gotta be protected. Think if dat hoss would bite somebody. O, yes, we gotta be protected. Pete is right.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. Jus' so YOU know whut we is doin' heah. YOU is de president o' de comp'ny, yo' know.

Henry [still a little doubtful]—But tell me dis, Pete—dat hoss ain't dead now, is he?

Sam—Read on den, Pete. Whut else do it say dere?

Sam—But befo' I sign dis thing I wanna say—a——

Sam—Awa—Awa—But I tell yo', Pete——

Sam—Uh, huh—now—a—awa—awa—but—a——

Pete [guiding Sam's hand]—Now write Smith right dere on de same line. Don't take yo' han' up—you'll git ink all oveh yo'. Dat's it—S-M-I-T-H—Smith—dat's it. Now, Henry——

Sam—Wait a minute heah, though, Pete——

Pete—Now listen, Henry—a man wid yo' brains knows dat it gotta have both names on it. Yo' know dat, Henry. Yo' got plen'y sense.

BAD NEWS!

Henry—Pete is right.

Sam—Go ahead an' sign it, Henry.

Pete [as Henry signs the agreement]—Dat's it—Henry—Johnson. [Folding up the agreement.] Now boys, de hoss is yours. Yo' say dat you'd gimme part cash an' I'll git yo' to sign de notes fo' de balance. From now on de hoss b'longs to yo' two boys, an' I wish yo' all de luck in de world now dat de hoss is yours. An' I hopes yo' make a lot o' money.

Sam—Um—um. Henry, now we is got a hoss. De hoss b'longs to us now.

Henry—Somebody at de door, Pete.

Pete—Come in, come in.

[One of the boys employed in the poolroom comes into the office, out of breath from running.]

Boy—Pete, yo' betteh come out in de back yard a minute——

Pete—Whut's de matteh?

Boy—I went out in de barn to git some wood to put in de stove an' de hoss is layin' down on de floor coughin'.

Henry—O—O.

Sam [as he jumps up and starts for the barn]—Awa—awa—awa——

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Sam 'n' Henry are with us each Sunday in this section.

Pete—Dat's all it say. It jus' say heah—witness our han's an' seals dis day. [Picking up the pen.] Now—a, heah is de pen, Sam——

Sam—But wait a minute heah, Pete——

Pete [forcing pen into Sam's hand]—Dat's it. Now, hol' it dis way. Now, don' git ink on yo'.

My Greatest Thrill

Embarrassing Moments

In Gloves.

The most embarrassing moment of my life happened during the first week of my first position as stenographer.

As I had a few minutes leisure one day when the boss stepped out of the office, I tried on a pair of black kid gloves I had bought during my lunch hour. They were a tight fit, and I had some trouble in getting them on. While I was admiring them my boss rushed into the office, bringing with him some men he had met in the hall, one of them being the president of the concern, from the home office.

Hurrying into his private office, he called out, "Bring your notebook, Miss L——." Immediately I began peeling off the new gloves—but—they wouldn't peel! After I had struggled for some minutes trying to get them off, and became more and more nervous and excited, the boss looked out, and seeing what the trouble was, said, "Leave them on. Mr. B. must catch a train in a few minutes and wants to dictate a letter to the home office before he leaves here."

So, with three amused men watching me, I took Mr. B.'s dictation with tight fitting black kid gloves on my hands, and with a longing in my heart for the earth to open up and swallow me.

F. M. L.

Putting It Frankly.

I had become well acquainted with many of the guards and some of the officers at the state reformatory, but I did not know the new superintendent who had been at the institution but a month.

One morning while I was busy working at my table, the assistant superintendent, a guard, and a third man came up to see me. The assistant superintendent asked me if I had ever met Mr. E——, the superintendent.

"I wouldn't know him from a bundle of hay wire," I replied without looking up. There was a silence.

Then the assistant said, "Well, this is Mr. E——."

Luckily for me, the superintendent had a sense of humor. Since then he and I have become good friends.

E. T. B.

Looks Told.

A sum of money had disappeared from the office, and the circumstances were such that almost any one of the force could be a guilty party. The police were called in and for a while things hummed around there. Every one, from chief of staff clear down to the janitor, was had up for questioning, and although we were trying to do "business as usual," we were all pretty tense and looking crosseyed at our neighbor.

I had begun to develop a nervous headache, when finally the boss approached a group of us and in a lowered, confidential tone, began, "Now, folks, I have this money, and it just goes right to my heart to have to tell you——"

Before I could get my wits about me, I thought that he was confessing to us that he had taken it himself (instead of trying to advise us that the culprit had been apprehended), and my horrified expression and smothered ejaculation, before I could come to, caught his attention, and made perfectly clear to him what I was thinking.

He made no comment, neither then nor afterwards, but now when we meet as we must sometimes in the pursuance of our duties, he looks—believe me, he looks!

L. E. C.

Horrors!

I was registering for a college course in English and was trying to get a professor who had a reputation for being easy. There was one man, Mr. M., whom I didn't know but whom I had heard was quite hard, and I didn't want to get in his class at any cost. The man who was signing my card, however, wanted me to take this certain class, so I answered, "O, I wouldn't take a course under that man at all. He is a bore, as well as being hard to get a grade from."

I noticed he blushed; then another man at his side turned and said, "So that's the kind of a reputation you have, M.?" I faded away.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Whether Wild or Domestic, Cultivated or Free Growing, the Edible Greens Are a Virtuous Tribe.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

"GOD'S medicine" is one of the names given to greens by a people destitute of a knowledge of vitamins even to this day. This is not saying a thing against vitamins. We believe with all our heart and all our mind that the more exact, and extensive, and technical a man's knowledge of the nutrients is the better off he is, and the world as well, in so far as his influence counts.

Nevertheless, it is interesting to discover what a close agreement there often is between the modern and scientific knowledge of foods, and the great common sense decisions of primitive men, even when they have been hagridden with superstition. Quite ancient peoples have assigned specific medical virtues to this green and that, but this is not surprising when we consider what the old medical pharmacopoeia was—a list of plants or parts of plants, or of their essences or combinations. The bitter greens, or in special the chicory, used to be a standard home remedy for jaundice and other liver complaints. By the way, the epicurean table of today has greatly profited by the cultivation of this, which was but a wild and sprawling weed.

It is a pity that the race cannot hold on to all knowledge, especially about foods, but when one sort comes another sort is likely to go wholly or in part. For instance, today we surely know more exactly and extensively and technically the worth of green leaves in the diet, but only a few people—there used to be many—know about the great variety of edible wild greens which the spring time brings, and the summer continues, than did more primitive people. These two kinds of knowledge surely bolster one the other, and it is a mistake because we have one to hold the other of little account.

A woman of country upbringing of more than half a century back has this as her list of the greens she has eaten: Pokeweed shoots, black mustard, chicory, all kinds of dock, purslane, pigweed, plantain, wild lettuce (volunteer lettuce), young red clover, dandelion, milkweed (substitute for asparagus), mallow, lamb's quarter (cenopodium), sheep's sorrel, and a number of others more rare.

Our botanies and various other books yield entertaining and even fascinating knowledge about each of these plants, or "edible weeds." Typically, as well as typically ancient, waste places yield pot herbs for our health insurance and to satisfy our liking for something different.

The Amaranth Pigweed.

As an example of food growing in the most waste of modern places we may take what is called sometimes the "rough pigweed," to distinguish it from the smooth, which is also called lamb's quarter, and belongs to the goosefoot family, while that weed growing in our most modern of waste places belongs to that family of most poetical associations, the amaranths. One of the modern waste places it favors is the hard packed soil around rather neglected and barren city apartment buildings, often where not a blade of grass raises its head, and too often it grows there undisturbed by residents who need just such a food as it is to give them some zest for living.

A popular name for this is "red root," which it has, and another is "beet root," for when cooked it has a faint beet aroma, though it is not as savory as cooked beet tops, one of the most delicious of our garden greens. It is often found in forests, in vacant lots, and the tips of its branches are good to cook the summer through, while the other pigweed is strictly a spring green.

Purslane.

Here is another and even more delicious green—because of its acidity—which grows in waste places but loves best the thrifty kitchen garden, in which place it has been so hated as to furnish charming and humorous subject for many references in that gay book, "My Summer in a Garden," by Charles Dudley Warner, which acknowledges the fact that the Chinese eat it. So do the Dutch, who even can it for home and world use. And so will you eat it if you once learn to prepare it. Yet tons of this are weeded out of gardens every year and left to wilt. With sliced new beets it is delicious.

Dandelions.

But for many people the dandelions lead the list of greens from earliest March to late May, after which they are mostly too bitter and sunburned, although when they come up with long grass they may be good until mowing time for it. This year I saw in middle March a man turning aside the dead and heavy grasses of last year, growing next a fence around a great public building, to get dandelions. I envied him his "mess." In Italian markets one may sometimes find dandelions in late winter which are nothing but a red ball with a white heart, real vegetable lobster when cooked.

Other Greens.

A philanthropic emperor in China once had a book prepared which contained, it is said, a list of over 3,000 edible plants common to his country, copies of which were sent to every district where distress and poverty prevailed. We have a tremendous list coming from forests, fields, and seashore, all with some sort of edible history. The buds of the beech and calamus flower and other things like this have been eaten without being subjected to the pot.

Old Ways with Greens.

Some one once sent me this, headed "Grandmother's Method of Preserving Greens and Vegetables: Gather the broad leaved dandelions when tender, wash thoroughly, then with a thread and needle string them through the bud, or core, and hang in the window till dry, when the strings may be wrapped in newspaper to keep out the dust till used. String beans and peas may be strung the same way, and are preferable to salting down, for the flavor is kept better. Squash, pumpkin, turnips, apples or any pithy vegetables may be pared round and round, then strung and dried." Of course, okra and peppers are still prepared in this fashion, even in commercial quantities.

Preparing Greens.

It is much easier to pick over and trim greens before wetting them. It is lovely business to dig dandelions, give them a good shake to remove dead leaves and gress, and trim them before taking them into the house. The shake also removes anything like sand, and so shortens the work when they are washed. While each green requires its own special treatment in general, each must be examined, or picked over, and trimmed, then must follow two steps more before they are really ready to cook—washing and blanching—and this latter is only a more thorough or last step in the cleaning.

Washing Greens.

In washing greens or strawberries it is always best to put them into an ample quantity of water, and then to lift them out of it rather than to pour the water off them as is sometimes done, when sand or whatever heavy dirt is in the pan is poured back over them.

Blanching Greens.

It is sure that uncooked green leaves are medically best as food, therefore in cooking them our whole aim should be to make the process a careful or gentle one so that we may not by heat lessen their contribution to our diet with little left save their roughage value. To drop them into boiling water is exceeding cleansing and then to rinse them in cold shortens the cooking time, it has been proven. The rapid change of temperature gives effects equal to cooking. To keep them long in boiling water leaches out their valuable solubles, so we make the process brief, or not over five minutes, and then only if they are a little old. The tenderest require only a minute of blanching.

A Cooking Prohibition.

Do not use soda in cooking any vegetable. The French woman will tell for the worse. The greatest of our modern food scientists, who know because of long years of experiment, tell us that the soda destroys the vitamins. We believe them. More than that, it offers an excuse for careless cooking with more fire than is in any way good for the green, whether it is kept green or not. The soda is supposed to preserve the green color, etc. This may be preserved by careful and gentle cooking. Too much fire will turn a cooked green from green to yellow in a flash of the eye.

The Real Cooking.

The blanching is a part of the cooking, but after that comes the time process. After the greens are blanched they may generally be cooked in no more water than what clings to them. Doing this also makes it essential to keep the fire low, otherwise this bit you that it makes them "horrid," meaning that it affects their flavor of water will disappear as steam and the greens will burn. Or when a cook cannot manage this sort of cooking she can put the blanched greens in the double boiler. She may be surprised to find much more water in it when they have cooked tender than she imagined was there. This is because the greens are ninety-five per cent water, and some of what is in them has been cooked out, while that on them has not cooked away as it would in even the slowest cooking, generally.

Butter and Cream Dressing.

For fine and soft greens a butter and cream dressing is highly acceptable. Dry the greens quickly, or press them dry, chop them fine, and then combine them with a little hot cream seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, and perhaps a little nutmeg. Cook the two together until the cream seems mainly absorbed, and serve. This is nice cooking which no recipe can do. Judgment and care are the agents.

On Seasoning Greens Generally.

In the old days a piece of pork or bacon was cooked with greens to add the agreeable fat dressing. Vinegar was the only thing added besides the salt, which latter not needed when the meat was salty. As served, no butter or oil would have clung to the greens because they were too wet. When the pot liquor was used for something the virtues in the greens were in a sense salvaged, but the too long cooking yielded anything but a dainty dish. Now we cook the greens in the least bit of water, lest they be sodden or water soaked, and then dry out or press out any water left so that butter will be a satisfactory dressing, and the one that makes them most savory.

Melted Butter and Lemon Juice.

To get an acid green like the much appreciated sorrel cultivated in France and elsewhere, a seasoning of butter and lemon juice and salt and perhaps a bit of paprika is made into a sort of sauce and poured over it. The greens must be served at once after this dressing is put over them. Two tablespoons of melted butter and more or less of the juice of one lemon are the proportions and right for a small amount of greens.

French Dressing on Greens.

A French dressing on dry hot greens may be as satisfactory as when these are molded and served cold for a salad.

Bacon Dressing.

This dressing which makes wilted lettuce and is good on green or wax string beans cooked is also excellent on the less delicate greens: One-fourth pound of well chilled and sliced bacon, two tablespoons of vinegar, a little sugar. To make it milder yet add to it a tablespoon or two of sour cream. Pare off any smoky edges from the bacon and remove any bits of gristle. Then either cut into bits with scissors, or put through the food chopper. It must be cold and rather fresh cut, or it will be stringy. Therefore the scissors may be best. Put the bacon, so cut fine, into a cold frying pan and stir while it toasts, never allowing it to get smoking hot. Add seasonings and serve.

Meat Gravy.

Use meat gravy instead of cream, cooking the two together until the gravy has blended with the greens.

Thickening Greens.

When greens are to be used for a garnish some butter can be melted and as much flour stirred in to it as would make a medium thick sauce, cooking the flour rather well, yet gently, in the butter, then adding the greens and cooking to a blend. A little cream may be added to soften, as it always does, and a little fresh butter at last to make savory, or a meat stock may add fat and body as well with flavor.

To Crisp Greens.

Sometimes greens that seem wilted may be thoroughly cleaned, then let in ice cold water to grow crisp as they will do. The leaves of the rough pigweed will soon look as though they were growing. The heart of the dandelion expands when thus treated, etc.

Cooking Dandelion Greens.

After these greens have been cleaned and washed the larger and coarser sorts may be blanched ten minutes, the small and tender ones five. Rinse with cold water and cook gently in a covered kettle in water clinging from the rinse. Tender greens will require then only fifteen or twenty minutes of cooking to be tender. Dry and squeeze the water out, add butter and nothing else if you want them the nearest au naturel, and so most wholesome.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

In the Rain.

I received an invitation to a home wedding, the ceremony to be performed at high noon. A small porch at the home had been artistically decorated, and the wedding party was to stand there. It had rained hard all day, and as the wedding hour approached there seemed no chance for any change of weather. But promptly at 12 o'clock the guests were invited to the yard to stand under umbrellas, capes or coats to witness the ceremony which was performed on the porch as had been planned. J. W.

The Minister's Little Joke.

A country minister, who has a keen sense of humor, told me of this instance. It was in the hills of Pennsylvania and a farmer noted for his thriftiness and industry asked the minister to come out to his place on a certain day to marry him.

When the minister arrived at the designated time he found the farmer in his work clothes and bare feet, plowing, and leaving his team standing in the middle of the field he approached the minister. At the same time the bride, likewise no more gayly garbed, approached the pair.

The minister asked the groom if he had not better tie his team before the ceremony began.

"O," replied the man, "it won't take long and they will be all right."

The minister thought he would give the man a good lesson in reverence and so he chose the longest service he knew and prolonged the prayer to almost endless length. Needless to say the neglected team had in the meantime plowed a furrow that was not consistent with a careful farmer's rule, and the minister enjoys his little joke to this day. L. B.

Married in a Hospital.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was held in a hospital. The young couple had set their wedding date, and on that day had set out for the justice of the peace. But fate intervened in the form of a reckless driver, who ran into them and demolished their car, so that both were injured [but not the reckless driver]. They were taken to the hospital, and later in the day, after their wounds were dressed, they decided that the wedding should take place as usual. And so, on adjoining nospital beds they were married and despite the strangeness of their wedding they are still married! J. L. B.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

Uneducated Meterman.

Wife—O, Oscar, a strange man was here today and said he wished to read our gas meter.

Husband—Well, did you let him in?"

Wife—Mercy, no! He used very poor grammar, and I felt sure he would not read it properly. MRS. A. C.

Move Her in That Direction.

Wife—Mrs. S. said a sentimental song always moves her.

Hubby—Really? Let's play "Home Sweet Home." S. F.

Eternal Sleep.

My husband has little confidence in my driving. We were taking a long automobile trip and I said, "Shall I drive and let you sleep awhile?"

He said, "No, dear, I'm afraid I might sleep too long." J. M.

Next Best Thing.

Wifey—"Hubby, dear, what did you buy me for my birthday?"

Hubby [grouchy]—"You know, that wrist watch you wanted—well, I bought you an alarm clock."

F. O'N.

Failed to Register.

Wife—[Evening of election day]: "Did you vote today, dear?"

Hubby—"No, I didn't register."

Wife—[sweetly]: "You never do." MRS. W. R. C.

Divine—And Then Some.

He (reading an article in the paper)—It says here that the divine height of woman is 5 feet 5 inches.

She (angrily)—How dare you say that, when you know quite well that I am 5 feet 7 inches?

He—O, well, my dear, you are more than divine. M. P.

And She Said——

Wife: "When I begin to look old, will you love me?"

Husband [absentmindedly]: "Sure I do, dear." E. L. R.

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

The Art of Letter Writing

Bread and Butter Notes, the Word of Condolence, or That of Congratulation Are Simple to Pen and Are Acts of Thoughtfulness That Will Not Be Forgotten

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

By Persis Standish.

MORE lost than the lost art of conversation is the lost art of letter writing. I have on my desk two letters, and have had a number of others, asking me questions about when and how certain letters should be written, on what kind of stationery, and in what manner. There are so many varieties of letters, each of their own kind important, that one hesitates to give general rules.

Business letters, of course, we will not discuss, since it is easy for the heads of firms to dictate the policies of their business letters for the whole organization. But there is one thing I would like to say about business letters that come to newspapers. Many of our correspondents complain now and then that they do not receive prompt answers. If they do not, it is because of the volume of the mail that comes to a newspaper, rather than for any other reason. For a letter to any department of a newspaper is a sacred thing. There is no other organization in the world that treats letters with the same consideration and the same importance as is given to them as newspapers. I have known it to happen that people have lost good positions for merely neglecting a letter—not letters, but a letter—either in answering it flippantly or neglecting to answer it at all. So our correspondents can write to any department of this paper and receive always the utmost consideration, the utmost silence, if they wish, and get the promptest reply it is possible to give. First come, first served.

The Letter of Condolence.

Next to the newspaper letters, the ones that socially should receive the first consideration are those of condolence. There is no possible way of expressing sympathy that is so adequate and at the same time so satisfying to the recipient as a letter. The letter need not be long, it need not be flowery, but it is easy to say in black and white things that are hard to express in the spoken word. When you see the bereaved one your own tears choke you, but if you are at a distance you can really express what you feel in sympathy for them. A letter of condolence can be extremely simple. Here is one received lately by a woman who had lost a child, from some one who is a practical stranger to her.

"Dear Mrs. Green: The little that the human word can do to express human sympathy, I wish to make it do now. Will you take the wish for the deed and believe that my heart goes out to you in this hour of your sorrow?

"CORA BROWN."

Expressing Thanks.

Next in importance in the letter writing scheme are letters of gratitude. They should be written almost immediately after the receipt of either gift or favor. Of course, in the case of wedding gifts they may be postponed until the honeymoon is over, if the bride wishes. However, this is a little bit procrastinating to me, as it is much easier to write a letter hot off the pan, if you know what I mean, than to try to write it a few weeks later when the incident is cold. For instance, if the bride writes immediately after she has received each gift, she will not miss the time that it takes to write the individual note and she will not become confused as to which letters she has written, and will not forget anybody. Also, she will not have a tremendous labor before her when she comes back from her honeymoon.

Letters of thanks for Christmas gifts should be sent no later than the 15th of January. A letter of gratitude for a gift can be very short, indeed, and still express a great deal of appreciation.

The typical letter for the bride or other recipient of gifts should be something like this:

"My dear Harriet: How do you suppose to know just what it is I most desire to possess? Then, how do you manage to have it here at just the right moment when I most wish to possess it? I think you must either be or own a wizard.

"Thank you so much for the lovely gift. Do come and see it in my house. I shall be here, too. Affectionately,

"HAZEL."

Under the heading of letters of gratitude, of course the "bread and butter" letters are a most important group. They must be written immediately upon one's return from a visit. If one has been some time in a house—say a week or two—a short letter will not do. The letter then must be at least several pages long and attempt to chronicle events since one has left the house.

A visit of a week-end calls for just a note. Some very punctilious people write such a letter even to dinner hostesses and luncheon hostesses, if the dinner and luncheons were given for them especially. This is not absolutely necessary where a call can be paid shortly after the event, but it is nice, particularly if the guest of honor happened to be from out of town and the hostess was the friend of a very good friend.

Sending flowers sometimes does away with the necessity of writing such letters, but in case one sends flowers one should express on the card that goes with them one's appreciation for hospitality received.

Congratulations.

Letters of congratulation are among the hardest of all to write, but they are among the most delightful to receive. They should be written not only to men who are engaged to be married, but also in many other cases, such as graduations from college, success in an artistic way, remarkable promotions, and any other good fortune that happens to a dear friend. Of course, no example is needed here of this sort of letter because it is so easy to write from your heart on such an occasion.

Of love letters there is not much to say, Miss Blake having said most of it already, and probably warned you with the old slogan: "Write, and fear no man. Do not write, and fear no woman." However, there are lots of letters in social intercourse which are quite as dangerous as love letters, and about which nobody hears until there is a suit for libel, or other fracas not quite so serious, but equally unpleasant. In a general way it is safest never to say an unkind thing at all, but it is positively dangerous to say one in a letter. Your dearest friend today may turn out to be your dearest enemy tomorrow. This may sound cynical, but it is the way of the world.

A man or a woman have come between two men and two women many times. Letters have been shown in which something written in the strictest confidence and meant only for loving eyes have been flaunted before cynical ones, and then the little "bird on the wire" tells all, and there is trouble. Unless you absolutely know such and such to be a fact never put it in a letter. Then, if you know that it is a fact and it is an unpleasant fact, still do not put it in a letter. If you have any warning to give, or if you wish to say anything unpleasant, say it—but never write it!

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Sun Rooms Bring the Brightness and Freshness of Spring Days Right Into the House.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Willa de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SPRING days, clear skies and pleasant weather bring around "sun room time" again. We must plan now to brighten up our sun rooms, to make them more livable for the many coming days which we shall enjoy in them. Such a wide variety of furnishings and decorations are on the market that any number of interesting schemes may be carried out successfully.

Adjoining a living room done in French provincial style is the charmingly simple little sun room illustrated today. The walls are covered with a blue and cream plaid paper and woodwork is painted deep blue. A group of three windows almost fills one wall. Novel window curtains are made of cream colored voile, bound with vermilion. They are finished at the top with narrow French headings, and are caught back with vermilion cords. Extending across the full width at the top of the window is a narrow wooden shelf, painted blue to match the woodwork. Colorful bits of odd pottery are ranged along this shelf. Placed against the group of windows is an old hickory flag seat settee. A pair of arm chairs and a side chair at a little desk match the settee.

Red, blue and cream colored striped linen makes seat pads for all of these. Decorative flowered linen upholsters a large, comfortable arm chair. A drop leaf table of hickory in one corner near the end of the settee holds a bright colored pottery lamp, with a lemon yellow paper shade decorated in black, as well as an enameled box and an ash tray. A small table at the other end holds a bright bowl of flowers. A wrought iron bridge lamp, lighting the desk, has a shade of accordion plaited, flowered yellow calico. Deep blue fiber rugging completely covers the floor.

Quite different in character is a larger and more luxurious sun room. Walls and woodwork are painted a pale sage green. At the many casement windows are curtains of copper colored silk gauze. They are sill length, hanging straight, and are edged with narrow multi-colored worsted fringe. Large comfortable bent reed chairs and sofa are enameled burnt orange with trims of deep green. Striped glazed chintz cushions repeat these colors. A wrought iron settee at one side of the room is fitted with figured linen cushions and a wrought iron bench, placed before one group of windows, has a shiny black patent leather seat pad.

As colorful as a garden of blooms is another sun room in a small apartment. Walls are a light sunny yellow and the woodwork is black, decorated with a fine line of jade green. Black tarlatan, gathered very full and stitched at the hems with several rows of brightly colored worsted, is used for window curtains. The furniture is a combination of reed and wood, painted jade green with black trims. Cushions for the chairs and sofa are of linen frieze in rainbow stripes of brilliant hue. Throwing the colors into strong relief is the black wool chenille floor covering.

Rainbow effects evidence great popularity for sun room use. At a recent exhibit, one of the most favored suites was one made of stick style bent reed, the sticks painted in alternating rainbow colors. The suite is set up in interesting display room. Walls are paneled and painted cream color with the panelings picked out in bright violet. At the windows are glass curtains of natural colored casement cloth, bordered with two inch bands of violet and sapphire blue glass rings. Cushions on the rainbow furniture are made of violet homespun, piped with blue. A pair of blue glass lamps on end tables have plaited violet paper shades, tied with blue tassel cords. Deep blue rugs are used on the floor.

Pleasingly effective is a sun room in a suburban house. The walls are done in pearl gray paper with an allover pattern of foliage in two tones of green and gray. Woodwork is painted a soft leaf green. Curtains at the long French windows are illusively different. They are made of two thicknesses of casement gauze, hanging straight to the floor. The one against the glass is of amber, the other of pale pinkish orange. They produce a soft glowing light that is most fascinating.

Bent reed furniture is painted a deep amber with leaf green trims. Cushions are of ombré striped material, shading from pale amber to deep orange. End tables and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of mellow golden maple. Green glass lamps conveniently placed have parchment shades. An extra arm chair placed near a set of narrow book shelves is upholstered in green and yellow checked linen. An amber glass lamp on a square maple table at one side of the chair has a marbleized paper shade. A Chinese rug almost completely covers the floor.

Incidental tables are of wrought iron with decorative tile tops. A colorful screen, painted in an Italian renaissance design, stands in one corner of the room. Wrought iron lamps have shades of figured paper. Large black and white marbleized rubber tiles cover the floor. Wrought iron doors separate this sun room from the adjoining living room.

In the Nick of Time.

It was during the construction of my firm's new building. I came to see how the work was progressing. The elevators were running, but doors had not yet been put in for them. I looked down from the sixth floor to see where the elevator was, and not seeing it down below, I lifted my head. No sooner had I done this than the elevator, coming down, passed the floor I was standing on. If I had remained looking down a second longer I wouldn't be writing this.

I shudder now when I think of my narrow escape. W. McV.

A Scare in a Cave.

When I was a girl of about 15 I went with a party of twenty people to explore a cave.

The entrance was near the river's brink. It was a tunnel four or five feet in length and just large enough for my father and one of the women, who weighed 200, to squeeze in.

We had to lie flat and crawl, till suddenly we found ourselves in a spacious room. There were many such enlargements, each to be entered through tunnels' or narrow winding passage ways. We ah-ed and oh-ed till several hours had elapsed.

At last we turned to retrace our steps, noticing the freakish shadows from our two lanterns flit about, listening to the weird sounds made by falling stones and dripping water. Then, lo! We had lost our way. Even the dog stood still and stared. The river was pouring in through an opening. The rush and roar of the angry waters was sickening. We were terror stricken. A woman fainted, another prayed, the rest of us stood like statues mute and still.

A brave little boy walked forward and discovered our river was only a stream of light, while the mighty roar of the water was the sound made by the wind outside, all of which had gone unnoticed when we had entered.

To this day my heart stands still for a second when I think of the terrible moment when we first beheld that "stream." G. E. A.

Remembered.

Years ago, while living in a small town, I played with a little girl next door who later married a wealthy man and took up her residence in a large city. I often heard of her wealth and charities, but never supposed she would have time to give her former playmate a thought.

My greatest thrill occurred on Christmas day, when the postman handed me a greeting card from her enclosing a good substantial check, with a few personal words added urging me to visit her this coming summer. A. A. E.

Scaring a Wildcat.

It was about 3 o'clock in the morning in a Canadian mining camp, where we were living, when I was awakened by a great commotion among the chickens. I went to the back door and saw a large cat just outside the henhouse door. I picked up some potatoes that were in the kitchen and threw them at the cat. It turned toward me, bristled up, and came in my direction.

I closed the door hurriedly and called my husband. As we went out the door we saw the cat go around the house and suddenly realized it was a wild cat! MRS. J. R. T.

A Narrow Escape.

After a long and tiring motor trip we had arrived in a strange town and rented a sleeping room in a private home. Having driven all day and the night before, we retired early and in a few minutes were almost asleep when I told my husband that I thought I smelled gas. He said he did, too, and turned on the electric light and saw an open gas pipe close to the electric light fixture in the ceiling. He lighted a match and a small explosion followed and a stream of flame burst from the pipe.

We told the people in whose home we were, and they immediately put a cap on the pipe, explaining that they had just turned on the gas, having moved in the house only a few days before and did not know there was a gas pipe in that room. MRS. A. E. P.

High Handed.

Several years ago I boasted a first hand knowledge of numismatics. As I knew the majority of rare United States coins, I was ever on the lookout for them. When the neighborhood grocer, learning of my hobby, came to me and offered to sell me the score or so of coins that he had taken in during his years of business, I bought the lot after seeing several choice specimens. But, imagine my surprise, when, looking my purchase over more carefully, I found an almost perfect silver dollar of the year 1794, the first year they were coined. As I made no secret of my good fortune, my neighbors soon knew of it.

The next Sunday, a rather talkative woman I had known for some time came over and asked to borrow my coins, as one of her guests was a coin dealer and she would like to show him my collection. I did not feel worried when she failed to return them that evening. Monday she came over, and handing me my case, glibly began: "My friend who visited me last night, so wanted to buy your dollar that I couldn't refuse him, knowing you would be glad to get the money."

Then, while I stood speechless, she handed me $50 and added: "I went to so much trouble on your account that I know you won't miss the $10 that I took for myself to buy a new hat with." She then turned and walked away. MRS. R. C.

A Pretty Long Minute.

One day a neighbor girl came over to my house and asked me if I would lend her my skates for a minute, as she wanted to show them to her mother, for she wanted a pair like them. Of course I consented. After many weeks of waiting she returned them all rusty and bent, saying, "I had an awfully nice time on them, but mother said I had better return them before something happens to them." They were so rusty I could never use them again. E. McC.

CHILDREN ONCE PUNY—NOW NO MOTHER'S CARE!

Before that wonderful little friend of school-children came to town, known as PARTOLA,—"The Doctor in Candy Form"—many boys and girls were puny, sickly, a great care and worry to mothers. They were constipated, never told mother, hence the prevalence of system poisoning, professionally known as Toxemia.

But now, mother uses this remedy the little ones like—PARTOLA, a mild pleasant mint-flavored laxative and internal antiseptic—that keeps bowels regular, appetites sharpened, digestion vigorous and system free from the poisonous bacteria that cause the child to fail in health and studies.

PARTOLA is mother's convenient, simple, economical, likable remedy for the entire family, now in millions of intelligent, well-regulated homes. All good druggists sell regular bot at 30c, double size 50c, family size $1.00.

Popular Actor Now Able to Eat What He Likes

THOUSANDS of theater-goers have rocked with laughter at "Charley" Grapewin's delightful comedy acts. But few ever guessed that some of Mr. Grapewin's funniest scenes were played while he was suffering agonies with stomach trouble.

While playing in his well-known success, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," Mr. Grapewin's stomach trouble became so bad that it seemed as if he might have to quit the stage for a time. Fortunately, he was induced to try Adlerika. Results were so good that he has never been without a bottle since. "It surely is great," he declares, "to be able to eat anything I want without fear of gas or other stomach trouble."

Intestinal Stasis

STOMACH GAS, indigestion, gas bloating, and other forms of stomach and bowel trouble are often due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This increasingly common disease, which is usually caused by improper food, lack of exercise, and other faults of modern life, is said to afflict three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis simply means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. Instead of being promptly passed out of the bowels, this waste matter remains many hours or even days longer than it should. It then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and causes gas bloating, sour stomach, indigestion and sleeplessness.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move daily, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or soda or magnesia cannot give more than temporary relief from Intestinal Stasis or Gas. It can be relieved permanently only by continued REAL intestinal cleansing.

Adlerika, first used by Dr. Carl Weschcke in his private practice, is a bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic which acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other detergent and gas-expelling elements.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of the first effects of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might poison your system.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as most stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Many physicians recognize it as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary.

Don't think if your bowels move daily that you cannot have Intestinal Stasis. Gas is one of the most common symptoms. You'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter which Adlerika brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it.

The popular actor, Mr. Charles Grapewin, of 311 N. Arden Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Grapewin is known to thousands of theater-goers throughout the United States and Canada.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

ZIP COON ate supper with me last night and afterwards he told me a story. Here it is as he told it to me:

His brother, Jim Coon, lives just over the hill and he's a great fisherman. Every time he passes Crafty Fox's den on his way to fish he sings out: "Hey, Crafty, old top, this is a great day for the fish to bite. Why don't you cut yourself a pole and come along? I'll show you how to hook up the nicest mess of wiggly shiners you ever clapped your eyes on."

He does not really want Crafty to come with him. He just says it to tease him.

He would go whistling down the road.

"Go chase yourself," snaps back Crafty. "You can't teach me how to fish. I knew before you were born."

"All right," grins brother Jim. "I'll bet you don't know how to put a worm on a hook and you can't tell whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing up your bait." Then he would go whistling down the road.

One day when he came to the lake he dropped his line into the water and the first bite—what do you think he pulled up? Old Tommy Turtle. Then Jim began to tease him.

"I won't let you go, Tommy, unless you pomise me you'll clean up all that old junk lying around the bottom of this fishing hole."

"I promise," said Tommy. "Just let me get back into the water and I'll move all that junk out of the way. I promise."

So kerplunk! Back he dived.

"Get out of here," he barked. "This is my fishing ground and all the fish in it are mine."

"Excuse me for living," answered Brother Jim and moved away to the other side of the hole.

"YOU say I can't fish, hey?" sang out Crafty. "That I don't know whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing my bait, hey? Well, I'll show you."

He dropped his line into the water and the end of his pole began to twitch and bob up and down.

"A bite," he yelled. "A big bite. Now watch me, Jim Coon."

Up came an old busted shoe.

He pulled and pulled with all his might and at last up came an—old busted shoe.

Jim began to holler. "My, my, what a lovely shiner you caught."

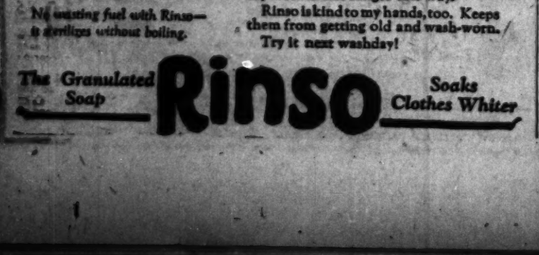
Crafty was mad. Into the water went his hook and line. Yank! Another bite. He pulled and pulled and up came an old pair of torn breeches.

Crafty was so mad he began to snort. Just then another jerk came on the line and he pulled up an old pair of suspenders.

ALL that afternoon he did nothing but pull up bits of junk. Finally he was so mad he couldn't stand it any longer. He broke his pole in two and flung it in the lake.

"Don't ever say fish to me again, Jim Coon, or I'll beat you to a frazzle."

Then he staggered home. He was all tuckered out.



Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me.

Brother Jim went over to look at the pile of junk and suddenly he began to laugh, for there was old Tommy Turtle poking his head out of the water.

"I guess I got it all cleared up, Jim Coon. There isn't any more down there. Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me."

He blew a few bubbles and disappeared.

Then Jim rolled around on the bank and nearly burst with laughter because he knew now why Crafty Fox had not caught any fish.

I know a way to get clothes whiter without scrubbing

I'VE told all my neighbors about it, it's so wonderful! No hard rubbing or scrubbing, no boiling—just the simple matter of soaking the week's wash in safe, creamy, sterilizing suds.

Rinso suds! That's the whole secret. Rinso makes the water soft and suds all through—and the dirt and stains float right off by themselves!

Even cuffs, hems and edges that always had to be scrubbed until they were frayed, now come snowy with just a touch between the fingers. Of course my clothes last longer this way.

Rinso is kind to my hands, too. Keeps them from getting old and wash-worn.

Try it next washday!

No wasting fuel with Rinso—it sterilizes without boiling.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the cicada, sometimes called the locust, should live in the ground for seventeen years as a grub, clinging to the root of some tree and sucking sap from it, and then, some day, should turn loose, dig its way to the outer air and transform into the noisiest insect in the world.

The cicadas come out of the ground as grubs. They crawl hurriedly up the nearest bush, hunch up their backs and burst open their grub jackets. Then the sturdy, full grown cicada comes out, as big as a man's thumb. It is radiant, equipped with whirring wings, and given to much noise. Everybody is familiar with the rasping noise that the American cicada sets up. Yet it is only the male that is noisy. He has a bit of dry membrane like a drum head that he uses for the purpose. He pushes it in and out rapidly. He makes a noise on the same principle as the automobile horn.

It is little trouble on summer days to find, hanging on the bushes along the roadside the shells from which these cicadas have come. Often, also, it is easy to find pairs of cicada lovers. They take their places side by side on the limb of a tree. There they sit through the summer day and night, the female pensive, the male beating his endless serenade.

The female cuts a slit in the bark of the tree and lays her eggs. After a while these hatch out into funny looking little worm like things. These crawl out to the end of a limb and jump off. They fall upon the ground and dig in. They seize some friendly root and hang on. They are down for seventeen years. In most cases whole swarms go down at a time, set their alarm clocks for seventeen years, and all come up again at almost the same moment, when that time has passed. These are called seventeen year locusts. There are irregulars in the ranks, however, that appear at irregular intervals. But among the wierdest marvels of nature are these huge swarms that come to light but once in seventeen years.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

My little cousin, aged 3, saw a dog crossing the street the other day and said to me: "That dog is crossing the street without his mother."

Then on further thought, she said: "But it's all right; he looked both ways." E. W.

Robert, my little next door friend, always kept a close watch on me when I went to get the car out, but his mother had told him he must never ask me to take him riding.

One day, seeing him with his hat and coat all on and standing near the hedge, I said brightly, "Well, Robert, are you going somewhere today?"

"O, yes," he answered at once, then added, "I fink I is, but I isn't asked yet." B. R.

Tommy went to the hospital to see mother and the new baby sister. When his visit was over and he picked up his cap to leave, the baby awoke and cried.

"Boy!" exclaimed Tommy proudly, "listen to her holler 'cause I gotta go!" Mrs. K. D. F.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

Mary had a conscience, one
That was as chill as snow.
And everywhere that Mary went
It horned right in. You know!

SONG FOR THE SENTIMENTAL.

She scorned to wed a millionaire
And make a loveless match.
She lost him to a debutante
Who made a clever snatch.

Now Mary has to realize
—Of toil she's had her fill—
If working girls won't wed for cash.
Some thrifty heiress will.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEMORIAL.

Once, when one lost her sturdy oak
She wore black widow's veiling;
But even styles in mourning change,
A fact there's no assailing.
Though I've lost Jack I wear no weeds,
Crepe bands would be bologny,
His memory is kept alive
By checks for alimony.

GROUNDS FOR MARRIAGE.

O, I am jilting Jerry and
Dear Jerry's jilting me.
We do not lack affection, just
Compatibility.

For Jerry owns a motor boat
And I prefer a yawl;
I do the old time breast stroke; he
Performs that awkward crawl.

He does not like the car I drive;
I scorn his cigarets;
The tunes that raise my temperature
Are ones that he forgets.

And so we part regretfully
And feel that life's a botch.
'Tis not enough to wed upon
A mutual hate of—Scotch.

LADIES IN CRIME

Bernice Zalimas—Two Trials and Out

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

Gets 14 Years Dressed in Mourning, but Gets Out in Gay Clothing

IN HER WIDOW'S WEEDS Mrs. Bernice Zalimas was given 14 years in the penitentiary on a charge of murdering her husband of a few months with arsenic. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE first time she went to trial Bernice Zalimas, plump and pretty Lithuanian cloak model, wore all black, for wasn't she in mourning for her husband, Dominick, even though it was for his murder that she was being tried? She fainted often, and was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Then the Supreme court remanded the case back for a new trial.

The second time she sat in court, Bernice, her widow's grief somewhat assuaged, wore those golden shades that combine happily with golden hair. She smiled more than she swooned. She was acquitted.

HONEYMOON TRAGEDY

From the very beginning, when the authorities first began to hint that this bride of four months had given arsenic to her husband, that she might be fancy free for other loves, Bernice had fashioned her defense, passionately, out of an indictment of her own Lithuanian neighbors in the vicinity of South Halsted and 48th streets.

"When any one dies suddenly in the Lithuanian neighborhood," the 23 year old bride had said, and kept on saying, "all the old women have a grand time making new gossip by stirring up rumors of murder. And when the wife is young and pretty and blonde she has no chance to escape being accused of killing her husband."

Officially, Dominick died of pneumonia and nephritis. The doctor summoned to the honeymoon flat at 4936 South Loomis avenue some four hours after Dominick was dead signed the death certificate this wise. That was on Nov. 18, 1924. Then the tiny whispers began to filter their way in and out of the neighborhood. They gathered momentum, and presently, on the first day of December, Dr. Irving Porges, a coroner's physician, was sent out to the house. The question mark which the city investigators thrust up was, "How could the physician, hastily summoned after Zalimas' death, have had opportunity to make the proper diagnosis?" The grave was opened; the dead man's vital organs were removed. A few days more, and Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's chemist, announced his findings:

"Enough arsenic to kill ten people."

TONGUES BEGIN TO WAG

Then the busy tongues began to wag in excited Lithuanian syllables. The old wives recalled Bernice's affection for two or three castoff suitors, especially the baker who came to deliver a dozen rolls and tarried long. They recollected how stormy had been the honeymoon. They remembered the separation of the newly wedded pair, and a reconciliation, shortly before the husband's death.

A little girl told what she said she knew of the comely blonde's stolen kisses with the visiting bakery man. A druggist searched his records to find that a Mrs. Zalimas had purchased arsenic from him.

And the police went out and brought Mrs. Zalimas back to jail.

Bernice was about a perfect 42, large, buxom. But her yellow hair, piled high on her head, her pink cheeks, and her accent made of the obscure cloak model, a pivot figure over at the jail. She told how all her life she had wanted to get ahead, and in the busy days that followed it seemed as if she had succeeded in a way of which she had never dreamed.

While neighbors were over in the Criminal court telling the prosecutors their version of the suspicious circumstances of Dominick's taking off, Bernice, from behind the bars, was growing autobiographical.

QUITE A LINGUIST

"I came from Lithuania when I was eight years old, and studied English in school. I speak also the Polish, the Russian and the Bohemian, as well as the Lithuanian. I went to work in a soap factory. I got to be assistant forelady. But a soap factory's no place for a girl with, what you call it, ambition.

"So I looked around and I got a job selling pretty dresses in a store. Those neighbor women, O, how they hated me when I left the factory. Jealous, they were.

"I bought myself a few dresses cheap, but they were pretty. Yes, and some silk stockings. I lived on the Lithuanian neighborhood with pa and ma. But I didn't speak to the neighbors. I knew better. I knew they didn't like me and they wanted to get something on me. Ma died three years ago, and so when I married Dominick we stayed on in the house with pa."

More specifically, on the charge that she had fed her bridegroom arsenic soup, Bernice made emphatic denial. First, that she hadn't done it; second, that the neighbors always try to frame a young widow, especially if they are jealous of her yellow hair and her black silk stockings; and, third, that she was too smart to have got herself caught if she had done it.

COULD HAVE ESCAPED

"If I'd a-killed him," she declared, "I had two weeks in which to get away, and they'd a-never got me. Why, I had the post-mortem performed myself, to shut up those tongues of the old gossips."

But the post-mortem report that one-tenth of a grain of arsenic had been found, coupled with the stories the others were telling the investigators over in the Criminal court, held Bernice to the grand jury, and a few weeks later she was indicted for murder.

All the time she protested that her husband, who was a carpenter for the Pullman company by days and a practicing naprapath by nights, was forever "fussing with herbs and medicines" and must have taken arsenical poison by mistake.

Somebody found a two pound box of arsenic in the attic of her home. Somebody else, a little ten year old Anna Skberecki, told of visiting Bernice and always being told to run away and play when Leo Kalinowski, the affectionate baker, came with the day's quota of bread and rolls. Once, Anna was sure, she had seen the two hugging and kissing.

TROUBLE PATCHED UP

These two pieces of evidence, together with the coroner's report were sufficient to the men on the grand jury. They indicted her for murder.

Then, to add his contribution, came Bruno, brother of the dead man. He told how Dominick and the coy but plump Bernice had been married on Independence day that same year, 1925. The storms had not been long in coming. On Oct. 7 the two separated. Several weeks later, Bruno said, he accompanied his brother to the office of an attorney to start divorce proceedings against the bride. Next day Dominick, accompanied this time by two brothers, went to tell Bernice what he was about to do.

"He was in there a long time," said Bruno, "and when he came out, he told us to go away, that everything was patched up, and there would be no divorce. We went."

The following night, so the story went on, Dominick telephoned his wife that he was ill, bad pains in the chest and stomach; that the agony had come on just after he had eaten a nice bowl of soup at dinner that evening. Two days more—it is Nov. 14 now—he telephoned Bruno, so Bruno told the authorities, that the reconciliation business was all off and that he purposed to start divorce proceedings at once. He asked Bruno to come over and talk things over. Bruno didn't hurry. Four days passed, and the morning of the 18th Bruno learned that Dominick was dead.

That was the foundation upon which Assistant State's Attorneys Louis Geiman and Louis Blumenthal built their case.

YES, SHE'S FAT

Bernice took the stand. Yes, she was fat. But she was pretty. In response to the questionings of her attorney, Eugene McGarry, she told of her wedding. There were four merry days of "feasting" she explained.

As for Leo, the baker, the ex-suitor, why "of course I kissed him. All men kiss the bride," and that was the end of that.

When the questions touched the death scenes, Bernice just couldn't stand it. She sobbed and cried and wept, until the prosecutors were ready to blind-fold the jury and muffle their ears. Then she took out a handkerchief to wipe her eyes, and the fragrance of heliotrope perfume wafted its soft way down to the jury box. So the judge adjourned the session and the twelve good men and true were hurried out into an ante room to smoke black cigars and forget the heliotrope and the tears.

Next day there were more tears. This time grief so swept her body that she flopped around on the chair, and in the confusion her big picture hat fell off. But she lost nothing by the accident, for the jury had an opportunity to glimpse a curling mass of yellow hair.

14 YEARS IN JOLIET

The last day of the trial, when Attorney McGarry was finishing his plea for her innocence, Bernice fainted. It took five men to carry her into the judge's chambers, but when she came to she gave unto each a long smile.

The jury, that May day, listened intently as the prosecutors urged them not to let a pretty face and a few tears sway them. They deliberated three hours and thirty-five minutes. Then the foreman told the court that the twelve had found her guilty and sentenced her to 14 years in the penitentiary.

She didn't faint this time. She sprawled on her father's shoulder, and cried out:

"O, what can I say? Why have they condemned me so? God knows I am innocent of this terrible charge."

Next day, over in the jail, still puzzled because she had not been sent out, number 33, in the list of ladies tried for murder and acquitted, Bernice said this:

"I loved my husband and I always thought so much of the laws of this country. But now I can't love my husband nor the country. Why, I asked for the post-mortem. He was always drinking herb medicine; probably he mixed it wrong. But I'll get out yet, because I am innocent."

SMIRCH ON FAIR NAME

Then she explained fervently that what really hurt was not the thought of spending 14 years in jail, but the smirch on her fair name. Only, she could just as well dispense with the 14 year sentence, too.

The following August Bernice filed a suit in the Superior court to collect her husband's insurance. That she wanted to use it to pay her expenses for her second trial for his murder did not apparently strike her as ironic. It was a nice problem she had before her. Dominick was insured for $5,000. But if he met death by accidental or violent means then the insurance money doubled. She wanted the $10,000, but she couldn't say that his death was violent. For she needed the money to prove just the opposite. She maintained that death was accidental and that the $10,000 was hers by right and reason.

In the midst of these deliberations the Supreme court granted her a stay of sentence, then a new trial, on the grounds of a technical flaw in the admission of evidence by the druggist who said he had sold arsenic to a Mrs. Zalimas, but wouldn't identify her as the Mrs. Zalimas on trial.

In January, 1926, she was granted bail and went to a hospital for a while. By the spring of the year she was rested, slimmer, and had some pretty new clothes. Her year of mourning was up, and she burst forth in gay colors.

She took the stand. Attorney McGarry asked his client, "Did you ever administer poison to your husband?"

I DIDN'T DO IT!

Then things began to happen in that courtroom. Bernice cut swaths in the air with her hands. Her body swayed back and forth. In a frenzy of screams she yelled out, "I didn't do it! Why should I do it? I swear to Almighty God I didn't do it!"

Then she swooned and court was temporarily adjourned.

Once again the jury went out. This time they stayed out two hours and a half. Once again they filed in. This time the foreman announced that the twelve had found Bernice Zalimas not guilty.

"Thank God, thank God" sang out the exuberant Bernice, and she started on a hugging and kissing pilgrimage. She made for the jury box. She grabbed the first man in line. He was so tiny and she was still so buxom. She swung on to him, she flung her arms about his neck; she planted a kiss on his cheek. He nearly lost his balance, he teetered, he braced himself against her. And he blushed a deep red.

Number two, number three, number four, and on until seven jurors had been kissed. I saw a tall thin man, near the back, dodge toward the door as he murmured to his companion, "I'm gonna get out of this."

Four others followed suit. Bernice, calmer now, gave out her official pæan of thanks.

"I prayed to God, and He answered my prayer. Now I have got justice and I am going to leave Chicago for a while and try to forget. I may go to New York, perhaps to Europe."

All ladies acquitted of murder predict they are going to go to Europe to try to forget. I have never yet heard of one who really got much farther than Indiana.

No, Bernice didn't go to Europe.

BUT IN NEW CLOTHES OF GAY COLORS, at her second trial, Bernice had her name enrolled on Cook county's growing list of women acquitted of murder. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

She got married. Not to Leo, the baker. But to Joseph Patunis of Chicago, and they are living happily. [Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE FARMER'S CHAMPION.

Gray Silver of the American Farm Bureau federation complained bitterly at a luncheon on the George Washington of the high prices the farmer pays and the low prices he receives.

"Why the deuce," he said, "are you always everlastingly laying bare the farmer's wrongs?"

Mr. Silver rapped the table with his fist.

"Because," he thundered, "I want them redressed."—Detroit Free Press.

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL — by WESTBROOK PEGLER

On Peacemakers, and the Trouble They Stir Up.

A GREAT deal of talk about peace has been going around lately, and it is my opinion that the authorities ought to regulate this kind of thing, because I have noticed that whenever you try to stir up peace between a couple of old established enemies you are likely to cause trouble.

I mean that if I have positive information that a gentleman is a dirty bum and no gentleman, I do not want anybody to show me that I am mistaken, because that would make me out a sucker, and anyway, I know better. Moreover, I once had an experience with peacemakers that came near costing me a large sum of dough and convinced me that, as a general proposition, peace is bad for business in my business.

"With that the boys began calling each other names."

A HANDKERCHIEF FIGHTER

At the time that I am speaking about I had a heavyweight chump by the name of Curley Herr, who was what we call a handkerchief fighter. By that I do not mean to imply that he actually carried a handkerchief, because he was in no way effeminate or refined, and in justice to him I will state that he was called a handkerchief fighter merely because he was a bum and could have wrapped up all his baggage in a handkerchief, if any.

There was another chump in the town by the name of Young Reeling, and, after some time, the gentleman who promoted the bouts in this town suggested that we should toss the two of them into the ring and decide which was the worst, although that was a very fine point and something like trying to decide whether the deuce of clubs is worse than the deuce of spades.

However, we made the match, and in collaboration with the gentleman who managed Young Reeling, I began sending statements to the newspapers in which both chumps said very insulting things about each other, all of which were substantially correct in my opinion, but intended only in a spirit of fair, manly sport, nevertheless. Of course, we did not tell our chumps that we were sending these articles to the press, and they became very angry at each other, and the customers were looking forward to a grudge fight and we were greatly pleased, because this was good for business.

FORGERY!

But in this town there were some people in the reform business who followed the peace business as a side line, and when they began to read about this grudge fight they thought it would be a fine thing to make friends of my bum and the other bum. You cannot imagine the dishonest and unsportsmanlike methods that these people will descend to when they decide that they have got to cause peace, and you will be surprised to learn that they actually forged the signatures of Curley Herr and Young Reeling to accomplish their purpose. So on the day before the fight my fellow received a letter stating:

"Old Pal Curley: What is the sense of you and I being enemies. Leave us talk it over in a friendly way. Be my guest for dinner at eight o'clock tonight at the Owl lunch.

"Your Pal,
"YOUNG REELING."

And Young Reeling received a letter stating the same thing, and signed with my guy's name.

AT THE OWL LUNCH

I assure you that none of us other gentlemen knew anything tbout this underhanded attempt to corrupt two sincere athletes, or we would have stopped it, because if it had gotten into the papers it would have cast a bomb shell on to the escutcheon of clean sport in that town.

But these peace people sent an anonymous tip to the sporting editors, and they were all concealed in the ice box of the Owl lunch when my guy walked in and shook hands with Young Reeling. The waiter handed the boys the menu and my bum, figuring that he was a guest, just handed it back and said, "I'll take a double order of that." And Young Reeling, figuring that Curley Herr was going to take the fall, as the phrase goes, also handed back the menu and said, "I will take the same and a cup of coffee."

I do not know how long these boys were guilty of peaceful relations, but nothing of an unpleasant nature occurred until the waiter came back with the check, which was for $12, and my bum pointed to the other bum and said, "Give it to him as I am his guest."

"What do mean you are my guest?" Young Reeling replied, "Because I have got no dough, as I am your guest."

"I have got a letter here which says I am your guest," Curley Herr said, and Young Reeling also took out a letter and said, "Why, you cheap bum, I have got a letter which says I am your guest."

A NARROW ESCAPE

With that the boys began calling each other names, and Curley Herr was sitting on the floor under the table with this other boy's head between his knees, pounding him on the nose, or potato, with a five pound sugar bowl when Mr. Swanson, the proprietor of the joint, came out from behind the counter and threw both of the noble gladiators out of the Owl lunch.

Well, that was a very narrow escape for us, because the sporting editors had to tell their readers that they had seen Curley Herr and Young Reeling in a brawl, and consequently the fight was a sell out. But when I think of the deceitful methods of those people who go around trying to stir up peace all the time, I am convinced that this peace talk is dangerous propaganda and a constant menace to business.

"That was terrible hamburg I bought here yesterday," she said.

"Is that so?" I'm sorry to hear that. Here is some we made today. Try it. I'm sure you'll find it very good."

"No, indeed," she said. "You don't fool me again; just give me two pounds of ham and I'll make my own hamburg."—Forbes Magazine.

By Snowshoe Al

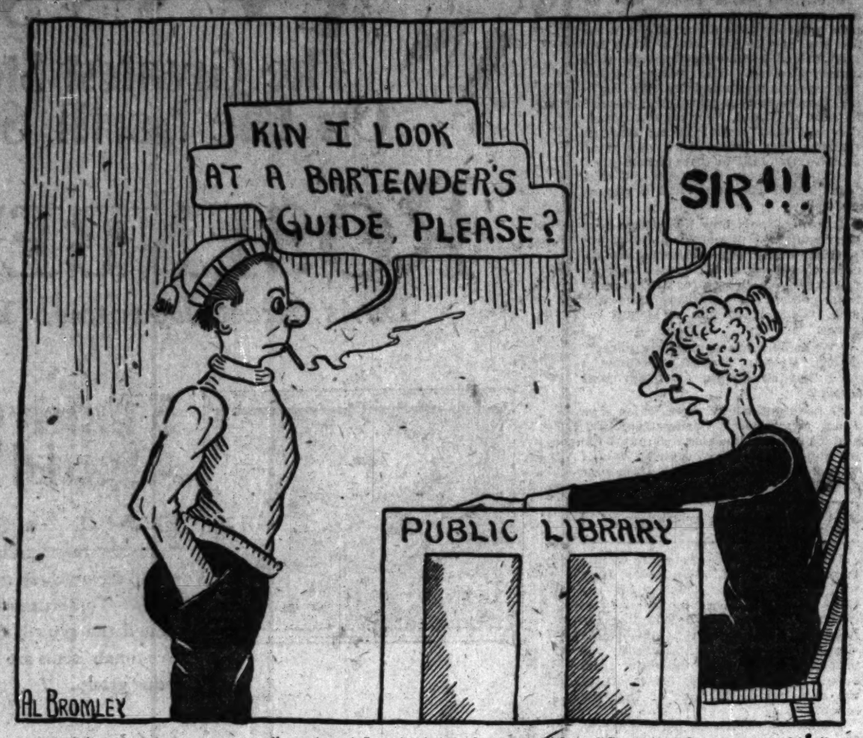
Wastes an Afternoon in the Public Library Out?

YESTERDAY I walked into the public library an' inHluired kood I please look at tender's guide. The elderly behind the desk elevates both eyebrows an' informs me that such low literature is not carried in stock.

"Well," sez I, "have yew any book wich will tell me the exact amount uv horse power wich a raisin contains?"

"Not that I am aware uv," sez old Nokomis, with a withering glance.

"Sum bimbo ought to write such a book," sez I, "because wen one raisin meets more raisins in the same batch, the result seems to be more er less uv a gamble. Sumtimes they act sociable but not as often they pull the answer 'Wen Greek Meets Greek.' Up, sum hombre shood tell the answer to that important query, 'How Many Raisins Constitute A Shot?'"



HE GETS A RISE

"I am afraid we have no books to help you assist yew," sez Father Time's mother-in-law

"Well," sez I, "even yer own personal opinion wood be appreciated. In uther words, as one home brew hound to another, how many raisins wood yew put——"

"SIR!!!!" howls the female antique, rising to her feet like a whale kumming to the surface.

"O, alrite, alrite," sez I; "fer be it frum me to ask anybody to break loose frum their own recipe gratis. I'll buy the information off yuh. Write it down on a hunk uv paper so I can't forget it."

The Human Antique registers Despair an' flops back into her seat with a racket resembling the fall uv Rome. At this moment in breezes Murphy the cop, wich seems to relieve her, because she straightens up again with a triumphant smirk.

"Officer," sez the Flapper uv 1812, "this impertinent creature had the audacity to kum into this highly respectable institution an' inquire about raisins, liquor recipes, home brew, an' uther such vulgar subjects wich are disagreeable to a respectable lady like myself. I wish yew wood take care uv him!"

"I can't take care uv him," sez Murphy, lookin' kinda helpless; "I'd like to help him, alrite, but the truth is, I aint so good myself at making that stuff. My last batch turned out terrible——"

"No, no, no!" squawks the Dignified Relic, "yew don't seem to understand! This person wuz very insulting! He asked me to give him my own personal recipe for the vile stuff! I wuz never so astounded in——"

"I didn't ask her to give it—I offered to buy it!" sez I.

"Yes, that's it," howls her; "he offered to buy my own personal recipe for——"

"Oho!" snorts Murphy; "now I git the idea! So now he refuses to pay, huh? Why, the crook!" He turned to me. "Lissen," sez he, "give the lady wot yew promised to pay her for the information she passed out!"

The squaw behind the desk turned blue in the face an' almost swallowed her false teeth. Then she separated herself frum a boatload uv adjectives wich, in her opinion, described a few uv the defects uv the police force, after wich she announced in great indignation that she hadn't told me nothing at all.

"Well, then, wot's all the howling fof?" sez Murphy, gitting real peeved. "If yew aint told him nothing, he don't owe yew nothing!"

OFF GOES CHAPEAU

This starts a verbal thunderstorm, so I walks over an' sits down at a table in the reading room. Wen Mrs. Methuselah had finished telling Murphy wot she thought of him in 25,000 words, he retaliated by passing out his un-biased opinion uv her in 4 languages, after wich he left the Castle Uv Knowledge an' wandered down the street still wondering wot the argument wuz all about. Old Rain-In-The-Face snapped her false teeth together an' looked in my direction for sumthing to wail about.

"It is customary," she snorts, "to remove yer hat in this place."

"Fair enough," sez I, crawling out frum under my chapeau, "'Wen in Rome, do as the dagoes do.'"

I picked up a book wot gives the population uv every city in the United States an' Tennessee. This book wuz by a very instructive nature, in fact, all a person had to do wuz use this particular volume as an authority, an' he wood be given his choice uv the Poor House or a Nut College. According to it, Chicago has a population uv 835,212. The page wich contained the copyright date wuz missing, so I trots up to the desk.

"Wen wuz this book published?" I asks.

"I don't know," sez she; "the date is missing. I suppose sum malicious person has stolen that particular page."

"Probably an autograph collector," sez I; "I have an idea that he took it because it read: 'This book belongs to Geo. Washington.'"

INTERESTING BOOKS

Just then a hombre kums into the joint an' inquires if they have any law books.

"Yes," sez the girl friend, "we have an Illinois Statute; I think the date is 1885."

"How nise!" squawks the new customer; "yew otta take it out to the cemetary an' cremate it. It wood be a great help to me, I'm sure, because the only law in that volume wich is still in existence is: 'Thou Shall Not Marry More Than One Woman At A Time.'"

In the meantime I found a copy uv Uncle Tom's Cabin under "Recent Fiction." This got quite a snicker out uv me, so Madam X invited me to freeze my face.

"If yew kin git such a loud grin out uv such a sad, touching story as Uncle Tom's Cabin, I fear this place will ring with riotous laughter if yew ever set eyes on that side-splitting volume uv humor, 'The Fort Dearborn Massacre,' sez she.

"I still wish yew had a bartender's guide," sez I, "because I'm worried——"

"Isn't there any other book yew wood be willing to look at?" sez she; "sumthing uv an intellectual nature?"

"Well, there is another book I woodn't mind glancing at," sez I; "it's called 'The Life An' Death Uv Tracy, The Outlaw, With Actual Photographs Taken In The Morgue.' Drag it out an' I'll see if the pictures interest me."

Mrs. Methuselah threw her hands in the direction uv the comets, an' broke loose with a gasp uv horror, so I figured that maybe this particular work aint regarded as a classic.

"Have yew any travel books?" sez I.

"Well," sez she, "I wood be tempted to give yew any book in this library if yew wood only take yer hat an' travel! I can't git over the idea uv yew kumming into this place an' asking a perfectly respectable lady questions about liquor, bartender's guides, an' the like. I otta have yew arrested, in fact I wood have had yew arrested if that police officer had as much intelligence as an ordinary angle-worm!"

IT WUZ RAINING

"Yew needn't shed any grief-water about it," sez I, gittin' peeved; "I only came in here in the first place because it wuz raining. It will be raining a helluva lot harder before I kum in again. Adios, so long, good bye, an' farewell, to say nothing uv auf wiedersehen, au revoir, bon voyage, an' Departure plus Exit. I'll see yew again wen dinosaurs run wild on Main street!" An' so saying good afternoon, I started to leave, but wuz interrupted by the reappearance uv Murphy the cop.

"Lady," sez Murphy to the female calamity, "I've bin talking it over with the Chief, an' we have agreed that yew haven't got any case against this fellow. In the first place, yew didn't have any right to tell him anything about home brew recipes, because that aint connected with yer work here! In the second place, yew aint got no witnesses to prove that yew gave him this information, an' in the third place, I don't see how yew kin collect the money he offered to pay yew, because he says——"

OOOF! OOOF!

Mrs. Methuselah reached under her desk an' came up with a handful uv books. She put one right over the plate, an' Murphy howls "Ooof!" The next throw wuz high an' a trifle wide, followed by 2 more wich any umpire on earth wood have called Strikes, because I got both uv them in the stummick.

Then I got dam good an' sore, because I noticed that both the books wich had slapped me on the bread-pan were labeled: BARTENDER'S GUIDE.

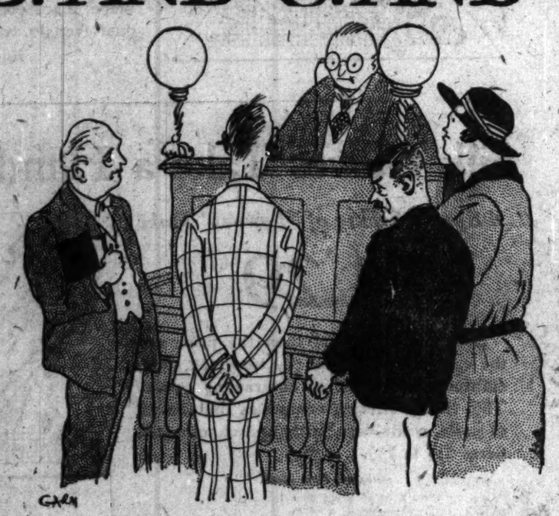
THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

A Kid's Fight Seems Headed for Tha Soopreme Court.

ABOUT 4 o'clock lass Tuesday I get a phone call at tha office from the B. and C. From tha way she talks I could tell she was all excited an after a minute I didn' know whether our youngster had swallowed a safety pin or tha parlor rug. What she wants to know is could I come right home on account she's had a helova row with the janitor. I told her that tha boss was either shootin rotten golf or his wife must of spent more than he expected on tha new Easter outfit and that if I asked him to get off earlier he might tell me to make permanent. Ennyway I said fer her to light the gas oven and I would speak to the czar when I got home.



There's talk of putting me in tha cellar.

'NOTHER FIGHT

Then I get informed it aint tha beat this time but that our youngster and his was playing in tha yard and his kid socks ours over tha eye with a stick and that she saw tha whole thing from our back porch. Incidentally she quite fergot to mention tha fact that our angel child started tha compuss by rocking his kid to sleep with a good sized rock which landed somewhere between his adams apple. To hear tha B. and C.'s side of tha case, our Precious was showing the rock to the lad and for some reezon or other it slipped outen her hand.

Ennyway when I get home, tha story is gone over again and from the size of our offspring's eye, tha implement used could have been nothin less than a garbage can or maybe a cupple dozen bed slats. I immediately beat it downstairs to find out what tha hell was tha big idea and instead of being treated like a gentleman, this bohunk drags out his chef an shows me tha damage what was done. Outside of a cupple broken teeth and a bloody nose tha child was in perfect condition.

My idea was to make a suggestion to the way of not lettin tha kids play together again, even apologize and maybe split a bottle of brew with him, thereby creating a peace treaty. Instead of all this, he's got fire in his eye an he calls me a dirty name in Swedish an shoves me off his stoop. Well, after sizing up his 5 feet 2 and about 102 pounds I decide that it takes two to make a battle an I busted him on the chin. He went down like a ton of bricks and for fear he might come back to life suddenly and reciprocate I beat it up tha steps.

COMFORT

I musta got up to tha 4th or 5th step when I get a clout in tha middle of my back with what I thought was either a ice box or a set of dining room furniture. What happened was, his ole lady, who weighs about 240 and has got a arm like a side of beef, was watchin tha fracas, and after I got in with my haymaker she's all set to go, with tha business end of a vacuum cleaner.

I'm too much of a gentleman to ever lay my hands on a woman. If I ever do forget myself, I'm certainly not gonna tackle one with her dimensions. When I got back up to our flat I was in such splendid shape that when I tried to eat, tha back of my neck was holding a contest to see whether it could produce more pain than my ankles. The B. and C. witnessed tha entire proceedings from are porch and puts her arm around me an says as how manly I was and that she certainly was proud of me. A bottle of linament wood of done me a damn site more good.

DUNT ANSWER

Ennyway I had to give up tha idea of eatin and after rubbing a ½ pint of alcohol on tha outside and about a pint on tha inside, I went to bed. After tossing fer about three hours and finally dozing off, tha damn door bell started to ring. Tha first thought what struck my mind was that tha Efficiency Engineer of the Furnace Department had dug up a few of his cousins and was preparing to start a New Customer Campaign for our local undertaker.

Well, we didn' answer tha bell and pretty soon two handsome Norwegians by the name of Clancy and Faherty start pounding gently on tha back door with either a telegraph pole or a railroad tie. We got a glass top on tha door and after lighting tha kitchin light, I see one of these dicks has got a notice in his hand. He put it against tha glass, and on top in very beautiful Gothic type it says, "Warrant," further down there was somethin about "Deliver the Body," "Salt an Battery," "Party of tha 1st part," and a lotta other damn fool stuff. Of course, I wasn't expecting that they was bringing a invitation to be present at tha King's Court instead of a police court, but they certainly might of waited until morning.

When I opened tha door I figgered maybe by buying these dicks a couple of shots and handing them a little bull they would shove matters off till tha next day. To my great surprise they was very polite as they answered me back by sayin, "Getchyure hat'n coat." I certainly didn' expect that kind of treatment cause they was such perfect gentlemen. They removed their hats everytime their heads itched.

Can ya imagine me with a couple hundred fractured ribs, two or three headaches, and tha B. and C. crying? Guess she figgerred she'd hafta go back to work until my 20 years was up. Ennyway when we get to tha station there's talk of putting me in tha cellar, generally when anybody invites me into their cellars I can make it in nothing flat, but I wasn't so damn anxious this time even if tha desk sargeant did call it a jug.

CHARLIE GOODMAN, ESQ.

About this time I figger I got home rights as a citizen an I inquired as how could a guy out an I'm tole I wood hafta get a bondsman. Well, I bought some bonds once in a Building and Loan Ass'n, but fer the life of me I couldn' remember tha guy's name what I bought 'em from. Just then some bozo steps up and slips me his card which reads "Professional Bondsman." He informs me that fer 20 bucks he will go my bond, I couldn' figger out as to why I should give this bird twenty, cause tha case wasn't so serious, and maybe I could get a amateur bondsman for ten. It seems there aint no amateurs in anything ennymore since Red Grange and the rest have joined up so I tole the bird to fix it up and I wood get a hold of 20 iron men for him by the next morning, as they was gonna try tha case then, and I was tole to be there at 10 sharp.

I got to work extra early and xplained tha matter to the boss and he called up a lawyer friend by tha name of Charlie Goodman Esq. Right off tha bat I figgerred any guy by the name of Esq. couldn' be much good, on tha way over to the court he says we not only got a cinch case but that we will turn around and sue the plaintiff for fifty thousand bucks. If any janitor can save that much kale I will make application to their union an take a course in tha proffession.

I was tole to be at tha court at 10 sharp and as they are very punktual, the case was called at half past 12. Tha High Priest of tha Royal Garbage Can brought in 10 witnesses and as sure as I'm a foot high nobody saw tha fracas exceptin his ole lady. Also he had what was called character wit-nesses. If any one of them had any character, I'm a damn poor judge of people. All of a sudden his honor hollers out, "Bakrak Vs Jorgenson" an we all walked up. After Jorgie explained as how I had a revolver in one hand and a knife in the other an showed tha judge all his witnesses, his wife tells the judge that her husband was so excited that he only thought it was a revolver. She claimed it was a shot gun.

25 AND COSTS

Our turn came next and when the judge sees my lawyer deposit 7 or 8 books on the railing he assumes what looked to me like a dirty look. After quoting cases what happened as far back as 600 B. C. to tha present day, the judge admitted he certainly was a smart lawyer and that the verdict was 25 dollars and costs.

I guess from the way the case was handled I shood be lucky I didn' get life. Well, we paid the $41.60, but they aint heard the last of it, even if I hafta take the case to tha soopreme court. If they don't reverse tha verdict, there's gonna be a vacant flat in our building and my future address is gonna be some street in Russia.

SAM 'N' HENRY --- By Correll and Gosden

It Seems to Be A Horse on The Two Boys

[The boys are in Pete's office preparing to sign the papers for the horse they have just purchased from him.]

Sam—What is we gotta sign, Pete, dat's whut I wanna know?

Pete—Yo' boys have a seat yeah an' I'll go out an' see if I can't dig up some refreshments. I'll be back in a minute.

Sam—Take yo' time, Pete, take yo' time. We'll wait heah.

Sam—Whut is I done done now, Henry?

Henry—In de firs' place, I tol' yo' dat dat broken down nag dat he got out in de yard dere is li'ble to die any minute from old age.

Sam—Well, whut is I gotta do wid it? I can't help it if he dies, kin I?

Henry—De mo' I talk to you, de dumber yo' gits. I tol' yo' dat hoss wasn't worth fifty dollahs, an' when Pete started bluffin' us by tellin' us he had a offer of a hund'ed dollahs, yo' had to holler up an' ast him if he'd sell us de hoss fo' a hund'ed.

REFRESHMENTS

Sam—I didn't want nobody else to git de hoss, Henry, 'cause I don' know where I kin git anotheh hoss.

Henry—After yo' said dat, yo' heard whut Pete said. He said, "Sold," so quick dat he like to knocked us both down.

Sam—Well, anyway we got a hoss, Henry.

Henry—We payin' enough to git a flock of 'em like dat one.

Sam—Wait a minute. Heah come Pete back heah now. Don' say no mo'.

Pete—Well, boys, I got a little bottle heah of impo'ted stuff. I sort o' anti-ticipated yo' boys comin' oveh tonight.

Sam—We don' want yo' to anticipate nothin' though, Pete. Ain't no use to do dat but we WILL have a little drink heah on yo'.

Henry—Well, I kind-a feel poorly tonight.

Pete—Boys, heah yo' is. Go ahead, help yo'self.

Sam [losing no time in refreshing himself]—Well, heah I go.

Henry [taking bottle from Sam]—Wait a minute heah. Leave some in dere.

Sam—Um-um—ain't dat sompin'. Dat's pretty good, Pete.

Pete—Go ahead, Henry.

A SECOND BOTTLE

Henry—Well, heah's lookin' at yo' boys.

Sam—Good stuff, ain't it, Henry?

[Pete opens a closet door in his office and brings out another bottle for his own use.]

Henry—Whut is yo' fixin' to do, Pete?

Pete—I got anotheh bottle o' stuff heah in de closet. Yo' boys go ahead an' drink de bottle I brought yo'—I'll drink dis.

Henry [suspiciously]—O—O.

Sam [frightened]—Awa—Awa—Ain't nothin' de matteh wid dis stuff, is it, Pete?

Pete—Oh, no. But I been drinkin' de same stuff heah fo' years an' years an' I ain't neveh been sick from it.

Henry—Check me out from now on.

Sam—Well, let's git to talkin' heah 'bout de hoss.

Pete—Now, boys, I done done yo' a favor an' sold yo' de hoss fo' a hun'ed dollahs. Now heah is de papers fo' yo' boys to sign.

Sam—Whut is we gotta sign sompin' fo', Pete?

READING THE PAPERS

Pete—Wheveh yo' sell a hoss yo' gotta sign sompin'. Dat's a rule among hosses. Henry knows dat 'cause Henry's got a lot o' brains, ain't yo', Henry?

Henry [flattered]—O, yeh; Pete's right, Sam.

Sam—Whut do de papers say, Pete?

Pete—Well, I anti-ticipated sellin' dis heah hoss today so I had a friend o' mine to draw up de papers—an' heah dey is.

Sam [as he takes papers from Pete]—Mus' I read 'em, Henry?

Henry—Go ahead, read it out loud.

Pete—Don' yo' boys want anotheh little swig o' dis stuff heah?

Henry—No mo' swigs till we git dis heah hoss thing set.

Sam—Well, heah I go; I goin' read dis thing now, Henry.

Henry—Go ahead; lemme heah it.

Sam—Heah I go——[Reads]. Dis—argument——

Pete—Dat word's "agreement"—"agreement."

Sam—Dat's right. [Reads again.] Dis—agreement—entered into—dis day of—a—nothin' heah—by an' between—Pete Willis—de party o' de firs' part——

Henry—Wait a minute heah. Where is de party goin' be? I don' wanna go to no mo' parties.

Sam—I don't know, Henry. 'Splain dat to us, Pete.

Pete [taking papers from Sam]—Betteh lemme read dat, Sam. I'll git it oveh to yo' quicker. Dat means dat I is de party o' de firs' part an' Sam Smith an' Henry Johnson is de party o' de secon' part. Dey jus 'put dat in to keep from mixin' us up.

Sam—O, yeh, I see. Go ahead, read some mo'.

DE HOSS' AGE

Pete—Whereas, both parties agree to de followin'. De party o' de firs' part agrees to sell de party o' de secon' part a certain hoss—an' de party o' de secon' part agrees to buy from party o' de firs' part, a certain hoss—de price to be twenty-five— [Catching himself.] Wait a minute heah; de man done made a mistake—dat should be a hund'ed. I'll change dat right now. Lemme git de pen an' ink heah.

Sam—Dat mus' be de hoss's age, ain't it, Pete?

Pete—Yo' understan', don' yo', Henry?

Henry—Oh, yeh—sho'—go ahead, I'm listenin'. [Doubtful.] Yo' sho', though, Pete, dat dat twenty-five dollahs don' b'long in dere, is yo'?

Sam—Read on dere, Pete.

Pete—Now den, it say, heah dat—after dis agreement is signed, de said hoss is in de possession o' de parties o' de secon' part an' regardless o' whut happens to de said hoss, de party o' de firs' part is no longer responsible—or even when de party o' de secon' part go to get said animal an' find him in bad condition, includin' death, he shall still be in de possession o' de party o' de secon' part, an' de party o' de firs' part is immune, exempt an' ev'vything else from bein' li'ble.

Pete—Now listen heah, boys; jus' calm down now. I had de lawyer to put dat in fo' yo' own protection. Yo' might not understan' it, Sam, but Henry do, don' you', Henry?

SENTENCE SERMONS

BY THE REV. ROY L. SMITH.

Another Good Way——To reform modern youth is for parents to set them a good example.

—To get a better congress is for all of us to vote a little more carefully.

—To improve the sermon is to improve the audience.

—To build a town is to build the boyhood and girlhood first.

—To censor the movies is to stay away from the bad ones.

—To get honest policemen is to refuse to ask for special favors from them.

—To suppress crime is to obey the laws we find inconvenient.

She Takes the Prize.

A neighbor was in the other day. She is a young married woman, and we were talking of colors. She is rather dark and nice looking.

I said "I imagine you look well in pink."

She replied, "Yes, I do, and I also look well in red, green, yellow, blue—in fact, all colors are very becoming to me."

I looked at her to see if she was joking—not a bit. She added, "And there is scarcely any style of dress or hats that I can't wear."

Talk about conceit—she takes first prize! W. B.

My girl friend and I were speaking of science before going to class.

"I know he will call on me," my girl friend said. The rain was coming down in torrents and I did not answer. But after class I asked her how she knew he would call on her.

"Oh, I knew he would look for the bright pupils on such a dark day."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Separate Frock for Spring Carries the Truly Feminine Touches of Ruffles, Lace and Fine Tucks, and Calls for a Big Hat Trimmed with a Flower or a Plume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashion makers seem to have some sort of advance information as to weather conditions for the coming summer, because they are advancing the coatless dress. It is often of sheer material and calculated only for a period of usefulness when the sun is tempering the wind so that it will be comfortable in its shorn state.

During the absolute monarchy of the ensemble, even for the hottest weather, the frock alone lost much of its decorative aspect. Particularly as coats have been chiefly straight and narrow, so that bows, flares, and other departures from the pencil line made ugly bumps in the contours of the coat. However, this season, when dresses are to be smart without any sort of wrap, they are reappearing in their decorative form. This means complication of lines and details, as well as the familiar complication of cut that has been a distinguishing feature of smart clothes for some time. The whole aspect of the woman, indeed, changes when these single frocks are worn. Big hats, trimmed with both flowers and plumes—one at a time, of course—are worn, handbags are more elaborate, and, in fact, all details are more decidedly feminine. This kind of chic is not exactly the fluffy ruffle type, but it is as dainty as the romantic garb of the civil war period.

The practicability of this kind of wrapless ensemble will depend, naturally, largely upon weather conditions, but all we can do is to hope, for the best Parisiennes are hoping, and they have sufficient faith to make this mode a success already in France, which is often a semi-frigid zone all summer long. Perhaps it is because they so love being all that is feminine in dress as well as in nature. There certainly is an allure about the dainty and vaporous frock worn with a big hat which man finds irresistable, and no Parisienne is superior to exercising it.

The all lace frock for daytime comes back in force with the return of the single dress to fashion, and laces in every hue are worn. However, the smartest colors for the daytime frock are beige and the new ibis, which is a sort of soft peach shade. These frocks do not, generally, employ any large quantity of material. They are rather straight in line, but are not less feminine because of this.

The skirt tunic is flared markedly at the hipline, presenting a variation of the silhouette that is agreeable and novel. There is a triple narrow girdle of beige crêpe, meeting at the sides and separated by intervening spaces in front. A row of beige crêpe buttons trim the front of the frock from the round neck line to the hip line. Not the least of the charm of this model lies in the oversize scarlet flower that is placed at the left side of the girdle. With this frock is worn a large hat of picot trimmed with scarlet flowers.

Our second model shows a combination of materials that is perfect for the dressy single frock, and that is taffeta and organdie. Boué Soeurs, who created this model, have combined two tones of blue—navy blue taffeta that forms the sleeveless over dress and pastel blue organdie that is used for the under frock. Blue is without doubt the favorite color this spring, and blue in two or more tones in one ensemble is a poplar color combination. The over dress of this model has a bloused waist, without sleeves or collar, and open in an inverted V at the center front to show the foundation.

The foundation frock has a long straight blouse cut in a basque-like V at the hip line and edged with a plaited ruffle. The buttons are of dark blue taffeta. The skirt is plaited. Sleeves are flared from the armholes and the lower part being plaited. Their flare is also increased by a narrow plaited ruffle. The round collar of the under dress lies over the blue taffeta. This kind of double dress is most practical, for it may be worn with or without the over dress of taffeta, thus being suitable for moderate and very hot days.

Our third sketch shows a different kind of solitary frock, and one that presents a striking color combination, being made of three shades of fuchsia, ranging from the violet purple to the purple red. The dress proper is of violet crêpe de chine, and the wide bands and godets at the sides of the skirt are made of the violet red that is generally called fuchsia in two tones. The application of these shades is cleverly achieved in the blouse by overlaying the bands at the sides with a triangle that is slightly deeper in color. This is done by wide and narrow bands on the unusual flared sleeves.

The deep collar and gilet are of violet crêpe. Doucet achieves a charming flare to the skirt by means of alternating godets and panels in the three shades. The narrow violet belt has a fantaisie buckle of black enamel inlaid with red and violet.

The fourth sketch shows an afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier. This model is made of a deep maize yellow crêpe satin, and it is trimmed with bands showing the reverse, crêpe, side of the material. The motif of the diagonal is used to give a graceful line, the diagonal closing to the blouse, and the diagonal tiers in the skirt meeting at the left side, where the two tiers form a drooping drapery. Tiers and closing are edged with crêpe bands. A large buckle of Indian red stones is placed at the waist line. The tight sleeves are banded above the wrist with the crêpe side of the satin. With this frock is worn a close fitting hat trimmed with two pompoms of ostrich, also a creation of Marthe Regnier.

The lace dress, beige in color and trimmed with bands of black net, has a novel tunic and a single flower of scarlet silk. It is shown at the extreme left.

Crepe de chine in three tones of fuchsia makes this Doucet frock, with its flaring skirt, that is made buoffant by godets in the three shades. Third from the left.

Last, maize-yellow crepe satin, trimmed with reverse bands, forms this smart afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier.

HOW TO HAVE A LOVELY SKIN

by Antoinette Donnelly

Soap and Water and a Soft Brush Are the Greatest as Well as the Simplest Aids to a Beautiful Complexion.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Of all the ills that flesh is heir to or acquires by unhygienic living, I do not believe there is a single item which causes more actual unhappiness and mental torture than a blemished complexion. Almost any one can laugh and be fat; be fearfully skinny and laugh with her tormentors; lose a few handfuls of hairs and be terrified, yet still be able to extract a smile over the remaining ones. But for a young person whose skin is marred with acne, blackheads, or pimples there is nothing but abject misery.

Time after time girls, and boys, too, write me they are ashamed to go out because of their poor complexions. A pity when, with the exception of a few rare cases, it is something that may be remedied, and in a comparatively short time. In fact, ninety-nine cases out of a hundred may be prevented by the simplest precautions—for the most part the free and generous application of nothing more complicated than soap and water and, as grandma used to say, "elbow grease."

There are some fortunate persons with that quality of skin so fine grained that blackhead trouble, and consequently pimple and acne conditions, escape them entirely. Few, however, may lay claim to a spotless reputation as far as blackheads are concerned. At one time or another they have had to face the disfiguring comedoes and apply a few extra measures to make good their departure.

Treating Skin Troubles.

In treating all three of the most frequent complexion ills you may boil your energy down to an attack upon those blackheads already imbedded and on their prevention. Pimples and acne are really nothing more nor less than an inflammation of the sebaceous glands and hair follicles, the tiny comedo being the root of the evil of inflammation.

If the skin is kept free from blackheads, which usually begin to make their appearance on the face at the self-conscious age, the humiliation and mental distress would be reduced to almost nothing.

Blackheads are masses of fat and debris of the skin which have solidified in the glands. These masses act as foreign bodies, irritate the skin, and become infected and then inflamed.

Most frequently the face is chiefly affected. Again, the face, neck, shoulders, and chest are troubled. If treatment is not given early there is great danger of scars from prolonged inflammation. At any rate, enlarged pores will result, which give the same pitted effect to the face.

The prevalence of acne during adolescence is due to the fact that at that time the fat glands, like the hair follicles, take on a new activity. The secretion of fat is greatly increased, and it requires only a slight disturbance of the function to cause the accumulation of fat in the glands and the formation of blackheads.

Persons with coarse pores and large, fat glands have the worst cases of acne. Conditions of the general health influence the development of this trouble. Not infrequently it is found association with cold hands and feet, and not uncommonly with dyspepsia and constipation, or other irregularities which lower the vigor and impair the resistance.

Why the Face Suffers.

The face is most troubled because it is the most exposed part of the body and because sweat glands are abundant there and are easily soiled with dust and grime, which add to the disfigurement.

With normally healthy people, then, it is a matter of local care exclusively. If the circulation is good, the digestion good, and elimination regular, you may pin your faith on the flesh brush, soap, and water.

The vigor with which you scrub is determined by the condition of the skin. A thin and dry skin will perhaps be less affected, but will require care to prevent an unduly dry or chapped condition. In severe blackhead trouble, however, if the skin is greasy and thick, there is little danger of scrubbing too vigorously.

Mild cases of blackheads are frequently cured by bathing the face with soap and warm water, using a complexion brush and scrubbing thoroughly the affected parts. Rinse in warm and then in cold water. In more exaggerated cases, steaming the face is advised. First, cleanse with a cold cream. Applying the cold cream first often helps to soften the hardened substance, so that they are more easily removed. Have two towels ready for steaming. Apply them alternately after wringing out in hot water. Then remove as many blackheads as you can remove easily with a comedo extractor or with the fingers. If with the latter, use on the fingers a clean piece of linen, and also extract the blackheads with as gentle pressure as possible. Do not try to force out the tiny masses that will not come with moderate pressure. Wipe with a solution of hydrogen peroxide or alcohol. When this has been done apply cold water freely to the face and finish off with an ice rub.

Avoid Creams and Oils.

Severe cases of pimples and acne are known to be caused primarily by an increased activity of the fat glands. Therefore, the use of creams and oils on the face for cleansing and other purposes should be avoided in acne cases.

Obstinate cases of acne require the skill of an experienced physician. X-ray is the specific treatment which cures the vast majority of them. You are particularly urged to trust the work only to one with skill and experience, however.

In home treatment, which is sufficient for milder cases, the washing of the skin is the most helpful thing. One vigorous scrubbing a day with soap and water must be given, followed by a sponging-off with alcohol to cleanse it further. The washing not only gets rid of extraneous dirt but it tends to prevent further infection and reduces the excessive fat to the minimum.

After the face is washed the pimples that show they have come to a head by a distinct yellow point should be opened with a needle. Before they are opened the surface should be wiped with alcohol; also after the pus is extracted. The needle should be sterilized for each attack by dipping in alcohol, tincture of iodine, or peroxide of hydrogen.

Be careful not to overdo any of these operations. Remove only the blackheads and treat only the pimples that are ripe for removal and treatment. Massage is advised against in severe acne cases because of the danger of spreading the infection.

Answers to Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Queries.

EAGER: Substituting stuffed dates and salted nuts for candy will avail you nothing in your desire to reduce. You want to eliminate and not substitute. The nuts and dates are fattening, just as the candy is. You need my booklet on reducing, which may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

ESSIE H.: Ingrown toenails are caused by ill fitting shoes. If your shoes are too narrow or too short the toenails come to run diagonally on the toes instead of parallel. The shoe pushes the front end of the nail around and causes the opposite corners to dig into the flesh. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the treatment of ingrown toenails.

E. M.: Your trouble is too much sleep and not sufficient exercise. Eight hours' sleep in a well ventilated room is sufficient for the average person. A walk of four miles a day, and exercises to be done on arising are what you need. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for them.

ETTA H.: Brushing the hair gives it the luster you desire. It keeps the scalp in a healthy condition. Brush for five minutes every morning and night with businesslike strokes, until there is a feeling of life in the scalp.

A. T. V.: Fruit juices, grape juice, apples, oranges, and lemon juice—stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten before going to bed, followed by brushing the teeth, will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night.

V. H.: The shooting pains in your legs are undoubtedly the result of wearing shoes with too high heels. For business wear they are not only harmful, but are not in good taste. Have yourself fitted to a pair of street shoes with heels about an inch and a half in height.

MRS. C. S.: Whiteheads are chalky deposits under the skin. They are an imprisoned blackhead. Apply hot towels to the face to soften the skin. Then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents with the needle. Wipe the spot with peroxide and gently massage with cold cream. For treatment of dry skin send a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARION H.: Equal parts of camphor and glycerin massaged into the hands several times a day will soften and whiten them. Stains may be removed from the hands by lemon juice. It is advisable to keep a lemon handy for this purpose. Better send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the "Care of the Hands." It has many helpful suggestions for you.

MRS. J. B. N.: A vegetable diet tends to keep the intestines active. This is particularly true of fresh green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, asparagus, beet tops, and celery. On such a diet you are not liable to grow stout. Eat sparingly of potatoes, as the starch in the potato is the hardest of all starches to digest.

E. B. G.: The hollows will remain in your cheeks until such time as you have the spaces caused by loss of teeth filled in by bridgework. Loss of teeth is responsible for much digestive trouble, the food not being properly masticated. And hollows give an expression of age, which no woman wishes to have.

MRS. M.: KEEPING THE TONGUE CLEAN PROTECTS the teeth, as the tongue collects tartar and bacteria, particularly near the root. Fruit acids are cleansing, as is also a weak solution of vinegar.

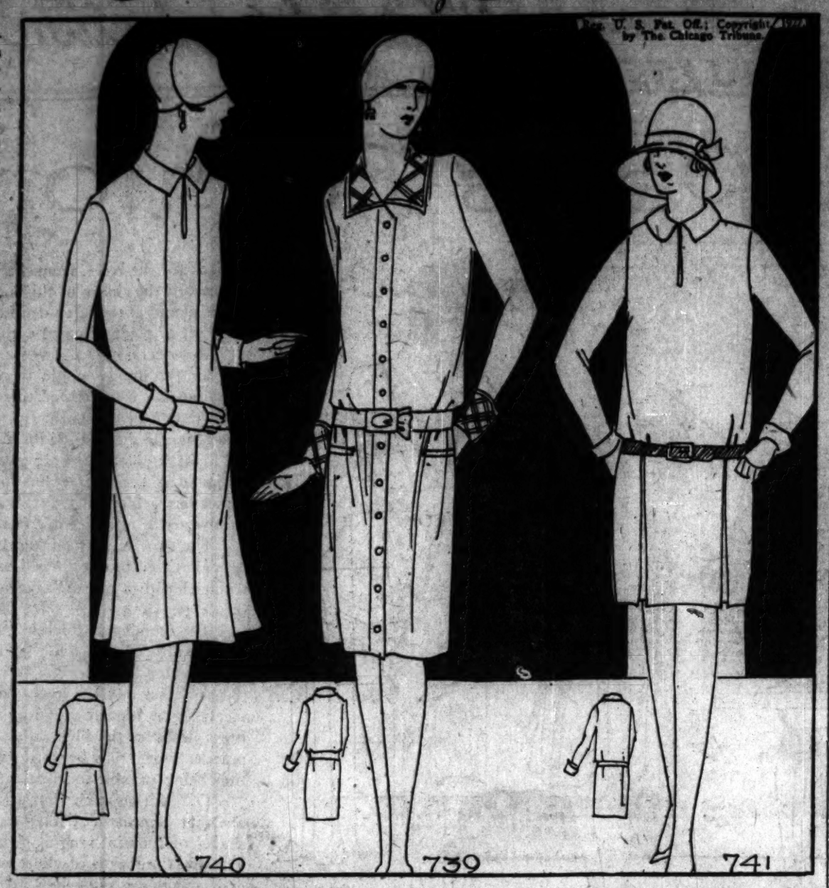
MRS. F. L.: OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THE CAUSE of eczema. In some cases there may be a slight tendency to inheritance, but it is not generally considered in the majority of cases. The treatment depends upon your general condition and the part of the body affected, and should be determined by a competent physician after making an examination.

JIM G.: SKIN GRAFTING IS NECESSARY TO REMOVE deep tattoo marks. Work of this kind is done by skin specialists.

DOROTHY M.: DEEP BREATHING EXERCISES IMprove the circulation, develop the bust and chest, and often will cure headaches. They start the blood flowing vigorously through your veins and for one with weak lungs there is nothing better than deep breathing.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde



FLAT crêpe in a crushed raspberry shade, with collar, cuffs and front panel in a deeper shade would make up charmingly by pattern No. 740. The dress isn't at all difficult to make, and the straight lines with the gracefully flaring sides will be universally becoming. Three shades instead of two could be used in making this dress, making the main part of the dress of one, the panel of a second, and the collar and cuffs of a third.

The circular skirt is seamed together at the sides, and French seams will be right to use. Put the right side seam in by hand, then turn to the wrong side, baste and then stitch the wrong side seam on the machine. Finish the seams of the waist in the same manner. The panel front can have the edges turned in, laid in place on the dress and stitched close to the edge. Or the dress can be laid over the panel edges and stitched in place.

The seams would look well with a narrow piping of the dress material, and if this is used, the same method should be followed in putting the waist and skirt together. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, and the edges bound.

The collar can be made double, or if you prefer to make it of a single thickness it will be pretty to finish the edges with a narrow, bias binding. The cuffs should be made the same as the collar. The sleeves are full length and close fitting. Notches on the sleeves pattern show just where the outer edges of the sleeve is to be gathered to make fullness at the elbow. Take the smallest possible stitches in gathering, distribute the fullness over the given space evenly, and press carefully. This fullness makes the necessary "pocket" for the elbow. It is a good idea not to make these close fitting sleeves too close fitting. They are not only uncomfortable, but they don't look well. A sleeve of this kind can be made reasonably close fitting without being actually tight.

Pattern No. 741 is an excellent design for a dress for school wear. The dress is cut with the back in one piece, and in the front the dress is slashed under the belt to allow for the plaits. There is a slashed opening in the center front and this allows the dress to be slipped on and off over the head. Pretty little collar and cuffs finish the neck and sleeves; and the latter are full length and close fitting.

Kasha in a becoming color, or one of the other woolens in a small check, might be used. Even though warm weather isn't far away there are many days when a dress with a little warmth isn't uncomfortable. Challis is an excellent material for this kind of a dress, and unless the trimming prevents, it can be washed as satisfactorily as a linen handkerchief.

The narrow belt may be made of the dress material, or one of calfskin may be chosen.

Navy blue crêpe de Chine, with one of the plaid taffetas was used in making the dress by pattern No. 739. This is one of the straight line designs that is so generally becoming; and a feature that will appeal to most women is that it opens the length of the front. There is an applied plait of the dress material the length of the front and this gives a good finish there. Two inserted pockets in the skirt add to the attractiveness as well as the usefulness of the dress; and the broad suede belt gives the right finish at the waistline.

Take great care in cutting and measuring for the buttonholes. Then overcast every one from the wrong side before working. One of the heavier crêpes or satins would also be suitable materials for this design, and two tones of the same color and material could be used in the making.

740—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

739—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

741—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 2⅛ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

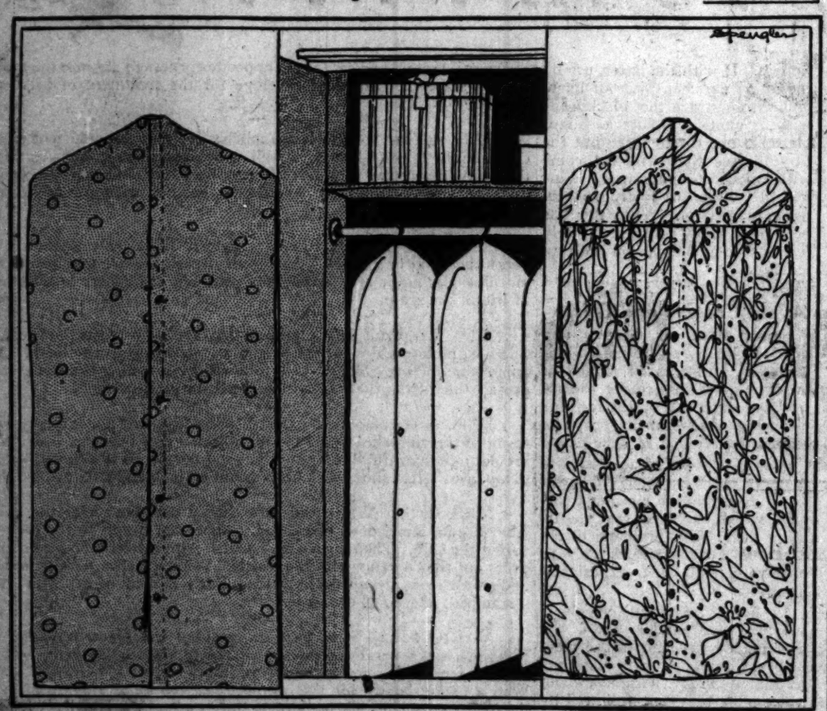
Practical and Fancy Needlework - - - By Clotilde



Dress Bags Are a Joy to the Woman Who Likes to Keep Her Gowns Fresh and Attractive.

DRESS bags are really a necessity, if we are to keep things looking fresh, and this is especially true in towns where soft coal is used. Of course, you can buy pretty, satisfactory bags in a great variety of designs, but there are many women who enjoy making these things, and in so doing a considerable sum of money is saved.

About 3½ yards of 36 inch material is needed, or if you buy anything narrower you will need 5 yards for one bag.

Some bags are made the shape of a clothes hanger at the top, and the rest of the way the bag pieces are perfectly straight. One piece makes the back, and in the front there are two. These front pieces are hemmed down one edge, using an inch wide hem, and the strips cut wide enough to seam to the back, and allow the hems to lap. These hems may be stitched together down from the top for six or nine inches, then fastened the rest of the way with several buttons and buttonholes.

Another style of bag is made with a sort of yoke top, back and front. This is cut the shape of the hanger across the top, and measures nine inches deep. To this the lower parts of the bag are gathered, allowing one and one-half across for fullness. In the front there are two pieces, the same as in the other one. There are lapped, hemmed edges that button together, or they may tie if you prefer. While patterns for these bags may be bought one shouldn't be necessary, and if you are not used to cutting patterns, do it first in paper—of course making the width ample so a dress won't be crushed.

Some women make a gayly colored cretonne bag for each one of their dresses, and it isn't a bad idea.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

Banish Blackheads and Oily, Sallow Skin

Why smear and plaster, squeeze and bruise your face to rid the pores of those unsightly blackheads when a few minutes application of Calonite before retiring at night makes them disappear like magic?

Thousands today use this wonderful colloidal preparation. It is an astringent, pleasant to use, refreshing to apply, yet quickly and surely it does the results it brings.

Calonite also works wonders on oily, muddy complexions. It absorbs excess oil and clears the skin of impurities.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how or to whom. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

BABY ARTICLES ARE GLADLY WELCOMED.

DON'T all of us like to think that the arrival of a baby means happiness for every one—happiness for the mother, for the family, and the promise of a happy childhood for the little newcomer? In our families, we see everything possible is done, and somehow we like to think that every baby and mother receive similar care.

Yet our files are filled with cases where parents are facing the prospect of a little one with nothing done, and absolutely no means of providing for the baby. Illness in many of these families has consumed the family savings, and all these expectant parents want the little newcomer to have every advantage—but they simply cannot provide unless we help them.

An infant in any family of comfortable circumstances seldom wears out his first clothes, and there they are, ready for a lot more service. Gifts from those whose babies have outgrown their first outfits, infant clothes, cribs, carriages, and beds will be welcomed. Many of us can give these articles, and think what they will mean to the many poor expectant mothers.

If you have some of these baby articles which have outlived their usefulness to you, let me know that you will help! I can place everything of the sort where it will mean the difference between happiness and misery. So please let me know what you have to give!

If You Have a Car.

"I am coming to you in the hope you will be able to find some one who is willing to give pleasure to a shutin. My sister, who has been sick for a year, is now able to go out for a short drive, but is too weak to walk. We do not own a car and I wondered if it would be possible to get in touch with some one who has leisure time and a car who would be glad to do an act of kindness. M. R. G."

If you have an automobile and would like to devote a little of your time to making others happy, this would be a splendid opportunity, and probably would be the means of restoring this young woman's health.

For a Convalescent.

"Do you think you could get me a tennis set and a racket? I have been sick for a long time and the doctor tells me to get out in the sun. I like to play tennis, but I can't afford to buy either of these articles. A. S."

Have you either of these articles, which will help make our correspondent a strong and healthy young woman again? She'll be most appreciative for them.

Out of Work.

"I have been out of work for some time and I need a spring overcoat, size 42. Do you think one of your readers has an old one to give to me? "E. H."

Last year's top coat might do this correspondent quite well. May he not have it?

Two Small Boys Need Shoes.

"I know of two boys who are needing shoes badly. One is Sam, 13 years old, whose father deserted and left his mother with five children younger than him to support. He wears shoes, size 8, in a man's size. He goes to school and is trying to make good so he can help his mother support his little sisters. The other boy is James. His father has been ill now for three months and it has been necessary to go into debt to pay the rent and buy food. He is a little tot and wears size 8 in children's shoes. H. J. A.

Spring showers mean wet feet and resultant ill health when little boys' feet are not well shod. Can you give Sam or James a pair of shoes?

Victims of Sickness.

"I am a widow depending upon my sons for support, but they have so many expenses, there is never enough for clothing for us. We have had a great deal of sickness and doctor bills, and my youngest daughter, who is just getting well, needs a coat, size 16 or 18. I am in need of clothing, too—a coat and a black dress, size 44. If you can help us, we will be most thankful. Mrs. P."

When one has the expense of ill health to cope with, it is hard to provide the necessary clothing. I am sure you can help in this case with a cast off garment or two.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

by Doris Blake

The Power of Parental Example Does Everything to Incline the Twig in the Way It Should Grow

WHAT ails youth?

With every new incident of crime committed by a member of the younger generation the question is advanced. And a sweeping condemnation of the entire group known as the younger generation follows.

That there is something wrong with a certain portion of our young people cannot be denied. District attorneys and other officials of law claim youthful offenders are supplanting in numbers the hardened mature criminals of an earlier day, and women in charge of female police departments in large cities report appalling conditions of vice among girls.

Nevertheless it is unfair to embrace the whole crop of boys and girls in a charge of waywardness. They deserve fairer treatment from us elders. They deserve it for no other reason than that the offenders among them are offenders principally because of laxity of parental control, of bad parental example, and of indifference on the part of elders generally over the plight in which many of this younger generation finds themselves. Through no fault of their own they are living in cooped up quarters that provide no opportunity for them to rid themselves normally of that excess energy for which youth has ever been noted and without which it would not be worth its salt.

The saner diagnosticians are probing now to locate the source of the ailments of youth. They are on the right track. There never was a time when parenthood was a harder job and never a time when self-indulgence and bad example were practiced so diligently by parents.

Remedy Lies with Parents.

Whatever the causes of this debacle of youth, and many have been advanced in exoneration of parents [cheap literature, live-your-own-life propaganda, the movies, the automobile, the jazz age], the remedy lies with the older generation. It rests with parents in better control of themselves, and with adults, generally, who will get together to provide a healthier outlet for the surplus energy of youth.

These young people cannot help having been born into a generation that saw an upheaval with so devastating an aftermath as the world war. But parents can help them. They can help by decent example. Not only the individual parent but the whole body of elders to whom the young must naturally look for guidance can put their shoulders to the wheel and help straighten out this vital problem of youth.

There is no end of good in that much maligned younger crowd, even among the so-called wild ones, if it were only given half a chance to blossom. You could not be the confidante of thousands of them, as I am, and not realize they are waging a terrific uphill fight. Some God-given instinct possesses them to want to do the right thing. They are not happy doing the wrong. Yet they see on every hand the transgressors getting away with everything from petty vice to murder and they are plainly confused.

It is not an unusual thing to get a letter from some thoughtful member of that younger crowd complaining about the conduct of its elders. It might come as a stunning surprise to a number of parents to learn what is going on in the back of the minds of their children. The thoughtful among them, and, believe me, they are plentiful enough in number to make me their champion, are crying out for that old fashioned parent in whose virtue, ruggedness, and strength of character they may have implicit faith.

Letter from a Son.

Just listen to this from one of them, a serious minded young college chap. "It is the jazz age of fathers," he begins. "Fathers seem to be becoming kids instead of acting their part. They seem to be greedier for enjoyment than the young, and that, heaven knows, is GREEDY.

"At any rate, if they are not, they are made to appear so. When I come out from shows lately, I feel ashamed to face my father. Ashamed for him and fathers like him. I can see youngsters playing kissing games and the like. That seems natural. But when I see on the stage or in the movies, fathers portrayed in the rôles of beaus, mashers, and irresponsible men, my heart aches, and the thread of tenderness, and confidence, and faith which should be between me and my father is somehow snapped. They say the theater and the movies and literature of the day reflect life. Well, if this is the life of fathers, then it might be best to keep the children in ignorance of it.

"I wish sometimes I had been born 75 or 100 years ago, when it was possible for a child to believe in his father implicitly. I firmly believe one of the reasons children go wrong is because they see older people portrayed in every conceivable situation they should not see. I don't know that I care for censorship. But a sense of decency ought to compel writers and artists of every description and joke-makers to keep facts about life at least within the ramifications of civility. Don't distort our parents to us."

And here is a letter from a girl 21: "My mother, I am sorry to say, isn't like a real mother at all. She is flighty. She is 45, and the other day she was driving a car and ran into another car. The officer who arrested her complained because there was liquor on her breath. I had to believe it because I have smelled it there many times myself when she comes home after an afternoon with her 'pals.'

"When she was young she worked. She had a strict mother and a stricter father. She somehow seems to be making up for it now. She has no authority over herself. Father has no authority over her. And I confess I blush for my mother at times. My father has been fortunate in making money that gives her all the luxuries. I hope the boy I am going to marry never makes that much if it brings the same temptations to cut loose. I could not bear to think of my life as a succession of afternoons spent at card tables and chasing more excitable amusements. I want to be a better mother than that. This may seem a hard and sophisticated thing for me to say, but it is true that I want to make a really great success of my life."

Another youngster wrote me not long ago that "she wished her mother wouldn't dress and act so silly." These are not hard hearted children. They preface their parental criticisms with an apology to which their parental conduct does not entitle them. Sometimes I wonder if a reversal of the order of "bringing them up" wouldn't be a good thing. Turn the wayward parent over to the child for training. It might make the world safer for the children.

Happily, not all parents are indifferent to the welfare of their children. There are parents of successful children who preach the religion of example as sincerely as the religion ever was preached. But there is no gainsaying the fact that making a home really a home is a bigger problem today than it was 30 years ago. Then it was a comparatively easy matter to be a parent and to do your duty as a parent. Today parenthood requires sterner rectitude to escape helplessness before the juggernaut of progress that has brought with it wealth, comforts, and pleasures, discomfort, rebellion, and degeneracy.

The Power of Example.

No amount of preaching obedience to law theoretically can overcome the ill effects on the child who knows his father is a bootlegger or a bootlegger's customer. And that goes many ways: father dodging his taxes; father holding a conference on how to dodge them; father substituting shoddy materials for the proper kind, giving his son an example that might easily start him on the road to Sing Sing. The business of "putting something over on the next fellow in commercial deals" recited in a son's presence is fatal to his young morals. The shreds of honesty are destroyed.

The lying mother, lying to her friends, lying to her admirer, or lying to the husband, when once caught in the act by the child has ruined that child's life. Parents are nothing if they are not respected. A youngster is better off brought up in an orphan asylum without having known the caress of a parent than to have one whose ways are steeped in that good old biblical word, iniquity.

People are honest not because it was preached to them but because their forbears were honest. Children are moral not because morality is handed down in slogans but because of morality in the home, morality in business, morality in personal relations. All these things begin with the personal equation. Hypocrisy has no greater foe than childhood, as one savant observes. The child instinctively feels when his parents are sincere and when they are not sincere. Once a child has discovered his parents' insincerity he is ready to become a menace to society and himself.

Providing an Outlet.

After example in collecting the ailments of youth comes provision for an outlet for their energy into joyful, healthful physical recreation. Amusement on every side is coupled with indoor confinement. It naturally follows that thoughts are turned from healthful outdoor recreation to the neurotic game or amusement of the confined, indoor sort.

Why should not the problem of the healthful bringing up of a child's mind and body claim the attention of the community to the same extent that a problem of commercial and industrial extensions claims it? We have chambers of commerce planning for business. We have industrial conference boards planning for industry. We have Rotarian organizations planning civic enterprises. Why not devise ways and means of restoring through recreation the healthy, moral atmosphere it once had? Surely our civilization is rich enough and ample enough for that. Can't we build temples of play as we build citadels of work? Can't we build them with the same planning, the same energy, and for the production of the same efficient results?

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Wants Other Beaux.

"Dear Miss Blake: Some time ago I met a 16 year old girl whom I instantly liked. I continued to see her every day and as the days went by I fell in love with her. Though I love her as no one has ever loved, she acts as if she did not care for me at all. However, she has told a friend of mine that she likes me a great deal.

"I suppose that she thinks I am too young (I am 17) for her and that probably is the reason she acts that way.

"What is your advice in this case? Do you think I am too young for her?

"CHARLES."

You have paid her too much attention and she has tired of it, Charles. You can't expect a young girl of her years to concentrate on one beau. It's asking too much.

Getting Careless.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company with a girl of 18 for the last two years and love her dearly.

"But of late she is careless of her personal appearance and quite a few times I have had to suggest that she remove the high water mark from her neck before we go out.

"When I reminded her of these little things she starts to cry and tells me I don't love her.

"This may sound funny to you, Miss Blake, but I am serious, as I love this girl. Please tell me, is there no way I can make her realize the error of her ways, or shall I give her up?

"PERPLEXED."

Any one so careless about her person will be negligent about other things. One can't feel proud of a friend who isn't more particular about her appearance. After your comment, her pride should make her take greater care if she hasn't the natural inclination.

He Remembers.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18. Until a few months ago I went with a young man one year my senior. We had an argument in which neither of us were right. I offered my apology soon afterwards, but it took him a couple of weeks longer. He is friendly towards me again. I dance with him a great deal, but he never asks me to go with him any more. I am quite popular, but don't seem to care for any but this one. How can I win him back, or do you think I can?

"LONESOME AND SORRY."

Apparently he hasn't the happy faculty of forgetting differences as quickly as you, dear, but he may be around yet. Don't refuse other invitations while waiting, though. Let him see you can attract others.

Her Fancy's Changed.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and love a girl one month younger than myself. We happen to go to the same place every Monday, and I was in the habit of taking her home until lately. She has been going home with some one else for the last few weeks. Her father is rather strict with her and he will not allow her to have any callers. We have gone out a few times, but I always had to meet her on the corner. Now she seems to be busy all the time and she will not see me even on the corner. I am forced to doubt as to how busy she is. She acts colder now and I wonder if she still cares.

"EARL."

It doesn't look that way, Earl. Her fancy has changed, as it's quite liable to at her age. Just make the best of it and look around for another.

In Gloves.

The most embarrassing moment of my life happened during the first week of my first position as stenographer.

As I had a few minutes leisure one day when the boss stepped out of the office, I tried on a pair of black kid gloves I had bought during my lunch hour. They were a tight fit, and I had some trouble in getting them on. While I was admiring them my boss rushed into the office, bringing with him some men he had met in the hall, one of them being the president of the concern, from the home office.

Hurrying into his private office, he called out, "Bring your notebook, Miss L——." Immediately I began peeling off the new gloves—but—they wouldn't peel! After I had struggled for some minutes trying to get them off, and became more and more nervous and excited, the boss looked out, and seeing what the trouble was, said, "Leave them on. Mr. B. must catch a train in a few minutes and wants to dictate a letter to the home office before he leaves here."

So, with three amused men watching me, I took Mr. B.'s dictation with tight fitting black kid gloves on my hands, and with a longing in my heart for the earth to open up and swallow me.

F. M. L.

Force of Habit.

While I am not exactly a half century old, I do remember when we wore skirts so long that we had to hold them up while walking on muddy or damp pavements.

Imagine my embarrassment one day during the last rainy seige, as I hurried across one of the busiest corners, to discover that I was daintily lifting my knee length skirt as I stepped across a muddy place!

Putting It Frankly.

I had become well acquainted with many of the guards and some of the officers at the state reformatory, but I did not know the new superintendent who had been at the institution but a month.

One morning while I was busy working at my table, the assistant superintendent, a guard, and a third man came up to see me. The assistant superintendent asked me if I had ever met Mr. E——, the superintendent.

"I wouldn't know him from a bundle of hay wire," I replied without looking up. There was a silence.

Then the assistant said, "Well, this is Mr. E——."

Luckily for me, the superintendent had a sense of humor. Since then he and I have become good friends.

E. T. B.

Horrors!

I was registering for a college course in English and was trying to get a professor who had a reputation for being easy. There was one man, Mr. M., whom I didn't know but whom I had heard was quite hard, and I didn't want to get in his class at any cost. The man who was signing my card, however, wanted me to take this certain class, so I answered, "O, I wouldn't take a course under that man at all. He is a bore, as well as being hard to get a grade from."

I noticed he blushed; then another man at his side turned and said, "So that's the kind of a reputation you have, M.?" I faded away.

G. B.

Looks Told.

A sum of money had disappeared from the office, and the circumstances were such that almost any one of the force could be a guilty party. The police were called in and for a while things hummed around there. Every one, from chief of staff clear down to the janitor, was had up for questioning, and although we were trying to do "business as usual," we were all pretty tense and looking crosseyed at our neighbor.

I had begun to develop a nervous headache, when finally the boss approached a group of us and in a lowered, confidential tone, began, "Now, folks, I have this money, and it just goes right to my heart to have to tell you——"

Before I could get my wits about me, I thought that he was confessing to us that he had taken it himself (instead of trying to advise us that the culprit had been apprehended), and my horrified expression and smothered ejaculation, before I could come to, caught his attention, and made perfectly clear to him what I was thinking.

He made no comment, neither then nor afterwards, but now when we meet as we must sometimes in the pursuance of our duties, he looks—believe me, he looks!

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Whether Wild or Domestic, Cultivated or Free Growing, the Edible Greens Are a Virtuous Tribe.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

"GOD'S medicine" is one of the names given to greens by a people destitute of a knowledge of vitamins even to this day. This is not saying a thing against vitamins. We believe with all our heart and all our mind that the more exact, and extensive, and technical a man's knowledge of the nutrients is the better off he is, and the world as well, in so far as his influence counts.

Nevertheless, it is interesting to discover what a close agreement there often is between the modern and scientific knowledge of foods, and the great common sense decisions of primitive men, even when they have been hagridden with superstition. Quite ancient peoples have assigned specific medical virtues to this green and that, but this is not surprising when we consider what the old medical pharmacopoeia was—a list of plants or parts of plants, or of their essences or combinations. The bitter greens, or in special the chicory, used to be a standard home remedy for jaundice and other liver complaints. By the way, the epicurean table of today has greatly profited by the cultivation of this, which was but a wild and sprawling weed.

It is a pity that the race cannot hold on to all knowledge, especially about foods, but when one sort comes another sort is likely to go wholly or in part. For instance, today we surely know more exactly and extensively and technically the worth of green leaves in the diet, but only a few people—there used to be many—know about the great variety of edible wild greens which the spring time brings, and the summer continues, than did more primitive people. These two kinds of knowledge surely bolster one the other, and it is a mistake because we have one to hold the other of little account.

A woman of country upbringing of more than half a century back has this as her list of the greens she has eaten: Pokeweed shoots, black mustard, chicory, all kinds of dock, purslane, pigweed, plantain, wild lettuce (volunteer lettuce), young red clover, dandelion, milkweed (substitute for asparagus), mallow, lamb's quarter (cenopodium), sheep's sorrel, and a number of others more rare.

Our botanies and various other books yield entertaining and even fascinating knowledge about each of these plants, or "edible weeds." Typically, as well as typically ancient, waste places yield pot herbs for our health insurance and to satisfy our liking for something different.

The Amaranth Pigweed.

As an example of food growing in the most waste of modern places we may take what is called sometimes the "rough pigweed," to distinguish it from the smooth, which is also called lamb's quarter, and belongs to the goosefoot family, while that weed growing in our most modern of waste places belongs to that family of most poetical associations, the amaranths. One of the modern waste places it favors is the hard packed soil around rather neglected and barren city apartment buildings, often where not a blade of grass raises its head, and too often it grows there undisturbed by residents who need just such a food as it is to give them some zest for living.

A popular name for this is "red root," which it has, and another is "beet root," for when cooked it has a faint beet aroma, though it is not as savory as cooked beet tops, one of the most delicious of our garden greens. It is often found in forests, in vacant lots, and the tips of its branches are good to cook the summer through, while the other pigweed is strictly a spring green.

Purslane.

Here is another and even more delicious green—because of its acidity—which grows in waste places but loves best the thrifty kitchen garden, in which place it has been so hated as to furnish charming and humorous subject for many references in that gay book, "My Summer in a Garden," by Charles Dudley Warner, which acknowledges the fact that the Chinese eat it. So do the Dutch, who even can it for home and world use. And so will you eat it if you once learn to prepare it. Yet tons of this are weeded out of gardens every year and left to wilt. With sliced new beets it is delicious.

Dandelions.

But for many people the dandelions lead the list of greens from earliest March to late May, after which they are mostly too bitter and sunburned, although when they come up with long grass they may be good until mowing time for it. This year I saw in middle March a man turning aside the dead and heavy grasses of last year, growing next a fence around a great public building, to get dandelions. I envied him his "mess." In Italian markets one may sometimes find dandelions in late winter which are nothing but a red ball with a white heart, real vegetable lobster when cooked.

Other Greens.

A philanthropic emperor in China once had a book prepared which contained, it is said, a list of over 3,000 edible plants common to his country, copies of which were sent to every district where distress and poverty prevailed. We have a tremendous list coming from forests, fields, and seashore, all with some sort of edible history. The buds of the beech and calamus flower and other things like this have been eaten without being subjected to the pot.

Old Ways with Greens.

Some one once sent me this, headed "Grandmother's Method of Preserving Greens and Vegetables: Gather the broad leaved dandelions when tender, wash thoroughly, then with a thread and needle string them through the bud, or core, and hang in the window till dry, when the strings may be wrapped in newspaper to keep out the dust till used. String beans and peas may be strung the same way, and are preferable to salting down, for the flavor is kept better. Squash, pumpkin, turnips, apples or any pithy vegetables may be pared round and round, then strung and dried." Of course, okra and peppers are still prepared in this fashion, even in commercial quantities.

Preparing Greens.

It is much easier to pick over and trim greens before wetting them. It is lovely business to dig dandelions, give them a good shake to remove dead leaves and grass, and trim them before taking them into the house. The shake also removes anything like sand, and so shortens the work when they are washed. While each green requires its own special treatment in general, each must be examined, or picked over, and trimmed, then must follow two steps more before they are really ready to cook—washing and blanching—and this latter is only a more thorough or last step in the cleaning.

Washing Greens.

In washing greens or strawberries it is always best to put them into an ample quantity of water, and then to lift them out of it rather than to pour the water off them as is sometimes done, when sand or whatever heavy dirt is in the pan is poured back over them.

Blanching Greens.

It is sure that uncooked green leaves are medically best as food, therefore in cooking them our whole aim should be to make the process a careful or gentle one so that we may not by heat lessen their contribution to our diet with little left save their roughage value. To drop them into boiling water is exceeding cleansing and then to rinse them in cold shortens the cooking time, it has been proven. The rapid change of temperature gives effects equal to cooking. To keep them long in boiling water leaches out their valuable solubles, so we make the process brief, or not over five minutes, and then only if they are a little old. The tenderest require only a minute of blanching.

A Cooking Prohibition.

Do not use soda in cooking any vegetable. The French woman will tell for the worse. The greatest of our modern food scientists, who know because of long years of experiment, tell us that the soda destroys the vitamins. We believe them. More than that, it offers an excuse for careless cooking with more fire than is in any way good for the green, whether it is kept green or not. The soda is supposed to preserve the green color, etc. This may be preserved by careful and gentle cooking. Too much fire will turn a cooked green from green to yellow in a flash of the eye.

The Real Cooking.

The blanching is a part of the cooking, but after that comes the time process. After the greens are blanched they may generally be cooked in no more water than what clings to them. Doing this also makes it essential to keep the fire low, otherwise this bit you that it makes them "horrid," meaning that it affects their flavor of water will disappear as steam and the greens will burn. Or when a cook cannot manage this sort of cooking she can put the blanched greens in the double boiler. She may be surprised to find much more water in it when they have cooked, tender than she imagined was there. This is because the greens are ninety-five per cent water, and some of what is in them has been cooked out, while that on them has not cooked away as it would in even the slowest cooking, generally.

Butter and Cream Dressing.

For fine and soft greens a butter and cream dressing is highly acceptable. Dry the greens quickly, or press them dry, chop them fine, and then combine them with a little hot cream seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, and perhaps a little nutmeg. Cook the two together until the cream seems mainly absorbed, and serve. This is nice cooking which no recipe can do. Judgment and care are the agents.

On Seasoning Greens Generally.

In the old days a piece of pork or bacon was cooked with greens to add the agreeable fat dressing. Vinegar was the only thing added besides the salt, which latter not needed when the meat was salty. As served, no butter or oil would have clung to the greens because they were too wet. When the pot liquor was used for something the virtues in the greens were in a sense salvaged, but the too long cooking yielded anything but a dainty dish. Now we cook the greens in the least bit of water, lest they be sodden or water soaked, and then dry out or press out any water left so that butter will be a satisfactory dressing, and the one that makes them most savory.

Melted Butter and Lemon Juice.

To get an acid green like the much appreciated sorrel cultivated in France and elsewhere, a seasoning of butter and lemon juice and salt and perhaps a bit of paprika is made into a sort of sauce and poured over it. The greens must be served at once after this dressing is put over them. Two tablespoons of melted butter and more or less of the juice of one lemon are the proportions and right for a small amount of greens.

French Dressing on Greens.

A French dressing on dry hot greens may be as satisfactory as when these are molded and served cold for a salad.

Bacon Dressing.

This dressing which makes wilted lettuce and is good on green or wax string beans cooked is also excellent on the less delicate greens: One-fourth pound of well chilled and sliced bacon, two tablespoons of vinegar, a little sugar. To make it milder yet add to it a tablespoon or two of sour cream. Pare off any smoky edges from the bacon and remove any bits of gristle. Then either cut into bits with scissors, or put through the food chopper. It must be cold and rather fresh cut, or it will be stringy. Therefore the scissors may be best. Put the bacon so cut fine, into a cold frying pan and stir while it toasts, never allowing it to get smoking hot. Add seasonings and serve.

Meat Gravy.

Use meat gravy instead of cream, cooking the two together until the gravy has blended with the greens.

Thickening Greens.

When greens are to be used for a garnish some butter can be melted and as much flour stirred into it as would make a medium thick sauce, cooking the flour rather well, yet gently, in the butter, then adding the greens and cooking to a blend. A little cream may be added to soften as it always does, and a little fresh butter at last to make savory, or a meat stock may add fat and body as well with flavor.

To Crisp Greens.

Sometimes greens that seem wilted may be thoroughly cleaned, then left in ice cold water to grow crisp as they will do. The leaves of the rough pigweed will soon look as though they were growing. The heart of the dandelion expands when thus treated, etc.

Cooking Dandelion Greens.

After these greens have been cleaned and washed the larger and coarser sorts may be blanched ten minutes, the small and tender ones five. Rinse with cold water and cook gently in a covered kettle in water clinging from the rinse. Tender greens will require then only fifteen or twenty minutes of cooking to be tender. Dry and squeeze the water out, add butter and nothing else if you want them the nearest au naturel, and so most wholesome.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

In the Rain.

I received an invitation to a home wedding, the ceremony to be performed at high noon. A small porch at the home had been artistically decorated, and the wedding party was to stand there. It had rained hard all day, and as the wedding hour approached there seemed no chance for any change of weather. But promptly at 12 o'clock the guests were invited to the yard to stand under umbrellas, capes or coats to witness the ceremony which was performed on the porch as had been planned. J. W.

The Minister's Little Joke.

A country minister, who has a keen sense of humor, told me of this instance. It was in the hills of Pennsylvania and a farmer noted for his thriftiness and industry asked the minister to come out to his place on a certain day to marry him.

When the minister arrived at the designated time he found the farmer in his work clothes and bare feet, plowing, and leaving his team standing in the middle of the field he approached the minister. At the same time the bride, likewise no more gayly garbed, approached the pair.

The minister asked the groom if he had not better tie his team before the ceremony began.

"O," replied the man, "it won't take long, and they will be all right."

The minister thought he would give the man a good lesson in reverence and so he chose the longest service he knew and prolonged the prayer to almost endless length. Needless to say the neglected team had in the meantime plowed a furrow that was not consistent with a careful farmer's rule, and the minister enjoys his little joke to this day. L. B.

Married in a Hospital.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was held in a hospital. The young couple had set their wedding date, and on that day had set out for the justice of the peace. But fate intervened in the form of a reckless driver, who ran into them and demolished their car, so that both were injured (but not the reckless driver). They were taken to the hospital, and later in the day, after their wounds were dressed, they decided that the wedding should take place as usual. And so, on adjoining hospital beds they were married and despite the strangeness of their wedding they are still married! J. L. B.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives. The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Uneducated Meterman.

Wife—O, Oscar, a strange man was here today and said he wished to read our gas meter.

Husband—Well, did you let him in?"

Wife—Mercy, no! He used very poor grammar, and I felt sure he would not read it properly. Mrs. A. C.

Move Her in That Direction.

Wife—Mrs. S. said a sentimental song always moves her.

Hubby—Really? Let's play "Home Sweet Home." S. F.

Eternal Sleep.

My husband has little confidence in my driving. We were taking a long automobile trip and I said, "Shall I drive and let you sleep awhile?"

He said, "No, dear, I'm afraid I might sleep too long." J. M.

Next Best Thing.

Wifey—"Hubby, dear, what did you buy me for my birthday?"

Hubby [grouchy]—"You know, that wrist watch you wanted—well, I bought you an alarm clock."

F. O'N.

Failed to Register.

Wife—[Evening of election day]: "Did you vote today, dear?"

Hubby—"No, I didn't register."

Wife—[sweetly]: "You never do." Mrs. W. R. C.

Divine—And Then Some.

He (reading an article in the paper)—It says here that the divine height of woman is 5 feet 5 inches.

She (angrily)—How dare you say that, when you know quite well that I am 5 feet 7 inches?

He—O, well, my dear, you are more than divine. M. P.

And She Said—

Wife: "When I begin to look old, will you love me?"

Husband [absentmindedly]: "Sure I do, dear." E. L. R.

The Art of Letter Writing

Bread and Butter Notes, the Word of Condolence, or That of Congratulation Are Simple to Pen and Are Acts of Thoughtfulness That Will Not Be Forgotten

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

By Persis Standish.

MORE lost than the lost art of conversation is the lost art of letter writing. I have on my desk two letters, and have had a number of others, asking me questions about when and how certain letters should be written, on what kind of stationery, and in what manner. There are so many varieties of letters, each of their own kind important, that one hesitates to give general rules.

Business letters, of course, we will not discuss, since it is easy for the heads of firms to dictate the policies of their business letters for the whole organization. But there is one thing I would like to say about business letters that come to newspapers. Many of our correspondents complain now and then that they do not receive prompt answers. If they do not, it is because of the volume of the mail that comes to a newspaper, rather than for any other reason. For a letter to any department of a newspaper is a sacred thing. There is no other organization in the world that treats letters with the same consideration and the same importance as is given to them as newspapers. I have known it to happen that people have lost good positions for merely neglecting a letter—not letters, but a letter—either in answering it flippantly or neglecting to answer it at all. So our correspondents can write to any department of this paper and receive always the utmost consideration, the utmost silence, if they wish, and get the promptest reply it is possible to give. First come, first served.

The Letter of Condolence.

Next to the newspaper letters, the ones that socially should receive the first consideration are those of condolence. There is no possible way of expressing sympathy that is so adequate and at the same time so satisfying to the recipient as a letter. The letter need not be long, it need not be flowery, but it is easy to say in black and white things that are hard to express in the spoken word. When you see the bereaved one your own tears choke you, but if you are at a distance you can really express what you feel in sympathy for them. A letter of condolence can be extremely simple. Here is one received lately by a woman who had lost a child, from some one who is a practical stranger to her.

"Dear Mrs. Green: The little that the human word can do to express human sympathy, I wish to make it do now. Will you take the wish for the deed and believe that my heart goes out to you in this hour of your sorrow?

"CORA BROWN."

Expressing Thanks.

Next in importance in the letter writing scheme are letters of gratitude. They should be written almost immediately after the receipt of either gift or favor. Of course, in the case of wedding gifts they may be postponed until the honeymoon is over, if the bride wishes. However, this seems a little bit procrastinating to me, as it is much easier to write a letter hot off the pan, if you know what I mean, than to try to write it a few weeks later when the incident is cold. For instance, if the bride writes immediately after she has received each gift, she will not miss the time that it takes to write the individual note and she will not become confused as to which letters she has written, and will not forget anybody. Also, she will not have a tremendous labor before her when she comes back from her honeymoon.

Letters of thanks for Christmas gifts should be sent no later than the 15th of January. A letter of gratitude for a gift can be very short, indeed, and still express a great deal of appreciation. The typical letter for the bride or other recipient of gifts should be something like this:

"My dear Harriet: How do you manage to know just what it is I most desire to possess? Then, how do you manage to have it here at just the right moment when I most wish to possess it? I think you must either be or own a wizard.

"Thank you so much for the lovely gift. Do come and see it in my house. I shall be here, too. Affectionately,

"HAZEL."

Under the heading of letters of gratitude, of course the "bread and butter" letters are a most important group. They must be written immediately upon one's return from a visit. If one has been some time in a house—say a week or two—a short letter will not do. The letter then must be at least several pages long and attempt to chronicle events since one has left the house.

A visit of a week-end calls for just a note. Some very punctilious people write such a letter even to dinner hostesses and luncheon hostesses, if the dinner and luncheons were given for them especially. This is not absolutely necessary where a call can be paid shortly after the event, but it is nice, particularly if the guest of honor happened to be from out of town and the hostess was the friend of a very good friend.

Sending flowers sometimes does away with the necessity of writing such letters, but in case one sends flowers one should express on the card that goes with them one's appreciation for hospitality received.

Congratulations.

Letters of congratulation are among the hardest of all to write, but they are among the most delightful to receive. They should be written not only to men who are engaged to be married, but also in many other cases, such as graduations from college, success in an artistic way, remarkable promotions, and any other good fortune that happens to a dear friend. Of course, no example is needed here of this sort of letter because it is so easy to write from your heart on such an occasion.

Of love letters there is not much to say, Miss Blake having said most of it already, and probably warned you with the old slogan: "Write, and fear no man. Do not write, and fear no woman." However, there are lots of letters in social intercourse which are quite as dangerous as love letters, and about which nobody hears until there is a suit for libel, or other fracas not quite so serious, but equally unpleasant. In a general way it is safest never to say an unkind thing at all, but it is positively dangerous to say one in a letter. Your dearest friend today may turn out to be your dearest enemy tomorrow. This may sound cynical, but it is the way of the world.

A man or a woman have come between two men and two women many times. Letters have been shown in which something written in the strictest confidence and meant only for loving eyes have been flaunted before cynical ones, and then the little "bird on the wire" tells all, and there is trouble. Unless you absolutely know such and such to be a fact never put it in a letter. Then, if you know that it is a fact and it is an unpleasant fact, still do not put it in a letter. If you have any warning to give, or if you wish to say anything unpleasant, say it—but never write it!

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Sun Rooms Bring the Brightness and Freshness of Spring Days Right Into the House.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SPRING days, clear skies and pleasant weather bring around "sun room time" again. We must plan now to brighten up our sun rooms, to make them more livable for the many coming days which we shall enjoy in them. Such a wide variety of furnishings and decorations are on the market that any number of interesting schemes may be carried out successfully.

Adjoining a living room done in French provincial style is the charmingly simple little sun room illustrated today. The walls are covered with a blue and cream plaid paper and woodwork is painted deep blue. A group of three windows almost fills one wall. Novel window curtains are made of cream colored voile, bound with vermilion. They are finished at the top with narrow French headings, and are caught back with vermilion cords. Extending across the full width at the top of the window is a narrow wooden shelf, painted blue to match the woodwork. Colorful bits of odd pottery are ranged along this shelf. Placed against the group of windows is an old hickory flag seat settee. A pair of arm chairs and a side chair at a little desk match the settee.

Red, blue and cream colored striped linen makes seat pads for all of these. Decorative flowered linen upholsters a large, comfortable arm chair. A drop leaf table of hickory in one corner near the end of the settee holds a bright colored pottery lamp, with a lemon yellow paper shade decorated in black, as well as an enameled box and an ash tray. A small table at the other end holds a bright bowl of flowers. A wrought iron bridge lamp, lighting the desk, has a shade of accordion plaited, flowered yellow calico. Deep blue fiber rugging completely covers the floor.

Quite different in character is a larger and more luxurious sun room. Walls and woodwork are painted a pale sage green. At the many casement windows are curtains of copper colored silk gauze. They are sill length, hanging straight, and are edged with narrow multi-colored worsted fringe. Large comfortable bent reed chairs and sofa are enameled burnt orange with trims of deep green. Striped glazed chintz cushions repeat these colors. A wrought iron settee at one side of the room is fitted with figured linen cushions and a wrought iron bench, placed before one group of windows, has a shiny black patent leather seat pad.

As colorful as a garden of blooms is another sun room in a small apartment. Walls are a light sunny yellow and the woodwork is black, decorated with a fine line of jade green. Black tarlatan, gathered very full and stitched at the hems with several rows of brightly colored worsted, is used for window curtains. The furniture is a combination of reed and wood, painted jade green with black trims. Cushions for the chairs and sofa are of linen frieze in rainbow stripes of brilliant hue. Throwing the colors into strong relief is the black wool chenille floor covering.

Rainbow effects evidence great popularity for sun room use. At a recent exhibit, one of the most favored suites was one made of stick style bent reed, the sticks painted in alternating rainbow colors. The suite is set up in interesting display room. Walls are paneled and painted cream color with the panelings picked out in bright violet. At the windows are glass curtains of natural colored casement cloth, bordered with two inch bands of violet and sapphire blue glass rings. Cushions on the rainbow furniture are made of violet homespun, piped with blue. A pair of blue glass lamps on end tables have plaited violet paper shades, tied with blue tassel cords. Deep blue rugs are used on the floor.

Pleasingly effective is a sun room in a suburban house. The walls are done in pearl gray paper with an allover pattern of foliage in two tones of green and gray. Woodwork is painted a soft leaf green. Curtains at the long French windows are illusively different. They are made of two thicknesses of casement gauze, hanging straight to the floor. The one against the glass is of amber, the other of pale pinkish orange. They produce a soft glowing light that is most fascinating.

Bent reed furniture is painted a deep amber with leaf green trims. Cushions are of ombré striped material, shading from pale amber to deep orange. End tables and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of mellow golden maple. Green glass lamps conveniently placed have parchment shades. An extra arm chair placed near a set of narrow book shelves is upholstered in green and yellow checked linen. An amber glass lamp on a square maple table at one side of the chair has a marbleized paper shade. A Chinese rug almost completely covers the floor.

Incidental tables are of wrought iron with decorative tile tops. A colorful screen, painted in an Italian renaissance design, stands in one corner of the room. Wrought iron lamps have shades of figured paper. Large black and white marbleized rubber tiles cover the floor. Wrought iron doors separate this sun room from the adjoining living room.

My Greatest Thrill

In the Nick of Time.

It was during the construction of my firm's new building. I came to see how the work was progressing. The elevators were running, but doors had not yet been put in for them. I looked down from the sixth floor to see where the elevator was, and not seeing it down below, I lifted my head. No sooner had I done this than the elevator, coming down, passed the floor I was standing on. If I had remained looking down a second longer I wouldn't be writing this.

I shudder now when I think of my narrow escape. W. McV.

A Scare in a Cave.

When I was a girl of about 15 I went with a party of twenty people to explore a cave.

The entrance was near the river's brink. It was a tunnel four or five feet in length and just large enough for my father and one of the women, who weighed 200, to squeeze in.

We had to lie flat and crawl, till suddenly we found ourselves in a spacious room. There were many such enlargements, each to be entered through tunnels or narrow winding passage ways. We ah-ed and oh-ed till several hours had elapsed.

At last we turned to retrace our steps, noticing the freakish shadows from our two lanterns flit about, listening to the weird sounds made by falling stones and dripping water. Then, lo! We had lost our way. Even the dog stood still and stared. The river was pouring in through an opening. The rush and roar of the angry waters was sickening. We were terror stricken. A woman fainted, another prayed, the rest of us stood like statues mute and still.

A brave little boy walked forward and discovered our river was only a stream of light, while the mighty roar of the water was the sound made by the wind outside, all of which had gone unnoticed when we had entered.

To this day my heart stands still for a second when I think of the terrible moment when we first beheld that "stream." G. E. A.

Remembered.

Years ago, while living in a small town, I played with a little girl next door who later married a wealthy man and took up her residence in a large city. I often heard of her wealth and charities, but never supposed she would have time to give her former playmate a thought.

My greatest thrill occurred on Christmas day, when the postman handed me a greeting card from her enclosing a good substantial check, with a few personal words added urging me to visit her this coming summer. A. A. E.

Scaring a Wildcat.

It was about 3 o'clock in the morning in a Canadian mining camp, where we were living, when I was awakened by a great commotion among the chickens. I went to the back door and saw a large cat just outside the henhouse door. I picked up some potatoes that were in the kitchen and threw them at the cat. It turned toward me, bristled up, and came in my direction.

I closed the door hurriedly and called my husband. As we went out the door we saw the cat go around the house and suddenly realized it was a wild cat! MRS. J. R. T.

A Narrow Escape.

After a long and tiring motor trip we had arrived in a strange town and rented a sleeping room in a private home. Having driven all day and the night before, we retired early and in a few minutes were almost asleep when I told my husband that I thought I smelled gas. He said he did, too, and turned on the electric light and saw an open gas pipe close to the electric light fixture in the ceiling. He lighted a match and a small explosion followed and a stream of flame burst from the pipe.

We told the people in whose home we were, and they immediately put a cap on the pipe, explaining that they had just turned on the gas, having moved in the house only a few days before and did not know there was a gas pipe in that room. MRS. A. E. P.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

High Handed.

Several years ago I boasted a first hand knowledge of numismatics. As I knew the majority of rare United States coins, I was ever on the lookout for them. When the neighborhood grocer, learning of my hobby, came to me and offered to sell me the score or so of coins that he had taken in during his years of business, I bought the lot after seeing several choice specimens. But, imagine my surprise, when, looking my purchase over more carefully, I found an almost perfect silver dollar of the year 1794, the first year they were coined. As I made no secret of my good fortune, my neighbors soon knew of it.

The next Sunday, a rather talkative woman I had known for some time came over and asked to borrow my coins, as one of her guests was a coin dealer and she would like to show him my collection. I did not feel worried when she failed to return them that evening. Monday she came over, and handing me my case, glibly began: "My friend who visited me last night, so wanted to buy your dollar that I couldn't refuse him, knowing you would be glad to get the money."

Then, while I stood speechless, she handed me $50 and added: "I went to so much trouble on your account that I know you won't miss the $10 that I took for myself to buy a new hat with." She then turned and walked away. MRS. R. C.

A Pretty Long Minute.

One day a neighbor girl came over to my house and asked me if I would lend her my skates for a minute, as she wanted to show them to her mother, for she wanted a pair like them. Of course I consented. After many weeks of waiting she returned them, all rusty and bent, saying, "I had an awfully nice time on them, but mother said I had better return them before something happens to them." They were so rusty I could never use them again. E. McC.

CHILDREN ONCE PUNY—NOW NO MOTHER'S CARE!

Before that wonderful little friend of school-children came to town, known as PARTOLA,—"The Doctor in Candy Form"—many boys and girls were puny, sickly, a great care and worry to mothers. They were constipated, never told mother, hence the prevalence of system poisoning, professionally known as Toxemia.

But now, mother uses this remedy the little ones like—PARTOLA, a mild pleasant mint-flavored laxative and internal antiseptic—that keeps bowels regular, appetites sharpened, digestion vigorous and system free from the poisonous bacteria that cause the child to fall in health and studies.

PARTOLA is mother's convenient, simple, economical, likable remedy for the entire family, now in millions of intelligent, well-regulated homes. All good druggists sell regular box at 30c, double size 50c, family size $1.00.

PARTOLA ANTISEPTIC & LAXATIVE
The Doctor in Candy Form

Popular Actor Now Able to Eat What He Likes

THOUSANDS of theater-goers have rocked with laughter at "Charley" Grapewin's delightful comedy acts. But few ever guessed that some of Mr. Grapewin's funniest scenes were played while he was suffering agonies with stomach trouble.

While playing in his well-known success, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," Mr. Grapewin's stomach trouble became so bad that it seemed as if he might have to quit the stage for a time. Fortunately, he was induced to try Adlerika. Results were so good that he has never been without a bottle since. "It surely is great," he declares, "to be able to eat anything I want without fear of gas or other stomach trouble."

Intestinal Stasis

STOMACH GAS, indigestion, gas bloating, and other forms of stomach and bowel trouble are often due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This increasingly common disease, which is usually caused by improper food, lack of exercise, and other faults of modern life, is said to afflict three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis simply means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. Instead of being promptly passed out of the bowels, this waste matter remains many hours or even days longer than it should. It then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and causes gas bloating, sour stomach, indigestion and sleeplessness.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move daily, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or soda or magnesia cannot give more than temporary relief from Intestinal Stasis or Gas. It can be relieved permanently only by continued REAL intestinal cleansing.

Adlerika, first used by Dr. Carl Weschcke in his private practice, is a bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic which acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other detergent and gas-expelling elements.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of the first effects of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might poison your system.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as most stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Many physicians recognize it as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary.

Don't think if your bowels move daily that you cannot have Intestinal Stasis. Gas is one of the most common symptoms. You'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter which Adlerika brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it.

The popular actor, Mr. Charles Grapewin, of 311 N. Arden Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Grapewin is known to thousands of theater-goers throughout the United States and Canada.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

General Furniture Co.'s Grand Jubilee Week

GIGANTIC SPRING OPENING SALE NOW IN FULL SWING

Thousands Rush to Take Advantage of Our Special Cut Prices Before Moving Day

Our big Jubilee Week and Spring Opening Sale, offering special cut prices on all lines for the benefit of May movers, is taking Chicago by storm. Our 12 big stores have been packed ever since opening day. Last year's crowds were nothing compared to this season's jam. Of course, our prices are lower than in other years because the increased volume of business enables us to take a smaller profit on each sale; but one of the main features of this big bargain event is the fact that you can buy one piece or a complete outfit without paying a penny down—you don't need a dime in your pocket to buy furniture at this sale and we give you two full years to complete your payments on any purchases you make. We also give you the benefits of our Free Savings Bank Account Plan on all your purchases. This plan gives you an additional discount of $1.00 for every $10.00 worth you buy. The money is deposited to your credit in your own name with the Chicago City Bank & Trust Co. and the bank is instructed to turn the cash over to you as soon as you have completed six monthly payments on your account. Ask about this plan when you call or inquire about it at the bank's offices.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

ZIP COON ate supper with me last night and afterwards he told me a story. Here it is as he told it to me:

His brother, Jim Coon, lives just over the hill and he's a great fisherman. Every time he passes Crafty Fox's den on his way to fish he sings out: "Hey, Crafty, old top, this is a great day for the fish to bite. Why don't you cut yourself a pole and come along? I'll show you how to hook up the nicest mess of wiggly shiners you ever clapped your eyes on."

He does not really want Crafty to come with him. He just says it to tease him.

He would go whistling down the road.

"Go chase yourself," snaps back Crafty. "You can't teach me how to fish. I knew before you were born."

"All right," grins brother Jim. "I'll bet you don't know how to put a worm on a hook and you can't tell whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing up your bait." Then he would go whistling down the road.

One day when he came to the lake he dropped his line into the water and the first bite—what do you think he pulled up? Old Tommy Turtle. Then Jim began to tease him.

"I won't let you go, Tommy, unless you pomise me you'll clean up all that old junk lying around the bottom of this fishing hole."

"I promise," said Tommy. "Just let me get back into the water and I'll move all that junk out of the way. I promise."

So kerplunk! Back he dived.

"Get out of here," he barked. "This is my fishing ground and all the fish in it are mine."

"Excuse me for living," answered Brother Jim and moved away to the other side of the hole.

"YOU say I can't fish, hey?" sang out Crafty. "That I don't know whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing my bait, hey? Well, I'll show you."

He dropped his line into the water and the end of his pole began to twitch and bob up and down.

"A bite," he yelled. "A big bite. Now watch me, Jim Coon."

Up came an old busted shoe.

He pulled and pulled with all his might and at last up came an—old busted shoe.

Jim began to holler. "My, my, what a lovely shiner you caught."

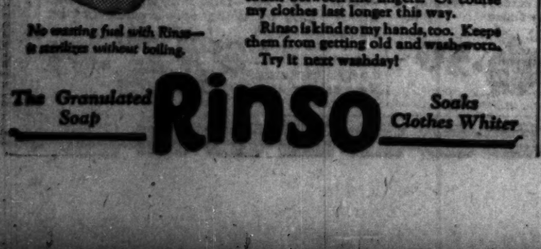
Crafty was mad. Into the water went his hook and line. Yank! Another bite. He pulled and pulled and up came an old pair of torn breeches.

Crafty was so mad he began to snort. Just then another jerk came on the line and he pulled up an old pair of suspenders.

ALL that afternoon he did nothing but pull up bits of junk. Finally he was so mad he couldn't stand it any longer. He broke his pole in two and flung it in the lake.

"Don't ever say fish to me again, Jim Coon, or I'll beat you to a frazzle."

Then he staggered home. He was all tuckered out.



Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me.

Brother Jim went over to look at the pile of junk and suddenly he began to laugh, for there was old Tommy Turtle poking his head out of the water.

"I guess I got it all cleared up, Jim Coon. There isn't any more down there. Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me."

He blew a few bubbles and disappeared.

Then Jim rolled around on the bank and nearly burst with laughter because he knew now why Crafty Fox had not caught any fish.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the cicada, sometimes called the locust, should live in the ground for seventeen years as a grub, clinging to the root of some tree and sucking sap from it, and then, some day, should turn loose, dig its way to the outer air and transform into the noisiest insect in the world.

The cicadas come out of the ground as grubs. They crawl hurriedly up the nearest bush, hunch up their backs and burst open their grub jackets. Then the sturdy, full grown cicada comes out, as big as a man's thumb. It is radiant, equipped with whirring wings, and given to much noise. Everybody is familiar with the rasping noise that the American cicada sets up. Yet it is only the male that is noisy. He has a bit of dry membrane like a drum head that he uses for the purpose. He pushes it in and out rapidly. He makes a noise on the same principle as the automobile horn.

It is little trouble on summer days to find, hanging on the bushes along the roadside the shells from which these cicadas have come. Often, also, it is easy to find pairs of cicada lovers. They take their places side by side on the limb of a tree. There they sit through the summer day and night, the female passive, the male beating his endless serenade.

The female cuts a slit in the bark of the tree and lays her eggs. After a while these hatch out into funny looking little worm like things. These crawl out to the end of a limb and jump off. They fall upon the ground and dig in. They seize some friendly root and hang on. They are down for seventeen years. In most cases whole swarms go down at a time, set their alarm clocks for seventeen years, and all come up again at almost the same moment, when that time has passed. These are called seventeen year locusts. There are irregulars in the ranks, however, that appear at irregular intervals. But among the wierdest marvels of nature are these huge swarms that come to light but once in seventeen years.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

My little cousin, aged 3, saw a dog crossing the street the other day and said to me: "That dog is crossing the street without his mother."

Then on further thought, she said: "But it's all right; he looked both ways."
E. W.

Robert, my little next door friend, always kept a close watch on me when I went to get the car out, but his mother had told him he must never ask me to take him riding.

One day, seeing him with his hat and coat all on and standing near the hedge, I said brightly, "Well, Robert, are you going somewhere today?"

"O, yes," he answered at once, then added, "I fink I is, but I isn't asked yet."
B. R.

Tommy went to the hospital to see mother and the new baby sister. When his visit was over and he picked up his cap to leave the baby awoke and cried.

"Boy!" exclaimed Tommy proudly, "listen to her holler 'cause I gotta go!"

No soaking first with Rinso—it sterilizes without boiling.

I'VE told all my neighbors about it, it's so wonderful! No hard rubbing or scrubbing, no boiling—just the simple matter of soaking the week's wash in safe, creamy, sterilizing suds.

Rinso suds! That's the whole secret. Rinso makes the water soft and sudsy all through—and the dirt and stains float right off by themselves!

Even cuffs, hems and edges that always had to be scrubbed until they were frayed, now come snowy with just a touch between the fingers. Of course my clothes last longer this way.

Rinso is kind to my hands, too. Keeps them from getting old and washwornn. Try it next washday!

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

Mary had a conscience, one
That was as chill as snow.
And everywhere that Mary went
It horned right in. You know!

SONG FOR THE SENTIMENTAL.

She scorned to wed a millionaire
And make a loveless match.
She lost him to a debutante
Who made a clever snatch.

Now Mary has to realize
—Of toil she's had her fill—
If working girls won't wed for cash.
Some thrifty heiress will.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEMORIAL.

Once, when one lost her sturdy oak
She wore black widow's veiling;
But even styles in mourning change,
A fact there's no assailing.
Though I've lost Jack I wear no weeds,
Crêpe bands would be bologny,
His memory is kept alive
By checks for alimony.

GROUNDS FOR MARRIAGE.

O, I am jilting Jerry and
Dear Jerry's jilting me.
We do not lack affection, just Compatibility.

For Jerry owns a motor boat
And I prefer a yawl;
I do the old time breast stroke; he
Performs that awkward crawl.

He does not like the car I drive;
I scorn his cigarets;
The tunes that raise my temperature
Are ones that he forgets.

And so we part regretfully
And feel that life's a botch.
'Tis not enough to wed upon
A mutual hate of—Scotch.

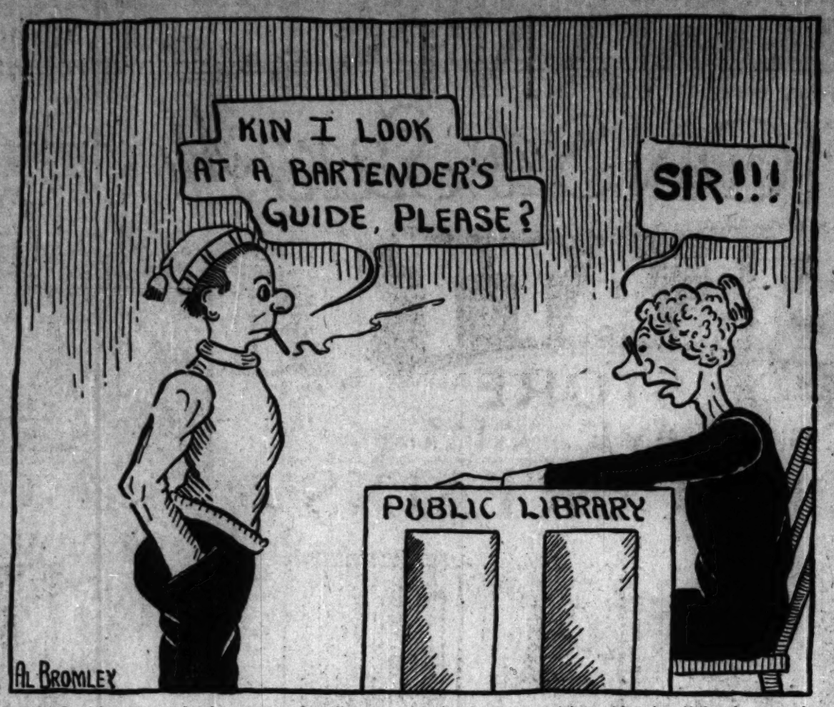
HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

Al Wastes An Afternoon In the Public Library



YESTERDAY I walked into the public library an' inquired kood I please look at a bartender's guide. The elderly squaw behind the desk elevates both evebrows an' informs me that such low literature is not carried in stock.

"Well," sez I, "have yew any book wich will tell me the exact amount uv horse power wich a raisin contains?"

"Not that I am aware uv," sez old Nokomis, with a withering glance.

"Sum bimbo ought to write such a book," sez I, "because wen one raisin meets more raisins in the same batch, the result seems to be more er less uv a gamble. Sumtimes they act sociable but jist as often they pull the answer to 'Wen Greek Meets Greek.' Yup, sum hombre shood tell the answer to that important query, 'How Many Raisins Constitute A Riot?'"

HE GETS A RISE

"I am afraid we have no books wich will assist yew," sez Father Time's mother-in-law.

"Well," sez I, "even yer own personal opinion wood be appreciated. In uther words, as one home brew hound to another, how many raisins wood yew put——"

"SIR!!!!" howls the female antique, rising to her feet like a whale kumming to the surface.

"O, alrite, alrite," sez I; "far be it frum me to ask anybody to break loose frum their own recipe gratis. I'll buy the information off yuh. Write it down on a hunk uv paper so I can't forget it."

The Human Antique registers Despair an' flops back into her seat with a racket resembling the fall uv Rome. At this moment in breezes Murphy the cop, wich seems to relieve her, because she straightens up again with a triumphant smirk.

"Officer," sez the Flapper uv 1812, "this impertinent creature had the audacity to kum into this highly respectable institution an' inquire about raisins, liquor recipes, home brew, an' other such vulgar subjects wich are disagreeable to a respectable lady like myself. I wish yew wood take care uv him!"

"I can't take care uv him," sez Murphy, lookin' kinda helpless; "I'd like to help him, alrite, but the truth is, I aint so good myself at making that stuff. My last batch turned out terrible——"

"No, no, no!" squawks the Dignified Relic, "yew don't seem to understand! This person wuz very insulting! He asked me to give him my own personal recipe for the vile stuff! I wuz never so astounded in——"

"I didn't ask her to give it—I offered to buy it!" sez I.

"Yes, that's it," howls her; "he offered to buy my own personal recipe for——"

"Oho!" snorts Murphy; "now I git the idea! So now he refuses to pay, huh? Why, the crook!" He turned to me. "Lissen," sez he, "give the lady wot yew promised to pay her for the information she passed out!"

The squaw behind the desk turned blue in the face an' almost swallowed her false teeth. Then she separated herself frum a boatload uv adjectives wich, in her opinion, described a few uv the defects uv the police force, after wich she announced in great indignation that she hadn't told me nothing at all.

OFF GOES CHAPEAU

"Well, then, wot's all the howling for?" sez Murphy, gitting real peeved. "If yew aint told him nothing, he don't owe yew nothing!"

This starts a verbal thunderstorm, so I walks over an' sits down at a table in the reading room. Wen Mrs. Methuselah had finished telling Murphy wot she thought of him in 25,000 words, he retaliated by passing out his un-biased opinion uv her in 4 languages, after wich he left the Castle Uv Knowledge an' wandered down the street still wondering wot the argument wuz all about. Old Rain-In-The-Face snapped her false teeth together an' looked in my direction for sumthing to wall about.

"Fair enough," sez I, crawling out frum under my chapeau, "'Wen in Rome, do as the dagoes do.'"

I picked up a book wot gives the population uv every city in the United States an' Tennessee. This book wuz uv a very instructive nature, in fact, all a person had to do wuz use this particular volume as an authority, an' he wood be given his choice uv the Poor House or a Nut College. According to it, Chicago has a population uv 835,212. The page wich contained the copyright date wuz missing, so I trots up to the desk.

"Wen wuz this book published?" I asks.

"I don't know," sez she; "the date is missing. I suppose sum malicious person has stolen that particular page."

"Probably an autograph collector," sez I; "I have an idea that he took it because it read: 'This book belongs to Geo. Washington.'"

Jist then a hombre kums into the joint an' inquires if they have any law books.

INTERESTING BOOKS

"Yes," sez the girl friend, "we have an Illinois Statute; I think the date is 1885."

"How nise!" squawks the new customer; "yew otta take it out to the cemetary an' cremate it. It wood be a great help to me, I'm sure, because the only law in that volume wich is still in existence is: 'Thou Shall Not Marry More Than One Woman At A Time.'"

In the meantime I found a copy uv Uncle Tom's Cabin under "Recent Fiction." This got quite a snicker out uv me, so Madam X invited me to freeze my face.

"If yew kin git such a loud grin out uv such a sad, touching story as Uncle Tom's Cabin, I fear this place will ring with riotous laughter if yew ever set eyes on that side-splitting volume uv humor, 'The Fort Dearborn Massacre,' sez she.

"I still wish yew had a bartender's guide," sez I, "because I'm worried——"

"Isn't there any other book yew wood be willing to look at?" sez she; "sumthing uv an intellectual nature?"

"Well, there is another book I woodn't mind glancing at," sez I; "it's called 'The Life An' Death Uv Tracy, The Outlaw, With Actual Photographs Taken In The Morgue.' Drag it out an' I'll see if the pictures interest me."

Mrs. Methuselah threw her hands in the direction uv the comets, an' broke loose with a gasp uv horror, so I figured that maybe this particular work aint regarded as a classic.

"Have yew any travel books?" sez I.

"Well," sez she, "I wood be tempted to give yew any book in this library if yew wood only take yer hat an' travel! I can't git over the idea uv yew kumming into this place an' asking a perfectly respectable lady questions about liquor, bartender's guides, an' the like. I otta have yew arrested, in fact I wood have had yew arrested if that police officer had as much intelligence as an ordinary angle-worm!"

IT WUZ RAINING

"Yew needn't shed any grief-water about it," sez I, gittin' peeved; "I only came in here in the first place because it wuz raining. It will be raining a helluva lot harder before I kum in again. Adios, so long, good bye, an' farewell, to say nothing uv auf wiedersehen, au revoir, bon voyage, an' Departure plus Exit. I'll see yew again wen dinosaurs run wild on Main street!" An' so saying good afternoon, I started to leave, but wuz interrupted by the reappearance uv Murphy the cop.

"Lady," sez Murphy to the female calamity, "I've bin talking it over with the Chief, an' we have agreed that yew haven't got any case against this fellow. In the first place, yew didn't have any right to tell him anything about home brew recipes, because that aint connected with yer work here! In the second place, yew aint got no witnesses to prove that yew gave him this information, an' in the third place, I don't see how yew kin collect the money he offered to pay yew, because he says——"

OOOF! OOOF!

Mrs. Methuselah reached under her desk an' came up with a handful uv books. She put one right over the plate, an' Murphy howls "Ooof!" The next throw wuz high an' a trifle wide, followed by 2 more wich any umpire on earth wood have called Strikes, because I got both uv them in the stummick.

Then I got dam good an' sore, because I noticed that both the books wich had slapped me on the bread-pan were labeled: BARTENDER'S GUIDE.

THE FARMER'S CHAMPION.

Gray Silver of the American Farm Bureau federation complained bitterly at a luncheon on the George Washington of the high prices the farmer pays and the low prices he receives.

A bank president from New York interrupted Mr. Silver rather contemptuously.

"Why the deuce," he said, "are you always everlastingly laying bare the farmer's wrongs?"

Mr. Silver rapped the table with his fist.

"Because," he thundered, "I want them redressed."—Detroit Free Press.

LADIES IN CRIME

Bernice Zalimas—Two Trials and Out

Gets 14 Years Dressed in Mourning, but Gets Out in Gay Clothing

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

THE first time she went to trial Bernice Zalimas, plump and pretty Lithuanian cloak model, wore all black, for wasn't she in mourning for her husband, Dominick, even though it was for his murder that she was being tried? She fainted often, and was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Then the Supreme court remanded the case back for a new trial.

The second time she sat in court, Bernice, her widow's grief somewhat assuaged, wore those golden shades that combine happily with golden hair. She smiled more than she swooned. She was acquitted.

HONEYMOON TRAGEDY

From the very beginning, when the authorities first began to hint that this bride of four months had given arsenic to her husband, that she might be fancy free for other loves, Bernice had fashioned her defense, passionately, out of an indictment of her own Lithuanian neighbors in the vicinity of South Halsted and 48th streets.

"When any one dies suddenly in the Lithuanian neighborhood," the 23 year old bride had said, and kept on saying, "all the old women have a grand time making new gossip by stirring up rumors of murder. And when the wife is young and pretty and blonde she has no chance to escape being accused of killing her husband."

Officially, Dominick died of pneumonia and nephritis. The doctor summoned to the honeymoon flat at 4936 South Loomis avenue some four hours after Dominick was dead signed the death certificate this wise. That was on Nov. 18, 1924. Then the tiny whispers began to filter their way in and out of the neighborhood. They gathered momentum, and presently, on the first day of December, Dr. Irving Porges, a coroner's physician, was sent out to the house. The question mark which the city investigators thrust up was, "How could the physician, hastily summoned after Zalimas' death, have had opportunity to make the proper diagnosis?" The grave was opened; the dead man's vital organs were removed. A few days more, and Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's chemist, announced his findings:

"Enough arsenic to kill ten people."

TONGUES BEGIN TO WAG

Then the busy tongues began to wag in excited Lithuanian syllables. The old wives recalled Bernice's affection for two or three castoff suitors, especially the baker who came to deliver a dozen rolls and tarried long. They recollected how stormy had been the honeymoon. They remembered the separation of the newly wedded pair, and a reconciliation, shortly before the husband's death.

A little girl told what she said she knew of the comely blonde's stolen kisses with the visiting bakery man. A druggist searched his records to find that a Mrs. Zalimas had purchased arsenic from him.

And the police went out and brought Mrs. Zalimas back to jail.

Bernice was about a perfect 42, large, buxom. But her yellow hair, piled high on her head, her pink cheeks, and her accent made of the obscure cloak model, a pivot figure over at the jail. She told how all her life she had wanted to get ahead, and in the busy days that followed it seemed as if she had succeeded in a way of which she had never dreamed.

While neighbors were over in the Criminal court telling the prosecutors their version of the suspicious circumstances of Dominick's taking off, Bernice, from behind the bars, was growing autobiographical.

QUITE A LINGUIST

"I came from Lithuania when I was eight years old, and studied English in school. I speak also the Polish, the Russian and the Bohemian, as well as the Lithuanian. I went to work in a soap factory. I got to be assistant forelady. But a soap factory's no place for a girl with, what you call it, ambition.

"So I looked around and I got a job selling pretty dresses in a store. Those neighbor women, O, how they hated me when I left the factory. Jealous, they were.

"I bought myself a few dresses cheap, but they were pretty. Yes, and some silk stockings. I lived in the Lithuanian neighborhood with pa and ma. But I didn't speak to the neighbors. I knew better. I knew they didn't like me and they wanted to get something on me. Ma died three years ago, and so when I married Dominick we stayed on in the house with pa."

More specifically, on the charge that she had fed her bridegroom arsenic soup, Bernice made emphatic denial. First, that she hadn't done it; second, that the neighbors always try to frame a young widow, especially if they are jealous of her yellow hair and her black silk stockings; and, third, that she was too smart to have got herself caught if she had done it.

COULD HAVE ESCAPED

"If I'd a-killed him," she declared, "I had two weeks in which to get away, and they'd a-never got me. Why, I had the post-mortem performed myself, to shut up those tongues of the old gossips."

But the post-mortem report that one-tenth of a grain of arsenic had been found, coupled with the stories the others were telling the investigators over in the Criminal court, held Bernice to the grand jury, and a few weeks later she was indicted for murder.

All the time she protested that her husband, who was a carpenter for the Pullman company by days and a practicing naprapath by nights, was forever "fussing with herbs and medicines" and must have taken arsenical poison by mistake.

Somebody found a two pound box of arsenic in the attic of her home. Somebody else, a little ten year old Anna Skberecki, told of visiting Bernice and always being told to run away and play when Leo Kalinowski, the affectionate baker, came with the day's quota of bread and rolls. Once, Anna was sure, she had seen the two hugging and kissing.

TROUBLE PATCHED UP

These two pieces of evidence, together with the coroner's report were sufficient to the men on the grand jury. They indicted her for murder.

Then, to add his contribution, came Bruno, brother of the dead man. He told how Dominick and the coy but plump Bernice had been married on Independence day that same year, 1925. The storms had not been long in coming. On Oct. 7 the two separated. Several weeks later, Bruno said, he accompanied his brother to the office of an attorney to start divorce proceedings against the bride. Next day Dominick, accompanied this time by two brothers, went to tell Bernice what he was about to do.

"He was in there a long time," said Bruno, "and when he came out, he told us to go away, that everything was patched up, and there would be no divorce. We went."

The following night, so the story went on, Dominick telephoned his wife that he was ill, had pains in the chest and stomach; that the agony had come on just after he had eaten a nice bowl of soup at dinner that evening. Two days more—it is Nov. 14 now—he telephoned Bruno, so Bruno told the authorities, that the reconciliation business was all off and that he purposed to start divorce proceedings at once. He asked Bruno to come over and talk things over. Bruno didn't hurry. Four days passed, and the morning of the 18th Bruno learned that Dominick was dead.

That was the foundation upon which Assistant State's Attorneys Louis Gciman and Louis Blumenthal built their case.

YES, SHE'S FAT

Bernice took the stand. Yes, she was fat. But she was pretty. In response to the questionings of her attorney, Eugene McGarry, she told of her wedding. There were four merry days of "feasting" she explained.

As for Leo, the baker, the ex-suitor, why "of course I kissed him. All men kiss the bride," and that was the end of that.

When the questions touched the death scenes, Bernice just couldn't stand it. She sobbed and cried and wept, until the prosecutors were ready to blind-fold the jury and muffle their ears. Then she took out a handkerchief to wipe her eyes, and the fragrance of heliotrope perfume wafted its soft way down to the jury box. So the judge adjourned the session and the twelve good men and true were hurried out into an ante room to smoke black cigars and forget the heliotrope and the tears.

Next day there were more tears. This time grief so swept her body that she flopped around on the chair, and in the confusion her big picture hat fell off. But she lost nothing by the accident, for the jury had an opportunity to glimpse a curling mass of yellow hair.

14 YEARS IN JOLIET

The last day of the trial, when Attorney McGarry was finishing his plea for her innocence, Bernice fainted. It took five men to carry her into the judge's chambers, but when she came to she gave unto each a long smile.

The jury, that May day, listened intently as the prosecutors urged them not to let a pretty face and a few tears sway them. They deliberated three hours and thirty-five minutes. Then the foreman told the court that the twelve had found her guilty and sentenced her to 14 years in the penitentiary.

She didn't faint this time. She sprawled on her father's shoulder, and cried out:

"O, what can I say? Why have they condemned me so? God knows I am innocent of this terrible charge."

Next day, over in the jail, still puzzled because she had not been sent out, number 33, in the list of ladies tried for murder and acquitted, Bernice said this:

"I loved my husband and I always thought so much of the laws of this country. But now I can't love my husband nor the country. Why, I asked for the post-mortem. He was always drinking herb medicine; probably he mixed it wrong. But I'll get out yet, because I am innocent."

SMIRCH ON FAIR NAME

Then she explained fervently that what really hurt was not the thought of spending 14 years in jail, but the smirch on her fair name. Only, she could just as well dispense with the 14 year sentence, too.

The following August Bernice filed a suit in the Superior court to collect her husband's insurance. That she wanted to use it to pay her expenses for her second trial for his murder did not apparently strike her as ironic. It was a nice problem she had before her. Dominick was insured for $5,000. But if he met death by accidental or violent means then the insurance money doubled. She wanted the $10,000, but she couldn't say that his death was violent. For she needed the money to prove just the opposite. She maintained that death was accidental and that the $10,000 was hers by right and reason.

In the midst of these deliberations the Supreme court granted her a stay of sentence, then a new trial, on the grounds of a technical flaw in the admission of evidence by the druggist who said he had sold arsenic to a Mrs. Zalimas, but wouldn't identify her as the Mrs. Zalimas on trial.

In January, 1926, she was granted bail and went to a hospital for a while. By the spring of the year she was rested, slimmer, and had some pretty new clothes. Her year of mourning was up, and she burst forth in gay colors.

She took the stand. Attorney McGarry asked his client, "Did you ever administer poison to your husband?"

I DIDN'T DO IT!

Then things began to happen in that courtroom. Bernice cut swaths in the air with her hands. Her body swayed back and forth. In a frenzy of screams she yelled out, "I didn't do it! Why should I do it? I swear to Almighty God I didn't do it!"

Then she swooned and court was temporarily adjourned.

Once again the jury went out. This time they stayed out two hours and a half. Once again they filed in. This time the foreman announced that the twelve had found Bernice Zalimas not guilty.

"Thank God, thank God" sang out the exuberant Bernice, and she started on a hugging and kissing pilgrimage. She made for the jury box. She grabbed the first man in line. He was so tiny and she was still so buxom. She swung on to him, she flung her arms about his neck; she planted a kiss on his cheek. He nearly lost his balance, he teetered, he braced himself against her. And he blushed a deep red.

Number two, number three, number four, and on until seven jurors had been kissed. I saw a tall thin man, near the back, dodge toward the door as he murmured to his companion, "I'm gonna get out of this."

Four others followed suit. Bernice, calmer now, gave out her official pean of thanks.

"I prayed to God, and He answered my prayer. Now I have got justice and I am going to leave Chicago for a while and try to forget. I may go to New York, perhaps to Europe."

All ladies acquitted of murder predict they are going to go to Europe to try to forget. I have never yet heard of one who really got much farther than Indiana.

No, Bernice didn't go to Europe.

She got married. Not to Leo, the baker. But to Joseph Patunis of Chicago, and they are living happily.

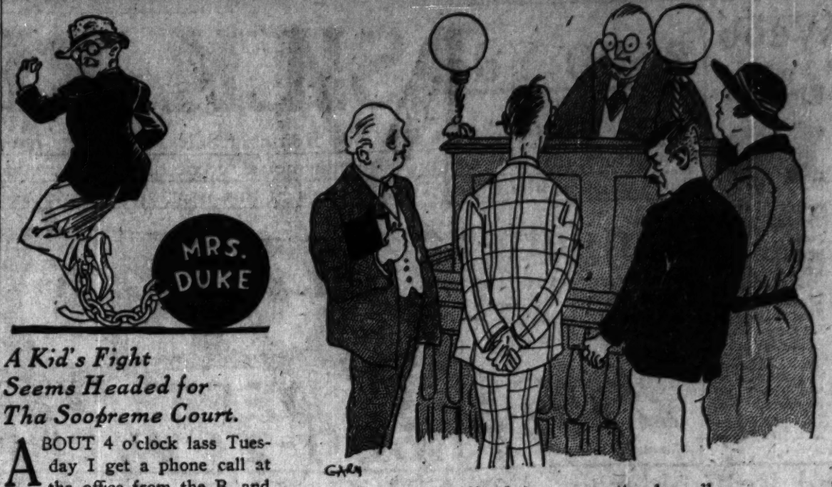
THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak



There's talk of putting me in tha cellar.

A Kid's Fight Seems Headed for Tha Soopreme Court.

ABOUT 4 o'clock lass Tuesday I get a phone call at tha office from the B. and C. From tha way she talks I could tell she was all excited an fer a minute I didn' know whether our youngster had swallowed a safety pin or tha parlor rug. What she wants to know is could I come right home on account she's had a helova row with the janitor. I told her that tha boss was either shootin rotten golf or his wife must of spent more than he expected on tha new Easter outfit and that if I asked him to get off earlier he might tell me to make it permanent. Ennyway I said fer her to light the gas oven and I would speak to the czar when I got home.

'NOTHER FIGHT

Then I get informed it aint tha heat this time but that our youngster and his was playing in tha yard and his kid socks ours over tha eye with a stick and that she saw tha whole thing from our back porch. Incidentally she quite fergot to mention tha fact that our angel child started tha rumpuss by rocking his kid to sleep with a good sized rock which landed somewhere between his adams apple. To hear tha B. and C.'s side of tha case, our Precious was showing the rock to the lad and for some reezon or other it slipped outen her hand.

Ennyway when I get home, tha story is gone over again and from the size of our offspring's eye, tha implement used could have been nothin less than a garbage can or maybe a cupple dozen bed slats. I immediately beat it downstairs to find out what tha hell was tha big idea and instead of being treated like a gentleman, this bohunk drags out his Olaf an shows me tha damage what was done. Outside of a cupple broken teeth and a bloody nose tha child was in perfect condition.

My idea was to make a suggestion in the way of not lettin tha kids play together again, even apologize and maybe split a bottle of brew with him, thereby creating a peace treaty. Instead of all this, he's got fire in his eye an he calls me a dirty name in Swedish an shoves me off his stoop. Well, after sizing up his 5 feet 2 and about 102 pounds I decide that it takes two to make a battle an I busted him on the chin. He went down like a ton of bricks and for fear he might come back to life suddenly and reciprocate I beat it up tha steps.

COMFORT

I musta got up to tha 4th or 5th step when I get a clout in tha middle of my back with what I thought was either a ice box or a set of dining room furniture. What happened was, his ole lady, who weighs about 240 and has got a arm like a side of beef, was watchin tha fracas, and after I got in with my haymaker she's all set to go, with tha business end of a vacuum cleaner.

I'm too much of a gentleman to ever lay my hands on a woman. If I ever do forget myself, I'm certainly not gonna tackle one with her dimensions. When I got back up to our flat I was in such splendid shape that when I tried to eat, tha back of my neck was holding a contest to see whether it could produce more pain than my ankles. The B. and C. witnessed tha entire proceedings from are porch and puts her arm around me an says as how manly I was and that she certainly was proud of me. A bottle of linament wood of done me a damn site more good.

DUNT ANSWER

Ennyway I had to give up tha idea of eatin and after rubbing a ½ pint of alcohol on tha outside and about a pint on tha inside, I went to bed. After tossing fer about three hours and finally dozing off, tha damn door bell started to ring. Tha first thought what struck my mind was that tha Efficiency Engineer of the Furnace Department had dug up a few of his cousins and was preparing to start a New Customer Campaign for our local undertaker.

Well, we didn' answer tha bell and pretty soon two handsome Norwegians by the name of Clancy and Faherty start pounding gently on tha back door with either a telegraph pole or a railroad tie. We got a glass top on tha door and after lighting tha kitchin light, I see one of these dicks has got a notice in his hand. He put it against tha glass, and on top in very beautiful Gothic type it says, "Warrant," further down there was somethin about "Deliver the Body," "Salt an Battery," "Party of tha 1st part," and a lotta other damn fool stuff. Of course I wasn't expecting that they was bringing a invitation to be present at tha King's Court instead of a police court, but they certainly might of waited until morning.

When I opened tha door I figgerred maybe by buying these dicks a couple of shots and handing them a little bull they would shove matters off till tha next day. To my great surprise they was very polite as they answered me back by sayin, "Getchyure hat'n coat." I certainly didn' expect that kind of treatment cause they was such perfect gentlemen. They removed their hats everytime their heads itched.

Can ya imagine me with a couple hundred fractured ribs, two or three headaches, and tha B. and C. crying? Guess she figgerred she'd hafta go back to work until my 20 years was up. Ennyway when we get to tha station there's talk of putting me in tha cellar, generally when anybody invites me into their cellars I can make it in nothing flat, but I wasn't so damn anxious this time even if tha desk sargeant did call it a jug.

About this time I figger I got some rights as a citizen an I [illegible] how could a guy out an I'm [illegible] wood hafta get a bondsman. [illegible] bought some bonds once in a [illegible] and Loan Ass'n, but for tha life of me I couldn' remember tha guy's name what I bought 'em from. Just then some bozo steps up and slips me a card which reads "Professional [illegible] man." He informs me that for [illegible] bucks he will go my bond. I [illegible] figger out as to why I should get [illegible] bird twenty, cause tha case was [illegible] serious, and maybe I could get [illegible] amateur bondsman for ten. It [illegible] there aint no amateurs in [illegible] ennymore since Red Grange and [illegible] rest have joined up so I tole him [illegible] to fix it up and I wood get a [illegible] 20 iron men for him by the next [illegible] ing, as they was gonna try the [illegible] then, and I was tole to be there [illegible] sharp.

CHARLIE GOODMAN, ESQ.

I got to work extra early [illegible] xplained tha matter to the boss and [illegible] called up a lawyer friend by the [illegible] of Charlie Goodman Esq. Right [illegible] tha, bat I figgerred any guy by [illegible] name of Esq. couldn' be much [illegible] on tha way over to the court [illegible] we not only got a cinch case but [illegible] we will turn around and sue [illegible] plaintiff for fifty thousand bucks. [illegible] any janitor can save that much [illegible] I will make application to their [illegible] an take a course in tha profession.

I was tole to be at tha court at [illegible] sharp and as they are very punctual [illegible] the case was called at half past [illegible] Tha High Priest of tha Royal Gorilla [illegible] Can brought in 10 witnesses and [illegible] sure as I'm a foot high nobody [illegible] tha fracas exceptin his ole lady. [illegible] he had what was called character [illegible] nesses. If any one of them had [illegible] character, I'm a damn poor judge [illegible] people. All of a sudden his [illegible] hollers out, "Bakrak Vs Jorgenson" [illegible] an we all walked up. After Jorgie [illegible] plained as how I had a revolver in [illegible] hand and a knife in the other [illegible] showed tha judge all his witnesses [illegible] his wife tells the judge that her husband was so excited that he [illegible] thought it was a revolver. She didn't [illegible] it was a shot gun.

25 AND COSTS

Our turn came next and when the judge sees my lawyer deposit 7 or 8 books on the railing he assumes we looked to me like a dirty look and quoting cases what happened as far back as 600 B. C. to tha present day the judge admitted he certainly had a smart lawyer and that the verdict was 25 dollars and costs.

I guess from the way the case was handled I shood be lucky I didn't get life. Well, we paid the $41.60, but I aint heard the last of it, even if I hafta take the case to tha supreme court. If they don't reverse the verdict, there's gonna be a vacant flat in our building and my future address gonna be some street in Russia.

The Ol' White Mule, It Ain't What It Usta Be!

Hootch Sippers Herein Are Warned to Avoid the South!

By Edward Burns

CHICAGOANS who sometimes complain of the quality of the bootleg merchandise they are forced to take should try the stuff the very best people are content to drink throughout the section of these United States which lies between the Bahama-Florida and the Mex-Tex border smuggling zones. The contrast thus afforded surely would convince the most lukewarm Chicago booster that, in so far as sipping is concerned, Chicago isn't getting such a bad break after all.

This is written after a two weeks' trip in Texas, which started and ended in north central Louisiana and included stops on the Oklahoma-Texas and the Arkansas-Texas borders. This region properly is known as the corn whisky belt of the United States.

EASY TO GET

I am too loyal to my Chicago bootlegger friends and their private stocks to undertake to drink any of the concoctions produced in this corn likker belt, but since in recent weeks I have taken the pose as a sort of metropolitan section bootlegger expert, I have felt it my duty to the constant readers to make a rather exhaustive survey and study of the southern booze problem. I now am prepared to claim, with a considerable degree of confidence, the following:

I can, within an hour after arrival in 80 per cent of the towns and cities of Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma, purchase for a sum ranging from $3 to $15 one gallon of corn whisky, or an intoxicating concoction of high voltage purported to be corn whisky.

In the foregoing it will be noticed, I mention only four southern states. I understand, however, that conditions are identical in Mississippi, Alabama, and most parts of Georgia. I exclude these states in my claim, however, for lack of first hand knowledge.

A TERRIFIC ODOR

Corn whisky—white mule—as it was made in the days before national prohibition had been tried out, was the powerful product of the mountain stills, and every jug was a masterpiece of chemical purity. Even the best of the stuff had a terrific odor. But a drinker always could be assured that the dynamite he was swallowing was chemically pure and carried a little age.

But today the bootleggers, all of whom seem to be inveterate tinkerers, are fooling with the stuff. In trying to tone down the odor, they destroy the potability of the product. And the only time it has to age is the day or so between the moment it is jugged off at the still and the hour when the potential suicide purchases it.

Despite the poisonous character of the present day white mule, southerners and visitors from the north continue to think they have something if they can but kill the odor.

Oranges, used universally in the north to temper bad drug store gin, are the first guess of the transient northerner. Orange juice won't tease white mule.

Natives who haven't learned to take their poison straight employ prune juice. If Mr. Volstead could be made to take one big gulp of corn whisky mixed with prune juice, he probably would be willing to take back everything he ever wrote.

FRUIT JAR CONTAINERS

The effects of southern corn whisky are not unlike those produced by Chicago moonshine. The southern gentleman drinking corn loses control of his muscular faculties before his mentality becomes fogged. As he proceeds he grows belligerent and isn't the least like the chevaliers we northern boys used to be told about when mint juleps and absinthe frappés were reputed to be the sole southern beverages.

There's one thing in favor of corn whisky. The bootleggers don't follow their northern brothers' technique and try to merchandise it as pre-war bourbon or Scotch just off of rum row. When you're buying corn whisky that's what you're buying, and your only gamble is on the age and quality of the mule, as such.

It is generally sold in gallon lots, but, instead of the historic jug of Revenooer lore, it is delivered in two-quart fruit jars. I have been unable to discover the reason for abandoning the traditional receptacles, but it probably is due to the aggressiveness of the fruit jar salesmen, who regularly call on the trade throughout the south.

In an effort to circumvent the olfactory curse possessed by corn whisky, the more progressive bootleggers are now marketing a product manufactured out of rye instead of corn mash. While this does not possess many of the characteristics of Canadian Club and the other standard rye whiskies, it does not have the overwhelming stench of corn whisky. At present the rye moon is being sold in plain pints at prices averaging about $2.50 a pint. This distillation, when diluted in ginger ale, makes a passable beverage. Such highballs produce about as much action as the usual rye or bourbon highball. I predict that if the rye grain holds out, the rye moon will make great inroads on the field of corn likker, particularly at bridge parties and other more or less elite functions in the south.

GULLIBLE SOUTHERNERS

When they drift away from the corn and rye whisky, southerners are more gullible in their liquor transactions then even the average Chicago boot and shoe or suit and cloak drummer. Apparently they believe anything that's told them about likker. While I know it isn't nice to talk about one's host or to look a gift horse in the mouth, I'll risk the breach of etiquette to recite an incident which I observed recently at a dinner given in one of the larger southern cities.

The host explained to his guests that he didn't have a great deal to drink but that which he did have should be a treat to all those present. He then unveiled a large punch bowl which threw forth that licorice odor familiar to all persons who have drunk absinthe, ojen cocktails, etc. Before instructing a servant to serve the punch, the host explained that an ingenious young man in his employ had been down to New Orleans some months before and, by stealthily making the right connections, had been able to get a line on some real old absinthe reputed to have been stolen from the famous stocks of the Old Absinthe house, recently and reluctantly padlocked by government officials.

ORDINARY ARAK

Not all of the basic part of the punch had been used in the mixture and later in the evening I had an opportunity to get hold of the bottle unobtrusively and inspect its contents.

As I had suspected, it was nothing more than a concoction well known to Chicago drinkers under a variety of names, among them arak, Turkish whisky, synthetic anisette, etc. It is made in much the same manner as synthetic gin except that oil of anise is used instead of juniper essence.

Incidentally, if any one is inclined to be a chemist he enjoys making arak more than gin because of the peculiar chemical reactions which make it impossible to get the wrong proportions of alcohol and distilled water, a mistake common with gin makers. In making arak you mix your oil of anise and your alcohol (the law prevents the printing of recipes, therefore the proportions can not be given here). Then you start pouring in the distilled water. You pour until the saturation point is reached. This is shown by the sudden clouding of the liquid, which makes it milky if you should inadvertently continue to pour. To clear it up you pour in more alky. When it is thus balanced you have the kind of absinthe the young man smuggled back from New Orleans.

THE TEXAS ATTITUDE

Texas, as most people know, is the state where it is a felony to play pool or billiards in a public place. It also is a crime to play cards on a train passing through Texas. It therefore is an interesting study in contrasts to observe the Texan attitude toward the Volstead act.

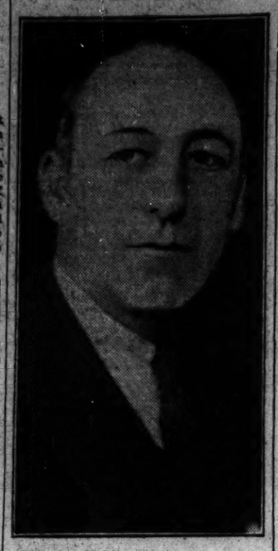
While I was in Dallas two colored women were haled into federal court for manufacturing and selling a large quantity of high powered beer. Their establishment had been raided and in addition to the finished product, a quantity of beer mash was discovered.

The women pleaded guilty. The judge sternly reprimanded them and fined each $5. He said if they again were caught bootlegging they might have to go to jail.

On the same day two men were arrested following a raid in which large quantities of contraband were confiscated. They were arraigned in police court and each was fined $25.

Further inconsistencies are afforded in Wichita Falls, Tex., oil boom town not far from the Oklahoma border. In the hotel where I stayed everything is done, apparently, to discourage frivolity. Bachelor floors are maintained and a sour, eagle eyed house detective constantly paces the premises. In the rooms are several different placards designed to remind the guests that there is a federal law which prohibits the use of liquor. The state law is quoted at length, and the house rules regarding bootlegging employes are given prominent display. And then, right beside a receptacle for ice, is a charged water and ginger ale price list and four composition spoons, neatly enclosed in parafin paper. It may be the spoons are intended as aids in taking medicine, but they appeared ideal for stirring highballs.

BACK IN IT



LUMSDEN HARE was in "What Every Woman Knows" when, back in 1908, the late Charles Frohman put Barrie's comedy on for the uses of Miss Maude Adams. Now he's back in his old role of Venables in Miss Helen Hays' revival of the play.

POOR PACKAGES

Ogden avenue Scotch makers would get a thrill out of seeing the packages southern bootleggers get away with. In Chicago the Scotch may not always be perfect, but there's not a Scotch manufacturer on Ogden avenue or Roosevelt road who doesn't prepare his package with loving care. The corks always are carefully branded, and the labels and caps are perfect facsimiles.

In the south, they seldom claim to have Scotch, but I've seen several bottles of alleged Johnny Walker which, I am told, retailed for $20 each. The labels appeared to have been printed on one of those calling card presses like you see running in shooting gallery windows, and even they seemed to have been used for five or six fillings of the bottles. The corks appeared to have been removed from bottles of distemper medicine and there were no foil caps. My enthusiasm in my southern research did not lead me to taste any of the beverages I saw or smelled in the south, but the Johnny Walker seemed a fine blend of eau de heliotrope, alcohol rub, and corn. This is not extravagant talk. I mean it.

STRICT DRUGGISTS

The drug stores of the corn likker belt take the Volstead act more seriously than do northern druggists. The prescription clerk verifies the script with the issuing physician and patient has to sign for the Bourbon in person and attest that he really is a very sick man. All this red tape takes all the fun out of Bourbon drinking, natives say.

Strangely enough, quite a little genuine Greek cognac finds its way inland throughout the white mule zone. However, I am told by experienced drinkers that it is a toss up between corn and Greek cognac.

For your dinking, young man, don't go south.

SENTENCE SERMONS

BY THE REV. ROY L. SMITH.

In Spite of All—

—The controversies the people are still interested in religion.

—The road signs the fool finds it easy to find trouble.

—The predictions of the opposition party the country seems to survive the elections.

—The efforts of legislatures we have not improved on the ten commandments.

—The high cost of living the country still seems to afford its luxuries.

—The gifts to charity very few of us are in the poorhouse from overgiving.

—Men's stupid creeds, the world seems very much interested in God.

I WORRY

What's your pet worry? Tell it in a short and snappy jingle and we'll pay you $2 if we print it. Address Worries, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Hard to Tell.
When the golden sun sinks in the west,
And the day draws to its close;
I begin to worry which is best:
The chiffon or pure silk hose.
J. H. G.

What's the Use?
I should worry,
I should fret;
The more I diet,
The fatter I get.
L. Mc. C.

In Doubt.
I have so many worries
And troubles by the score,
But the one that keep me awake at night
Is the worry of whether I snore!
H. F. F.

Too Much Avoirdupois!
I am a snappy steno,
I push-a-push the keys,
But I worry 'cause I can't push
The fat from off my knees.
R. McK.

Joy Either Way.
I worry lest it be a girlie,
My hubby lest it be a boy.
But why in the world should we worry
When either will bring us joy?
F. B. S.

Terrifying Event.
This pretty black eye
Has me worried all right;
Sweetie's mamma's in town,
And I meet her tonight.
B. B.

While Dancing.
Although it's never happened,
Unto me, as I've remarked—
I worry while I'm dancing,
Lest my garter come unparked!
—I. L. K.

Old-Fashioned Girl.
It's silly, but painful;
My worry is—hush!
Just when I'd avoid it
I fear that I'll blush!

Chicagoans Watch Diamond Rush.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, —Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Compton of Chicago were interested spectators at the start of the recent diamond rush to stake out claims in the new diamond fields at Grasfontein. They were amazed at the remarkable phenomenon of bare prairies changing over night to a city of 40,000. The diamond rush is run much like a race. When the Union Jack was lowered 25,000 diggers dashed for the spot to stake claims. Some Americans hired trained athletes to run for them, as did syndicates desiring good claims. These athletes drew fabulous prices for their efforts. Half an hour after the runners had started motorists were permitted to drive pell-mell over the ditches and ant hills.

Mr. William E. Donahue,
Chicago Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sir:

We wish to tell you of the good results obtained through the use of space in the West Side Metropolitan Section of the Tribune.

We are not large advertisers, but we have appeared consistently in this section of the Sunday Tribune. Our business is of a character which will not permit us to instigate sales or to feature bargain prices, but we have experienced a steady increase in new patronage since the beginning of our Tribune advertising campaign.

Very truly yours,
John Rose

JOHN ROSE has used the Metropolitan Section of The Tribune ever since it was established. It has proved a profitable investment to this west side firm of optometrists and opticians. The Metropolitan Section of the Sunday Tribune offers even greater opportunities to many other outlying stores who want to build up sales.

SAM 'N' HENRY By Correll and Gosden

It Seems to Be A Horse on The Two Boys

"'Tain't nothin' de matter wid dis stuff, is it Pete?"

[The boys are in Pete's office preparing to sign the papers for the horse they have just purchased from him.]

Sam—What is we gotta sign, Pete, dat's whut I wanna know?

Pete—Yo' boys have a seat heah an' I'll go out an' see if I can't dig up some refreshments. I'll be back in a minute.

Sam—Take yo' time, Pete, take yo' time. We'll wait heah.

Sam—Whut is I done done now, Henry?

Henry—In de firs' place, I tol' yo' dat dat broken down nag dat he got out in de yard dere is li'ble to die any minute from old age.

Sam—Well, whut is I gotta do wid it? I can't help it if he dies, kin I?

Henry—De mo' I talk to you, de dumber yo' gits. I tol' yo' dat hoss wasn't worth fifty dollahs, an' when Pete started bluffin' us by tellin' us he had a offer of a hund'ed dollahs, yo' had to holler up an' ast him if he'd sell us de hoss fo' a hund'ed.

REFRESHMENTS

Sam—I didn't want nobody else to git de hoss, Henry, 'cause I don' know where I kin git anotheh hoss.

Henry—After yo' said dat, yo' heard whut Pete said. He said, "Sold," so quick dat he like to knocked us both down.

Sam—Well, anyway we got a hoss, Henry.

Henry—We payin' enough to git a flock of 'em like dat one.

Sam—Wait a minute. Heah come Pete back heah now. Don' say no mo'.

Pete—Well, boys, I got a little bottle heah of impo'ted stuff. I sort o' anti-ticipated yo' boys comin' oveh t'night.

Sam—We don' want yo' to anticipate nothin' though, Pete. Ain't no use to do dat but we WILL have a little drink heah on yo'.

Henry—Well, I kind-a feel poorly t'night.

Pete—Boys, heah yo' is. Go ahead, help yo'self.

Sam [losing no time in refreshing himself]—Well, heah I go.

Henry [taking bottle from Sam]—Wait a minute heah. Leave some in dere.

Sam—Um-um—ain't dat sompin'. Dat's pretty good, Pete.

Pete—Go ahead, Henry.

A SECOND BOTTLE

Henry—Well, heah's lookin' at yo' boy.

Sam—Good stuff, ain't it, Henry? [Pete opens a closet door in his office and brings out another bottle for his own use.]

Henry—Whut is yo' fixin' to do, Pete?

Pete—I got anotheh bottle o' stuff heah in de closet. Yo' boys go ahead an' drink de bottle I brought yo'—I'll drink dis.

Henry [suspiciously]—O—O.

Sam [frightened]—Awa—Awa—Ain't nothin' de matteh wid dis stuff, is it, Pete?

Pete—Oh, no. But I been drinkin' de same stuff heah fo' years an' years an' I ain't neveh been sick from it.

Henry—Check me out from now on.

Sam—Well, let's git to talkin' heah 'bout de hoss.

Pete—Now, boys, I done done yo' a favor an' sold yo' de hoss fo' a hun'ed dollahs. Now heah is de papers fo' yo' boys to sign.

Sam—Whut is we gotta sign sompin' fo', Pete?

READING THE PAPERS

Pete—Wheveh yo' sell a hoss yo' gotta sign sompin'. Dat's a rule among hosses. Henry knows dat 'cause Henry's got a lot o' brains, ain't yo', Henry?

Henry [flattered]—O, yeh; Pete's right, Sam.

Sam—Whut do de papers say, Pete?

Pete—Well, I anti-ticipated sellin' dis hoss today so I had a friend o' mine to draw up de papers—an' heah dey is.

Sam [as he takes papers from Pete]—Shall I read 'em, Henry?

Henry—Go ahead, read it out loud.

Pete—Don' yo' boys want anotheh little swig o' dis stuff heah?

Henry—No mo' swigs till we git dis heah hoss thing set.

Sam—Well, heah I go; I goin' read dis thing now, Henry.

Henry—Go ahead; lemme heah it.

Sam—Heah I go——[Reads]. Dis—argument——

Pete—Dat word's "agreement"—"agreement."

Sam—Dat's right. [Reads again.] Dis—agreement—entered into—dis day of—a—nothin' heah—by an' between—Pete Willis—de party o' de firs' part——

Henry—Wait a minute heah. Where is de party goin' be? I don' wanna go to no mo' parties.

Sam—I don't know, Henry. 'Splain dat to us, Pete.

Pete [taking papers from Sam]—Betteh lemme read dat, Sam. I'll git it oveh to yo' quicker. Dat means dat I is de party o' de firs' part an' Sam Smith an' Henry Johnson is de party o' de secon' part. Dey jus' put dat in to keep from mixin' us up.

Sam—O, yeh, I see. Go ahead, read some mo'.

DE HOSS' AGE

Pete—Whereas, both parties agree to de followin'. De party o' de firs' part agrees to sell de party o' de secon' part a certain hoss—an' de party o' de secon' part agrees to buy from party o' de firs' part, a certain hoss—de price to be twenty-five— [Catching himself.] Wait a minute heah; de man done made a mistake—dat should be a hund'ed. I'll change dat right now. Lemme git de pen an' ink heah.

Sam—Dat mus' be de hoss's age, ain't it, Pete?

Pete—Yo' understan', don' yo', Henry?

Henry—Oh, yeh—sho'—go ahead, I'm listenin'. [Doubtful.] Yo' sho', though, Pete, dat dat twenty-five dollahs don' b'long in dere, is yo'?

Pete—O, sure; I can't see how dey made a mistake like dat, cause a hund'ed is rock bottom.

Sam—Read on dere, Pete.

Pete—Now den, it say heah dat—after dis agreement is signed, de said hoss is in de possession o' de parties o' de secon' part an' regardless o' whut happens to de said hoss, de party o' de firs' part is no longer responsible—or even when de party o' de secon' part go to get said animal an' find him in bad condition, includin' death, he shall still be in de possession o' de party o' de secon' part, an' de party o' de firs' part is immune, exempt an' ev'rything else from bein' li'ble.

Sam—Wait a minute heah, wait a minute heah now.

Pete—Now listen heah, boys; jus' calm down now. I had de lawyer to put dat in fo' yo' own protection. Yo' might not understan' it, Sam, but Henry do, don' you', Henry?

Henry [overcome with flattery]—O, yeh; Sam, Pete is right. Me 'n' yo' is gotta be protected. Think if dat hoss would bite somebody. O, yes, we gotta be protected. Pete is right.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. Jus' so YOU know whut we is doin' heah. YOU is de president o' de comp'ny, yo' know.

Henry [still a little doubtful]—But Pete—Don' yo' boys want anotheh tell me dis, Pete—dat hoss ain't dead now, is he?

Sam—Read on den, Pete. Whut else do it say dere?

Pete—Dat's all it say. It jus' say heah—witness our han's an' seals dis day. [Picking up the pen.] Now—a, heah is de pen, Sam——

Sam—But wait a minute heah, Pete——

Pete [forcing pen into Sam's hand]—Dat's it. Now, hol' it dis way. Now, don' git ink on yo'.

Sam—But befo' I sign dis thing I wanna say—a——

Pete—Heah 'tis, right down heah on dis line. Now make a S firs——

Sam—Awa—Awa—But I tell yo', Pete——

Pete [forcing his signature]—Now, make a A—M.

Sam—Uh, huh—now—a—awa—awa—but—a——

Pete [guiding Sam's hand]—Now write Smith right dere on de same line. Don't take yo' han' up—you'll git ink all oveh yo'. Dat's it—S-M-I-T-H—Smith—dat's it. Now, Henry——

Sam—Wait a minute heah, though, Pete——

Pete—Be careful, Sam. Neveh talk while we is signin' sompin'. Ain't dat right, Henry?

Henry—O, yeh; Pete is right.

Henry—Don' yo' think dat Sam's name on de thing is 'nuf fo' us, Pete?

Pete—Now listen, Henry—a man wid yo' brains knows dat it gotta have both names on it. Yo' know dat, Henry. Yo' got plen'y sense.

BAD NEWS!

Henry—Pete is right.

Sam—Go ahead an' sign it, Henry.

Pete [as Henry signs the agreement]—Dat's it—Henry—Johnson. [Folding up the agreement.] Now boys, de hoss is yours. Yo' say dat you'd gimme part cash an' I'll git yo' to sign de notes fo' de balance. From now on de hoss b'longs to yo' two boys, an' I wish yo' all de luck in de world now dat de hoss is yours. An' I hopes yo' make a lot o' money.

Sam—Um—um. Henry, now we is got a hoss. De hoss b'longs to us now. [A knock is heard at the office door.]

Henry—Somebody at de door, Pete.

Pete—Come in, come in.

[One of the boys employed in the poolroom comes into the office, out of breath from running.]

Boy—Pete, yo' betteh come out in de back yard a minute——

Pete—Whut's de matteh?

Boy—I went out in de barn to git some wood to put in de stove an' de hoss is layin' down on de floor coughin'.

Henry—O—O.

Sam [as he jumps up and starts for the barn]—Awa—awa—awa——

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

My girl friend and I were speaking of science before going to class.

"I know he will call on me," my girl friend said. The rain was coming down in torrents and I did not answer. But after class I asked her how she knew he would call on her.

"Oh, I knew he would look for the bright pupils on such a dark day."

M. H. D.

Pretty Poor Sport.

A good friend of mine, a professional boxer, upon becoming acquainted, immediately extends an invitation to the party to come to his room and inspect his press clippings in regard to his fights, lingering lovingly over hard fought victories, but turning pages quickly when coming upon a defeat.

If questioned, he relates the bad condition he was in at that time, etc., blaming the sympathetic attitude held for the winner by the audience or referee.

W. A. S.

She Takes the Prize.

A neighbor was in the other day. She is a young married woman, and we were talking of colors. She is rather dark and nice looking.

I said "I imagine you look well in pink."

She replied, "Yes, I do, and I also look well in red, green, yellow, blue—in fact, all colors are very becoming to me."

I looked at her to see if she was joking—not a bit. She added, "And there is scarcely any style of dress or hats that I can't wear."

Talk about conceit—she takes first prize!

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL by Westbrook Pegler

On Peacemakers, and the Trouble They Stir Up.

"With that the boys began calling each other names."

A GREAT deal of talk about peace has been going around lately, and it is my opinion that the authorities ought to regulate this kind of thing, because I have noticed that whenever you try to stir up peace between a couple of old established enemies you are likely to cause trouble.

I mean that if I have positive information that a gentleman is a dirty bum and no gentleman, I do not want anybody to show me that I am mistaken, because that would make me out a sucker, and anyway, I know better. Moreover, I once had an experience with peacemakers that came near costing me a large sum of dough and convinced me that, as a general proposition, peace is bad for business in my business.

A HANDKERCHIEF FIGHTER

At the time that I am speaking about I had a heavyweight chump by the name of Curley Herr, who was what we call a handkerchief fighter. By that I do not mean to imply that he actually carried a handkerchief, because he was in no way effeminate or refined, and in justice to him I will state that he was called a handkerchief fighter merely because he was a bum and could have wrapped up all his baggage in a handkerchief, if any.

There was another chump in the town by the name of Young Reeling, and, after some time, the gentleman who promoted the bouts in this town suggested that we should toss the two of them into the ring and decide which was the worst, although that was a very fine point and something like trying to decide whether the deuce of clubs is worse than the deuce of spades.

However, we made the match, and in collaboration with the gentleman who managed Young Reeling, I began sending statements to the newspapers in which both chumps said very insulting things about each other, all of which were substantially correct in my opinion, but intended only in a spirit of fair, manly sport, nevertheless. Of course, we did not tell our chumps that we were sending these articles to the press, and they became very angry at each other, and the customers were looking forward to a grudge fight and we were greatly pleased, because this was good for business.

FORGERY!

But in this town there were some people in the reform business who followed the peace business as a side line, and when they began to read about this grudge fight they thought it would be a fine thing to make friends of my bum and the other bum. You cannot imagine the dishonest and unsportsmanlike methods that these people will descend to when they decide that they have got to cause peace, and you will be surprised to learn that they actually forged the signatures of Curley Herr and Young Reeling to accomplish their purpose. So on the day before the fight my fellow received a letter stating:

"Old Pal Curley: What is the sense of you and I being enemies. Leave us talk it over in a friendly way. Be my guest for dinner at eight o'clock tonight at the Owl lunch.

"Your Pal,
"YOUNG REELING."

And Young Reeling received a letter stating the same thing, and signed with my guy's name.

AT THE OWL LUNCH

I assure you that none of us other gentlemen knew anything about this underhanded attempt to corrupt two sincere athletes, or we would have stopped it, because if it had gotten into the papers it would have cast a bomb shell on to the escutcheon of clean sport in that town.

But these peace people sent an anonymous tip to the sporting editors, and they were all concealed in the ice box of the Owl lunch when my guy walked in and shook hands with Young Reeling. The waiter handed the boys the menu and my bum, figuring that he was a guest, just handed it back and said, "I'll take a double order of that." And Young Reeling, figuring that Curley Herr was going to take the fall, as the phrase goes, also handed back the menu and said, "I will take the same and a cup of coffee."

I do not know how long these boys were guilty of peaceful relations, but nothing of an unpleasant nature occurred until the waiter came back with the check, which was for $12, and my bum pointed to the other bum and said, "Give it to him as I am his guest."

"What do mean you are my guest?" Young Reeling replied. "Because I have got no dough, as I am your guest."

"I have got a letter here which says I am your guest," Curley Herr said, and Youn Reeling also took out a letter and said, "Why, you cheap bum, I have got a letter which says I am your guest."

A NARROW ESCAPE

With that the boys began calling each other names, and Curley Herr was sitting on the floor under the table with this other boy's head between his knees, pounding him on the nose, or potato, with a five pound sugar bowl when Mr. Swanson, the proprietor of the joint, came out from behind the counter and threw both of the noble gladiators out of the Owl lunch.

Well, that was a very narrow escape for us, because the sporting editors had to tell their readers that they had seen Curley Herr and Young Reeling in a brawl, and consequently the fight was a sell out. But when I think of the deceitful methods of those people who go around trying to stir up peace all the time, I am convinced that this peace talk is dangerous propaganda and a constant menace to business.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Separate Frock for Spring Carries the Truly Feminine Touches of Ruffles, Lace and Fine Tucks, and Calls for a Big Hat Trimmed with a Flower or a Plume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashion makers seem to have some sort of advance information as to weather conditions for the coming summer, because they are advancing the coatless dress. It is often of sheer material and calculated only for a period of usefulness when the sun is tempering the wind so that it will be comfortable in its shorn state.

During the absolute monarchy of the ensemble, even for the hottest weather, the frock alone lost much of its decorative aspect. Particularly as coats have been chiefly straight and narrow, so that bows, flares, and other departures from the pencil line made ugly bumps in the contours of the coat. However, this season, when dresses are to be smart without any sort of wrap, they are reappearing in their decorative form. This means complication of lines and details, as well as the familiar complication of cut that has been a distinguishing feature of smart clothes for some time. The whole aspect of the woman, indeed, changes when these single frocks are worn. Big hats, trimmed with both flowers and plumes—one at a time, of course—are worn, handbags are more elaborate, and, in fact, all details are more decidedly feminine. This kind of chic is not exactly the fluffy ruffle type, but it is as dainty as the romantic garb of the civil war period.

The practicability of this kind of wrapless ensemble will depend, naturally, largely upon weather conditions, but all we can do is to hope, for the best Parisiennes are hoping, and they have sufficient faith to make this mode a success already in France, which is often a semi-frigid zone all summer long. Perhaps it is because they so love being all that is feminine in dress as well as in nature. There certainly is an allure about the dainty and vaporous frock worn with a big hat which man finds irresistable, and no Parisienne is superior to exercising it.

The all lace frock for daytime comes back in force with the return of the single dress to fashion, and laces in every hue are worn. However, the smartest colors for the daytime frock are beige and the new ibis, which is a sort of soft peach shade. These frocks do not, generally, employ any large quantity of material. They are rather straight in line, but are not less feminine because of this.

Doucet, who is always a master of the lace frock, is showing a good many charming lace gowns for daytime, of which our first model on the left is one of the chief. As you see, this dress is most simple in effect. It is made of beige lace, rather coarse in pattern, and the body of the dress is straight line, with wide sleeves cut in one with the waist. The beige of the lace is exquisitely contrasted by the trimming of black cotton net bands, which circle the deep cuffs on the sleeves and trim the triangular apron tunic on both waist and skirt.

The skirt tunic is flared markedly at the hipline, presenting a variation of the silhouette that is agreeable and novel. There is a triple narrow girdle of beige crêpe, meeting at the sides and separated by intervening spaces in front. A row of beige crêpe buttons trim the front of the frock from the round neck line to the hip line. Not the least of the charm of this model lies in the oversize scarlet flower that is placed at the left side of the girdle. With this frock is worn a large hat of picot trimmed with scarlet flowers.

The lace dress, beige in color and trimmed with bands of black net, has a novel tunic and a single flower of scarlet silk. It is shown at the extreme left.

The Boue model, sketched next, is a double dress of navy blue taffeta and pastel blue organdie. It is trimmed with plaited ruffles of pastel blue.

Crepe de chine in three tones of fuchsia makes this Doucet frock, with its flaring skirt, that is made buoffant by godets in the three shades. Third from the left.

Our second model shows a combination of materials that is perfect for the dressy single frock, and that is taffeta and organdie. Boué Soeurs, who created this model, have combined two tones of blue—navy blue taffeta that forms the sleeveless over dress and pastel blue organdie that is used for the under frock. Blue is without doubt the favorite color this spring, and blue in two or more tones in one ensemble is a poplar color combination. The over dress of this model has a bloused waist, without sleeves or collar, and open in an inverted V at the center front to show the foundation.

The foundation frock has a long straight blouse cut in a basque-like V at the hip line and edged with a plaited ruffle. The buttons are of dark blue taffeta. The skirt is plaited. Sleeves are flared from the armholes and the lower part being plaited. Their flare is also increased by a narrow plaited ruffle. The round collar of the under dress lies over the blue taffeta. This kind of double dress is most practical, for it may be worn with or without the over dress of taffeta, thus being suitable for moderate and very hot days.

Our third sketch shows a different kind of solitary frock, and one that presents a striking color combination, being made of three shades of fuchsia, ranging from the violet purple to the purple red. The dress proper is of violet crêpe de chine, and the wide bands and godets at the sides of the skirt are made of the violet red that is generally called fuchsia in two tones. The application of these shades is cleverly achieved in the blouse by overlaying the bands at the sides with a triangle that is slightly deeper in color. This is done by wide and narrow bands on the unusual flared sleeves.

The deep collar and gilet are of violet crêpe. Doucet achieves a charming flare to the skirt by means of alternating godets and panels in the three shades. The narrow violet belt has a fantaisie buckle of black enamel inlaid with red and violet.

The fourth sketch shows an afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier. This model is made of a deep maize yellow crêpe satin, and it is trimmed with bands showing the reverse, crêpe, side of the material. The motif of the diagonal is used to give a graceful line, the diagonal closing to the blouse, and the diagonal tiers in the skirt meeting at the left side, where the two tiers form a drooping drapery. Tiers and closing are edged with crêpe bands. A large buckle of Indian red stones is placed at the waist line. The tight sleeves are banded above the wrist with the crêpe side of the satin. With this frock is worn a close fitting hat trimmed with two pompoms of ostrich, also a creation of Marthe Regnier.

HOW TO HAVE A LOVELY SKIN

by Antoinette Donnelly

Soap and Water and a Soft Brush Are the Greatest as Well as the Simplest Aids to a Beautiful Complexion.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Of all the ills that flesh is heir to or acquires by unhygienic living, I do not believe there is a single item which causes more actual unhappiness and mental torture than a blemished complexion. Almost any one can laugh and be fat; be fearfully skinny and laugh with her tormentors; lose a few handfuls of hairs and be terrified, yet still be able to extract a smile over the remaining ones. But for a young person whose skin is marred with acne, blackheads, or pimples there is nothing but abject misery.

Time after time girls, and boys, too, write me they are ashamed to go out because of their poor complexions. A pity when, with the exception of a few rare cases, it is something that may be remedied, and in a comparatively short time. In fact, ninety-nine cases out of a hundred may be prevented by the simplest precautions—for the most part the free and generous application of nothing more complicated than soap and water and, as grandma used to say, "elbow grease."

There are some fortunate persons with that quality of skin so fine grained that blackhead trouble, and consequently pimple and acne conditions, escape them entirely. Few, however, may lay claim to a spotless reputation as far as blackheads are concerned. At one time or another they have had to face the disfiguring comedoes and apply a few extra measures to make good their departure.

Treating Skin Troubles.

In treating all three of the most frequent complexion ills you may boil your energy down to an attack upon those blackheads already imbedded and on their prevention. Pimples and acne are really nothing more nor less than an inflammation of the sebaceous glands and hair follicles, the tiny comedo being the root of the evil of inflammation.

If the skin is kept free from blackheads, which usually begin to show their appearance on the face at the self-conscious age, the humiliation and mental distress would be reduced to almost nothing.

Blackheads are masses of fat and debris of the skin which have solidified in the glands. These masses act as foreign bodies, irritate the skin, and become infected and then inflamed.

Most frequently the face is chiefly affected. Again, the face, back, shoulders, and chest are troubled. If treatment is not given early there is great danger of scars from prolonged inflammation. At any rate, enlarged pores will result, which give the same pitted effect to the face.

The prevalence of acne during adolescence is due to the fact that at that time the fat glands, like the hair follicles, take on a new activity. The secretion of fat is greatly increased, and it requires only a slight disturbance of the function to cause the accumulation of fat in the glands and the formation of blackheads.

Persons with coarse pores and large, fat glands have the worst cases of acne. Conditions of the general health influence the development of this trouble. Not infrequently it is found association with cold hands and feet, and not uncommonly with dyspepsia and constipation, or other irregularities which lower the vigor and impair the resistance.

Why the Face Suffers.

The face is most troubled because it is the most exposed part of the body and because sweat glands are abundant there and are easily clogged with dust and grime, which add to the disfigurement.

With normally healthy people, then, it is a matter of local care almost exclusively. If the circulation is good, the digestion good, and elimination regular, you may pin your faith on the flesh brush, soap, and water.

The vigor with which you scrub is determined by the condition of the skin. A thin and dry skin will perhaps be less affected, but will require care to prevent an unduly dry or chapped condition. In severe blackhead trouble, however, if the skin is greasy and thick, there is little danger of scrubbing too vigorously.

Mild cases of blackheads are frequently cured by bathing the face with soap and warm water, using a complexion brush and scrubbing thoroughly the affected parts. Rinse in warm and then in cold water. In more exaggerated cases, steaming the face is advised. First, cleanse with a cold cream. Applying the cold cream first often helps to soften the hardened substance, so that they are more easily removed. Have two towels ready for steaming. Apply them alternately after wringing out in hot water. Then remove as many blackheads as you can remove easily with a comedo extractor or with the fingers. If with the latter, use on the fingers a clean piece of linen, and also extract the blackheads with as gentle pressure as possible. Do not try to force out the tiny masses that will not come with moderate pressure. Wipe with a solution of hydrogen peroxide or alcohol. When this has been done apply cold water freely to the face and finish off with an ice rub.

Avoid Creams and Oils.

Severe cases of pimples and acne are known to be caused primarily by an increased activity of the fat glands. Therefore, the use of creams and oils on the face for cleansing and other purposes should be avoided in acne cases.

Obstinate cases of acne require the skill of an experienced physician. X-ray is the specific treatment which cures the vast majority of them. You are particularly urged to trust the work only to one with skill and experience, however.

In home treatment, which is sufficient for milder cases, the washing of the skin is the most helpful thing. One vigorous scrubbing a day with soap and water must be given, followed by a sponging-off with alcohol to cleanse it further. The washing not only gets rid of extraneous dirt but it tends to prevent further infection and reduces the excessive fat to the minimum.

After the face is washed the pimples that show they have come to a head by a distinct yellow point should be opened with a needle. Before they are opened the surface should be wiped with alcohol; also after the pus is extracted. The needle should be sterilized for each attack by dipping in alcohol, tincture of iodine, or peroxide of hydrogen.

Be careful not to overdo any of these operations. Remove only the blackheads and treat only the pimples that are ripe for removal and treatment. Massage is advised against in severe acne cases because of the danger of spreading the infection.

Answers to Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Queries.

EAGER: Substituting stuffed dates and salted nuts for candy will avail you nothing in your desire to reduce. You want to eliminate and not substitute. The nuts and dates are fattening, just as the candy is. You need my booklet on reducing, which may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

ESSIE H.: Ingrown toenails are caused by ill fitting shoes. If your shoes are too narrow or too short the toenails come to run diagonally on the toes instead of parallel. The shoe pushes the front end of the nail around and causes the opposite corners to dig into the flesh. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the treatment of ingrown toenails.

E. M.: Your trouble is too much sleep and not sufficient exercise. Eight hours' sleep in a well ventilated room is sufficient for the average person. A walk of four miles a day, and exercises to be done on arising are what you need. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for them.

ETTA H.: Brushing the hair gives it the luster you desire. It keeps the scalp in a healthy condition. Brush for five minutes every morning and night with businesslike strokes, until there is a feeling of life in the scalp.

A. T. V.: Fruit juices, grape juice, apples, oranges, and lemon juice—stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten before going to bed, followed by brushing the teeth, will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night.

V. H.: The shooting pains in your legs are undoubtedly the result of wearing shoes with too high heels. For business wear they are not only harmful, but are not in good taste. Have yourself fitted to a pair of street shoes with heels about an inch and a half in height.

MRS. C. S.: Whiteheads are chalky deposits under the skin. They are an imprisoned blackhead. Apply hot towels to the face to soften the skin. Then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents with the needle. Wipe the spot with peroxide and gently massage with cold cream. For treatment of dry skin send a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARION H.: Equal parts of camphor and glycerin massaged into the hands several times a day will soften and whiten them. Stains may be removed from the hands by lemon juice. It is advisable to keep a lemon handy for this purpose. Better send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the "Care of the Hands." It has many helpful suggestions for you.

MRS. J. B. N.: A vegetable diet tends to keep the intestines active. This is particularly true of fresh green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, asparagus, beet tops, and celery. On such a diet you are not liable to grow stout. Eat sparingly of potatoes, as the starch in the potato is the hardest of all starches to digest.

E. B. G.: The hollows will remain in your cheeks until such time as you have the spaces caused by loss of teeth filled in by bridgework. Loss of teeth is responsible for much digestive trouble, the food not being properly masticated. And hollows give an expression of age, which no woman wishes to have.

MRS. M.: KEEPING THE TONGUE CLEAN PROTECTS the teeth, as the tongue collects tartar and bacteria, particularly near the root. Fruit acids are cleansing, as is also a weak solution of vinegar.

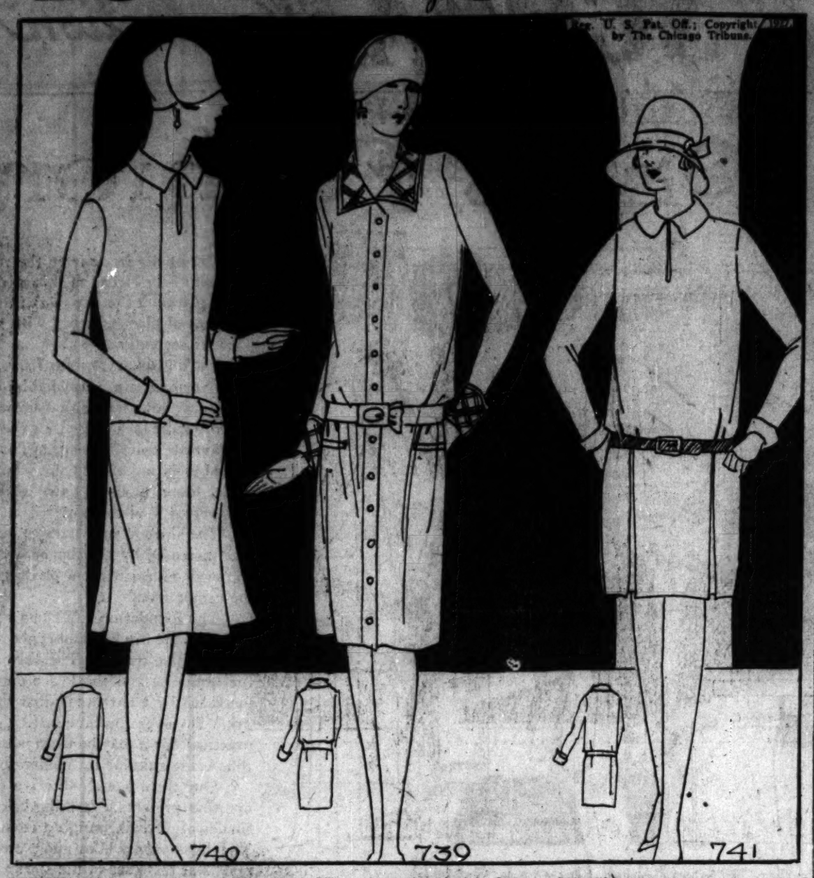
MRS. F. L.: OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THE CAUSE of eczema. In some cases there may be a slight tendency to inheritance, but it is not generally considered in the majority of cases. The treatment depends upon your general condition and the part of the body affected, and should be determined by a competent physician after making an examination.

JIM G.: SKIN GRAFTING IS NECESSARY TO REMOVE deep tattoo marks. Work of this kind is done by skin specialists.

DOROTHY M.: DEEP BREATHING EXERCISES IMprove the circulation, develop the bust and chest, and often will cure headaches. They start the blood flowing vigorously through your veins and for one with weak lungs there is nothing better than deep breathing.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde



740—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

739—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

741—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 2⅛ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

FLAT crepe in a crushed raspberry shade, with collar, cuffs and front panel in a deeper shade would make up charmingly by pattern No. 740. The dress isn't at all difficult to make, and the straight lines with the gracefully flaring sides will be universally becoming. Three shades instead of two could be used in making this dress, making the main part of the dress of one, the panel of a second, and the collar and cuffs of a third.

The circular skirt is seamed together at the sides, and French seams will be right to use. Put the right side seam in by hand, then turn to the wrong side, baste and then stitch the wrong side seam on the machine. Finish the seams of the waist in the same manner. The panel front can have the edges turned in, laid in place on the dress and stitched close to the edge. Or the dress can be laid over the panel edges and stitched in place.

The seams would look well with a narrow piping of the dress material, and if this is used, the same method should be followed in putting the waist and skirt together. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, and the edges bound.

The collar can be made double, or if you prefer to make it of a single thickness it will be pretty to finish the edges with a narrow, bias binding. The cuffs should be made the same as the collar. The sleeves are full length and close fitting. Notches on the sleeves pattern show just where the outer edges of the sleeve is to be gathered to make fullness at the elbow. Take the smallest possible stitches in gathering, distribute the fullness over the given space evenly, and press carefully. This fullness makes the necessary "pocket" for the elbow. It is a good idea not to make these close fitting sleeves too close fitting. They are not only uncomfortable, but they don't look well. A sleeve of this kind can be made reasonably close fitting without being actually tight.

Pattern No. 741 is an excellent design for a dress for school wear. The dress is cut with the back in one piece, and in the front the dress is slashed under the belt to allow for the plaits. There is a slashed opening in the center front and this allows the dress to be slipped on and off over the head. Pretty little collar and cuffs finish the neck and sleeves; and the latter are full length and close fitting.

Kasha in a becoming color, or one of the other woolens in a small check, might be used. Even though warm weather isn't far away, there are many days when a dress with a little warmth isn't uncomfortable. Challis is an excellent material for this kind of a dress, and unless the trimming prevents, it can be washed as satisfactorily as a linen handkerchief.

The narrow belt may be made of the dress material, or one of calfskin may be chosen.

Navy blue crepe de Chine, with one of the plaid taffetas was used in making the dress by pattern No. 739. This is one of the straight line designs that is so generally becoming; and a feature that will appeal to most women is that it opens the length of the front. There is an applied plait of the dress material the length of the front and this gives a good finish there. Two inserted pockets in the skirt add to the attractiveness as well as the usefulness of the dress; and the broad suede belt gives the right finish at the waistline.

Take great care in cutting and measuring for the buttonholes. Then overcast every one from the wrong side before working. One of the heavier crepes or satins would also be suitable materials for this design, and two tones of the same color and material could be used in the making.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

BABY ARTICLES ARE GLADLY WELCOMED.

DON'T all of us like to think that the arrival of a baby means happiness for every one—happiness for the mother, for the family, and the promise of a happy childhood for the little newcomer? In our families, we see everything possible is done, and somehow we like to think that every baby and mother receive similar care.

Yet our files are filled with cases where parents are facing the prospect of a little one with nothing done, and absolutely no means of providing for the baby. Illness in many of these families has consumed the family savings, and all these expectant parents want the little newcomer to have every advantage—but they simply cannot provide unless we help them.

An infant in any family of comfortable circumstances seldom wears out his first clothes, and there they are, ready for a lot more service. Gifts from those whose babies have outgrown their first outfits, infant clothes, cribs, carriages, and beds will be welcomed. Many of us can give these articles, and think what they will mean to the many poor expectant mothers.

If you have some of these baby articles which have outlived their usefulness to you, let me know that you will help! I can place everything of the sort where it will mean the difference between happiness and misery. So please let me know what you have to give!

If You Have a Car.

"I am coming to you in the hope you will be able to find some one who is willing to give pleasure to a shutin. My sister, who has been sick for a year, is now able to go out for a short drive, but is too weak to walk. We do not own a car and I wondered if it would be possible to get in touch with some one who has leisure time and a car who would be glad to do an act of kindness. M. R. G."

If you have an automobile and would like to devote a little of your time to making others happy, this would be a splendid opportunity, and probably would be the means of restoring this young woman's health.

For a Convalescent.

"Do you think you could get me a tennis set and a racket? I have been sick for a long time and the doctor tells me to get out in the sun. I like to play tennis, but I can't afford to buy either of these articles. A. S."

Have you either of these articles, which will help make our correspondent a strong and healthy young woman again? She'll be most appreciative for them.

Out of Work.

"I have been out of work for some time and I need a spring overcoat, size 42. Do you think one of your readers has an old one to give to me? "E. H."

Last year's top coat might do this correspondent quite well. May he not have it?

Two Small Boys Need Shoes.

"I know of two boys who are needing shoes badly. One is Sam, 13 years old, whose father deserted and left his mother with five children younger than him to support. He wears shoes, size 8, in a man's size. He goes to school and is trying to make good so he can help his mother support his little sisters. The other boy is James. His father has been ill now for three months and it has been necessary to go into debt to pay the rent and buy food. He is a little tot and wears size 8 in children's shoes. H. J. A.

Spring showers mean wet feet and resultant ill health when little boys' feet are not well shod. Can you give Sam or James a pair of shoes?

Victims of Sickness.

"I am a widow depending upon my sons for support, but they have so many expenses, there is never enough for clothing for us. We have had a great deal of sickness and doctor bills, and my youngest daughter, who is just getting well, needs a coat, size 16 or 18. I am in need of clothing, too—a coat and a black dress, size 44. If you can help us, we will be most thankful. Mrs. P."

When one has the expense of ill health to cope with, it is hard to provide the necessary clothing. I am sure you can help in this case with a cast-off garment or two.

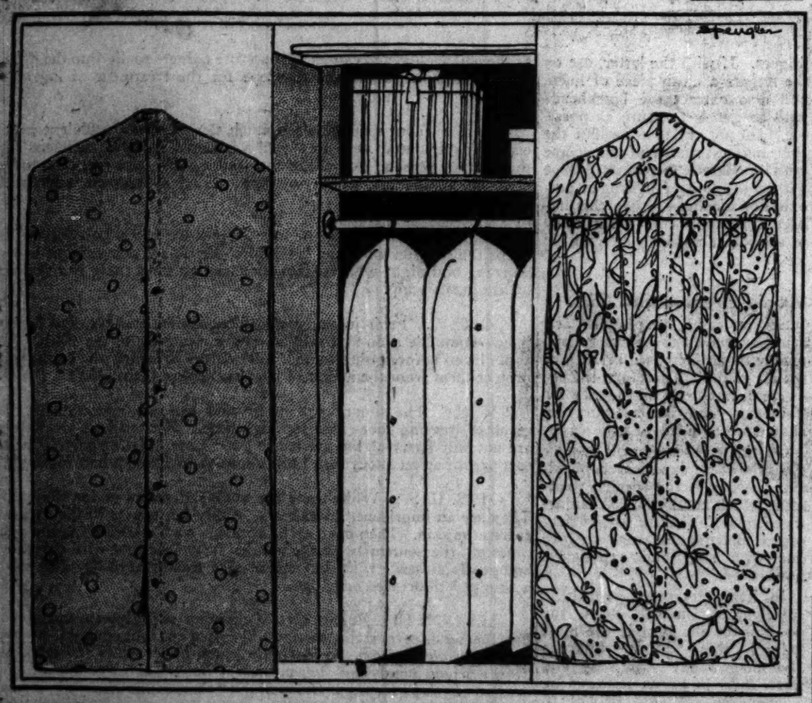
Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Dress Bags Are a Joy to the Woman Who Likes to Keep Her Gowns Fresh and Attractive.

DRESS bags are really a necessity if we are to keep things looking fresh, and this is especially true in towns where soft coal is used. Of course, you can buy pretty, satisfactory bags in a great variety of designs, but there are many women who enjoy making these things, and in so doing a considerable sum of money is saved.

About 3½ yards of 36 inch material is needed, or if you buy anything narrower you will need 5 yards for one bag.

Some bags are made the shape of a clothes hanger at the top, and the rest of the way the bag pieces are perfectly straight. One piece makes the back, and in the front there are two. These front pieces are hemmed down one edge, using an inch wide hem, and the strips cut wide enough to seam to the back, and allow the hems to lap. These hems may be stitched together down from the top for six or nine inches, then fastened the rest of the way with several buttons and buttonholes.

Another style of bag is made with a sort of yoke top, back and front. This is cut the shape of the hanger across the top, and measures nine inches deep. To this the lower parts of the bag are gathered, allowing one and one-half across for fullness. In the front there are two pieces, the same as in the other one. There are lapped, hemmed edges that button together, or they may tie if you prefer. While patterns for these bags may be bought one shouldn't be necessary, and if you are not used to cutting patterns, do it first in paper—of course making the width ample so a dress won't be crushed.

Some women make a gayly colored cretonne bag for each one of their dresses, and it isn't a bad idea.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

by Doris Blake

The Power of Parental Example Does Everything to Incline the Twig in the Way It Should Grow

WHAT ails youth?

With every new incident of crime committed by a member of the younger generation the question is advanced. And a sweeping condemnation of the entire group known as the younger generation follows.

That there is something wrong with a certain portion of our young people cannot be denied. District attorneys and other officials of law claim youthful offenders are supplanting in numbers the hardened mature criminals of an earlier day, and women in charge of female police departments in large cities report appalling conditions of vice among girls.

Nevertheless it is unfair to embrace the whole crop of boys and girls in a charge of waywardness. They deserve fairer treatment from us elders. They deserve it for no other reason than that the offenders among them are offenders principally because of laxity of parental control, of bad parental example, and of indifference on the part of elders generally over the plight in which many of this younger generation finds themselves. Through no fault of their own they are living in cooped up quarters that provide no opportunity for them to rid themselves normally of that excess energy for which youth has ever been noted and without which it would not be worth its salt.

The saner diagnosticians are probing now to locate the source of the ailments of youth. They are on the right track. There never was a time when parenthood was a harder job and never a time when self-indulgence and bad example were practiced so diligently by parents.

Remedy Lies with Parents.

Whatever the causes of this debacle of youth, and many have been advanced in exoneration of parents (cheap literature, live-your-own-life propaganda, the movies, the automobile, the jazz age), the remedy lies with the older generation. It rests with parents in better control of themselves, and with adults, generally, who will get together to provide a healthier outlet for the surplus energy of youth.

These young people cannot help having been born into a generation that saw an upheaval with so devastating an aftermath as the world war. But parents can help them. They can help by decent example. Not only the individual parent but the whole body of elders to whom the young must naturally look for guidance can put their shoulders to the wheel and help straighten out this vital problem of youth.

There is no end of good in that much maligned younger crowd, even among the so-called wild ones, if it were only given half a chance to blossom. You could not be the confidante of thousands of them, as I am, and not realize they are waging a terrific uphill fight. Some God-given instinct possesses them to want to do the right thing. They are not happy doing the wrong. Yet they see on every hand the transgressors getting away with everything from petty vice to murder and they are plainly confused.

It is not an unusual thing to get a letter from some thoughtful member of that younger crowd complaining about the conduct of its elders. It might come as a stunning surprise to a number of parents to learn what is going on in the back of the minds of their children. The thoughtful among them, and, believe me, they are plentiful enough in number to make me their champion, are crying out for that old fashioned parent in whose virtue, ruggedness, and strength of character they may have implicit faith.

Letter from a Son.

Just listen to this from one of them, a serious minded young college chap. "It is the jazz age of fathers," he begins. "Fathers seem to be becoming kids instead of acting their part. They seem to be greedier for enjoyment than the young, and that, heaven knows, is GREEDY.

"At any rate, if they are not, they are made to appear so. When I come out from shows lately, I feel ashamed to face my father. Ashamed for him and fathers like him. I can see youngsters playing kissing games and the like. That seems natural. But when I see on the stage or in the movies, fathers portrayed in the roles of beaus, mashers, and irresponsible men, my heart aches, and the thread of tenderness, and confidence, and faith which should be between me and my father is somehow snapped. They say the theater and the movies and literature of the day reflect life. Well, if this is the life of fathers, then it might be best to keep the children in ignorance of it.

"I wish sometimes I had been born 75 or 100 years ago, when it was possible for a child to believe in his father implicitly. I firmly believe one of the reasons children go wrong is because they see older people portrayed in every conceivable situation they should not see. I don't know that I care for censorship. But a sense of decency ought to compel writers and artists of every description and joke-makers to keep facts about life at least within the ramifications of civility. Don't distort our parents to us."

And here is a letter from a girl 21: "My mother, I am sorry to say, isn't like a real mother at all. She is flighty. She is 45, and the other day she was driving a car and ran into another car. The officer who arrested her complained because there was liquor on her breath. I had to believe it because I have smelled it there many times myself when she comes home after an afternoon with her 'pals.'

"When she was young she worked. She had a strict mother and a stricter father. She somehow seems to be making up for it now. She has no authority over herself. Father has no authority over her. And I confess I blush for my mother at times. My father has been fortunate in making money that gives her all the luxuries. I hope the boy I am going to marry never makes that much if it brings the same temptations to cut loose. I could not bear to think of my life as a succession of afternoons spent at card tables and chasing more excitable amusements. I want to be a better mother than that. This may seem a hard and sophisticated thing for me to say, but it is true that I want to make a really great success of my life."

Another youngster wrote me not long ago that "she wished her mother wouldn't dress and act so silly." These are not hard hearted children. They preface their parental criticisms with an apology to which their parental conduct does not entitle them. Sometimes I wonder if a reversal of the order of "bringing them up" wouldn't be a good thing. Turn the wayward parent over to the child for training. It might make the world safer for the children.

Happily, not all parents are indifferent to the welfare of their children. There are parents of successful children who preach the religion of example as sincerely as the religion ever was preached. But there is no gainsaying the fact that making a home really a home is a bigger problem today than it was 30 years ago. Then it was a comparatively easy matter to be a parent and to do your duty as a parent. Today parenthood requires sterner rectitude to escape helplessness before the juggernaut of progress that has brought with it wealth, comforts, and pleasures, discomfort, rebellion, and degeneracy.

The Power of Example.

No amount of preaching obedience to law theoretically can overcome the ill effects on the child who knows his father is a bootlegger or a bootlegger's customer. And that goes many ways: father dodging his taxes; father holding a conference on how to dodge them; father substituting shoddy materials for the proper kind, giving his son an example that might easily start him on the road to Sing Sing. The business of "putting something over on the next fellow in commercial deals" recited in a son's presence is fatal to his young morals. The shreds of honesty are destroyed.

The lying mother, lying to her friends, lying to her admirer, or lying to the husband, when once caught in the act by the child has ruined that child's life. Parents are nothing if they are not respected. A youngster is better off brought up in an orphan asylum without having known the caress of a parent than to have one whose ways are steeped in that good old biblical word, iniquity.

People are honest not because it was preached to them but because their forbears were honest. Children are moral not because morality is handed down in slogans but because of morality in the home, morality in business, morality in personal relations. All these things begin with the personal equation. Hypocrisy has no greater foe than childhood, as one savant observes. The child instinctively feels when his parents are sincere and when they are not sincere. Once a child has discovered his parents' insincerity he is ready to become a menace to society and himself.

Providing an Outlet.

After example in collecting the ailments of youth comes provision for an outlet for their energy into joyful, healthful physical recreation. Amusement on every side is coupled with indoor confinement. It naturally follows that thoughts are turned from healthful outdoor recreation to the neurotic game or amusement of the confined, indoor sort.

Why should not the problem of the healthful bringing up of a child's mind and body claim the attention of the community to the same extent that a problem of commercial and industrial extensions claims it? We have chambers of commerce planning for business. We have industrial conference boards planning for industry. We have Rotarian organizations planning civic enterprises. Why not devise ways and means of restoring through recreation the healthy, moral atmosphere it once had? Surely our civilization is rich enough and ample enough for that. Can't we build temples of play as we build citadels of work? Can't we build them with the same planning, the same energy, and for the production of the same efficient results?

"Dear Miss Blake: Some time ago I met a 18 year old girl whom I instantly liked. I continued to see her every day and as the days went by I fell in love with her. Though I love her as no one has ever loved, she acts as if she did not care for me at all. However, she has told a friend of mine that she likes me a great deal.

"I suppose that she thinks I am too young (I am 17) for her and that probably is the reason she acts that way.

"What is your advice in this case? Do you think I am too young for her?

"CHARLES."

You have paid her too much attention and she has tired of it, Charles. You can't expect a young girl of her years to concentrate on one beau. It's asking too much.

Getting Careless.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company with a girl of 18 for the last two years and love her dearly.

"But of late she is careless of her personal appearance and quite a few times I have had to suggest that she remove the high water mark from her neck before we go out.

"When I reminded her of these little things she starts to cry and tells me I don't love her.

"This may sound funny to you, Miss Blake, but I am serious, as I love this girl. Please tell me, is there no way I can make her realize the error of her ways, or shall I give her up?

"PERPLEXED."

Any one so careless about her person will be negligent about other things. One can't feel proud of a friend who isn't more particular about her appearance. After your comment, her pride should make her take greater care if she hasn't the natural inclination.

He Remembers.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18. Until a few months ago I went with a girl who was one year my senior. We had an argument in which neither of us were right. I offered my apology soon afterwards, but it took him a couple of weeks longer. He is friendly towards me again. I dance with him a great deal, but he never asks me to go with him any more. I am quite popular, but don't seem to care for any but this one. How can I win him back, or do you think I can?

"DOWNCAST AND SORRY."

Apparently he hasn't the happy faculty of forgetting differences as quickly as you, dear, but he may be around yet. Don't refuse other invitations while waiting, though. Let him see you can attract others.

Her Fancy's Changed.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and love a girl one month younger than myself. We happen to go to the same place every Monday, and I was in the habit of taking her home until lately. She has been going home with some one else for the last few weeks. Her father is rather strict with her and he will not allow her to have any callers. We have gone out a few times, but I always had to meet her on the corner. Now she seems to be busy all the time and she will not see me even on the corner. I am forced to doubt as to how busy she is. She acts colder now and I wonder if she still cares.

"EARL."

It doesn't look that way, Earl. Her fancy has changed, as it's quite liable to at her age. Just make the best of it and look around for another.

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness, exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

In Gloves.

The most embarrassing moment of my life happened during the first week of my first position as stenographer.

As I had a few minutes leisure one day when the boss stepped out of the office, I tried on a pair of black kid gloves I had bought during my lunch hour. They were a right fit, and I had some trouble in getting them on. While I was admiring them my boss rushed into the office, bringing with him some men he had met in the hall, one of them being the president of the concern, from the home office.

Hurrying into his private office, he called out, "Bring your notebook, Miss L——." Immediately I began peeling off the new gloves—but—they wouldn't peel! After I had struggled for some minutes trying to get them off, and became more and more nervous and excited, the boss looked out, and seeing what the trouble was, said, "Leave them on. Mr. B. must catch a train in a few minutes and wants to dictate a letter to the home office before he leaves here."

So, with three amused men watching me, I took Mr. B.'s dictation with tight fitting black kid gloves on my hands, and with a longing in my heart for the earth to open up and swallow me.

Force of Habit.

While I am not exactly a half century old, I do remember when we wore skirts so long that we had to hold them up while walking on muddy or damp pavements.

Imagine my embarrassment one day during the last rainy seige, as I hurried across one of the busiest corners, to discover that I was daintily lifting my knee length skirt as I stepped across a muddy place!

Putting It Frankly.

I had become well acquainted with many of the guards and some of the officers at the state reformatory, but I did not know the new superintendent who had been at the institution but a month.

One morning while I was busy working at my table, the assistant superintendent, a guard, and a third man came up to see me. The assistant superintendent asked me if I had ever met Mr. E——, the superintendent.

"I wouldn't know him from a bundle of hay wire," I replied without looking up. There was a silence.

Then the assistant said, "Well, this is Mr. E——."

Luckily for me, the superintendent had a sense of humor. Since then he and I have become good friends.

Horrors!

I was registering for a college course in English and was trying to get a professor who had a reputation for being easy. There was one man, Mr. M., whom I didn't know but whom I had heard was quite hard, and I didn't want to get in his class at any cost. The man who was signing my card, however, wanted me to take this certain class, so I answered, "O, I wouldn't take a course under that man at all. He is a bore, as well as being hard to get a grade from."

I noticed he blushed; then another man at his side turned and said, "So that's the kind of a reputation you have, M.?" I faded away.

Looks Told.

A sum of money had disappeared from the office, and the circumstances were such that almost any one of the force could be a guilty party. The police were called in and for a while things hummed around there. Every one, from chief of staff clear down to the janitor, was had up for questioning, and although we were trying to do "business as usual," we were all pretty tense and looking crosseyed at our neighbor.

I had begun to develop a nervous headache, when finally the boss approached a group of us and in a lowered, confidential tone, began, "Now, folks, I have this money, and it just goes right to my heart to have to tell you——"

Before I could get my wits about me, I thought that he was confessing to us that he had taken it himself (instead of trying to advise us that the culprit had been apprehended), and my horrified expression and smothered ejaculation, before I could come to, caught his attention, and made perfectly clear to him what I was thinking.

He made no comment, neither then nor afterwards, but now when we meet as we must sometimes in the pursuance of our duties, he looks—believe me, he looks!

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Whether Wild or Domestic, Cultivated or Free Growing, the Edible Greens Are a Virtuous Tribe.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

"GOD'S medicine" is one of the names given to greens by a people destitute of a knowledge of vitamins even to this day. This is not saying a thing against vitamins. We believe with all our heart and all our mind that the more exact, and extensive, and technical a man's knowledge of the nutrients is the better off he is, and the world as well, in so far as his influence counts.

Nevertheless, it is interesting to discover what a close agreement there often is between the modern and scientific knowledge of foods, and the great common sense decisions of primitive men, even when they have been hagridden with superstition. Quite ancient peoples have assigned specific medical virtues to this green and that, but this is not surprising when we consider what the old medical pharmacopoeia was—a list of plants or parts of plants, or of their essences or combinations. The bitter greens, or in special the chicory, used to be a standard home remedy for jaundice and other liver complaints. By the way, the epicurean table of today has greatly profited by the cultivation of this, which was but a wild and sprawling weed.

It is a pity that the race cannot hold on to all knowledge, especially about foods, but when one sort comes another sort is likely to go wholly or in part. For instance, today we surely know more exactly and extensively and technically the worth of green leaves in the diet, but only a few people—there used to be many—know about the great variety of edible wild greens which the spring time brings, and the summer continues, than did more primitive people. These two kinds of knowledge surely bolster one the other, and it is a mistake because we have one to hold the other of little account.

A woman of country upbringing of more than half a century back has this as her list of the greens she has eaten: Pokeweed shoots, black mustard, chicory, all kinds of dock, purslane, pigweed, plantain, wild lettuce (volunteer lettuce), young red clover, dandelion, milkweed (substitute for asparagus), mallow, lamb's quarter (cenopodium), sheep's sorrel, and a number of others more rare.

Our botanies and various other books yield entertaining and even fascinating knowledge about each of these plants, or "edible weeds." Typically, as well as typically ancient, waste places yield pot herbs for our health insurance and to satisfy our liking for something different.

The Amaranth Pigweed.

As an example of food growing in the most waste of modern places we may take what is called sometimes the "rough pigweed," to distinguish it from the smooth, which is also called lamb's quarter, and belongs to the goosefoot family, while that weed growing in our most modern of waste places belongs to that family of most poetical associations, the amaranths. One of the modern waste places it favors is the hard packed soil around rather neglected and barren city apartment buildings, often where not a blade of grass raises its head, and too often it grows there undisturbed by residents who need just such a food as it is to give them some zest for living.

A popular name for this is "red root," which it has, and another is "beet root," for when cooked it has a faint beet aroma, though it is not as savory as cooked beet tops, one of the most delicious of our garden greens. It is often found in forests, in vacant lots, and the tips of its branches are good to cook the summer through, while the other pigweed is strictly a spring green.

Purslane.

Here is another and even more delicious green—because of its acidity—which grows in waste places but loves best the thrifty kitchen garden, in which place it has been so hated as to furnish charming and humorous subject for many references in that gay book, "My Summer in a Garden," by Charles Dudley Warner, which acknowledges the fact that the Chinese eat it. So do the Dutch, who even can it for home and world use. And so will you eat it if you once learn to prepare it. Yet tons of this are weeded out of gardens every year and left to wilt. With sliced new beets it is delicious.

Dandelions.

But for many people the dandelions lead the list of greens from earliest March to late May, after which they are mostly too bitter and sunburned, although when they come up with long grass they may be good until mowing time for it. This year I saw in middle March a man turning aside the dead and heavy grasses of last year, growing next a fence around a great public building, to get dandelions. I envied him his "mess." In Italian markets one may sometimes find dandelions in late winter which are nothing but a red ball with a white heart, real vegetable lobster when cooked.

Other Greens.

A philanthropic emperor in China once had a book prepared which contained, it is said, a list of over 3,000 edible plants common to his country, copies of which were sent to every district where distress and poverty prevailed. We have a tremendous list coming from forests, fields, and seashore, all with some sort of edible history. The buds of the beech and calamus flower and other things like this have been eaten without being subjected to the pot.

Old Ways with Greens.

Some one once sent me this, headed "Grandmother's Method of Preserving Greens and Vegetables: Gather the broad leaved dandelions when tender, wash thoroughly, then with a thread and needle string them through the bud, or core, and hang in the window till dry, when the strings may be wrapped in newspaper to keep out the dust till used. String beans and peas may be strung the same way, and are preferable to salting down, for the flavor is kept better. Squash, pumpkin, turnips, apples or any pithy vegetables may be pared round and round, then strung and dried." Of course, okra and peppers are still prepared in this fashion, even in commercial quantities.

Preparing Greens.

It is much easier to pick over and trim greens before wetting them. It is lovely business to dig dandelions, give them a good shake to remove dead leaves and gress, and trim them before taking them into the house. The shake also removes anything like sand, and so shortens the work when they are washed. While each green requires its own special treatment in general, each must be examined, or picked over, and trimmed, then must follow two steps more before they are really ready to cook—washing and blanching—and this latter is only a more thorough or last step in the cleaning.

Washing Greens.

In washing greens or strawberries it is always best to put them into an ample quantity of water, and then to lift them out of it rather than to pour the water off them as is sometimes done, when sand or whatever heavy dirt is in the pan is poured back over them.

Blanching Greens.

It is sure that uncooked green leaves are medically best as food, therefore in cooking them our whole aim should be to make the process a careful or gentle one so that we may not by heat lessen their contribution to our diet with little left save their roughage value. To drop them into boiling water is exceeding cleansing and then to rinse them in cold shortens the cooking time, it has been proven. The rapid change of temperature gives effects equal to cooking. To keep them long in boiling water leaches out their valuable solubles, so we make the process brief, or not over five minutes, and then only if they are a little old. The tenderest require only a minute of blanching.

A Cooking Prohibition.

Do not use soda in cooking any vegetable. The French woman will tell for the worse. The greatest of our modern food scientists, who know because of long years of experiment, tell us that the soda destroys the vitamins. We believe them. More than that, it offers an excuse for careless cooking with more fire than is in any way good for the green, whether it is kept green or not. The soda is supposed to preserve the green color, etc. This may be preserved by careful and gentle cooking. Too much fire will turn a cooked green from green to yellow in a flash of the eye.

The Real Cooking.

The blanching is a part of the cooking, but after that comes the time process. After the greens are blanched they may generally be cooked in no more water than what clings to them. Doing this also makes it essential to keep the fire low, otherwise this bit you that it makes them "horrid," meaning that it affects their flavor of water will disappear as steam and the greens will burn. Or when a cook cannot manage this sort of cooking she can put the blanched greens in the double boiler. She may be surprised to find much more water in it when they have cooked tender than she imagined was there. This is because the greens are ninety-five per cent water, and some of what is in them has been cooked out, while that on them has not cooked away as it would in even the slowest cooking, generally.

Butter and Cream Dressing.

For fine and soft greens a butter and cream dressing is highly acceptable. Dry the greens quickly, or press them dry, chop them fine, and then combine them with a little hot cream seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, and perhaps a little nutmeg. Cook the two together until the cream seems mainly absorbed, and serve. This is nice cooking which no recipe can do. Judgment and care are the agents.

On Seasoning Greens Generally.

In the old days a piece of pork or bacon was cooked with greens to add the agreeable fat dressing. Vinegar was the only thing added besides the salt, which latter not needed when the meat was salty. As served, no butter or oil would have clung to the greens because they were too wet. When the pot liquor was used for something the virtues in the greens were in a sense salvaged, but the too long cooking yielded anything but a dainty dish. Now we cook the greens in the least bit of water, lest they be sodden or water soaked, and then dry out or press out any water left so that butter will be a satisfactory dressing, and the one that makes them most savory.

Melted Butter and Lemon Juice.

To get an acid green like the much appreciated sorrel cultivated in France and elsewhere, a seasoning of butter and lemon juice and salt and perhaps a bit of paprika is made into a sort of sauce and poured over it. The greens must be served at once after this dressing is put over them. Two tablespoons of melted butter and more or less of the juice of one lemon are the proportions and right for a small amount of greens.

French Dressing on Greens.

A French dressing on dry hot greens may be as satisfactory as when these are molded and served cold for a salad.

Bacon Dressing.

This dressing which makes wilted lettuce and is good on green or wax string beans cooked is also excellent on the less delicate greens: One-fourth pound of well chilled and sliced bacon, two tablespoons of vinegar, a little sugar. To make it milder yet add to it a tablespoon or two of sour cream. Pare off any smoky edges from the bacon and remove any bits of gristle. Then either cut into bits with scissors, or put through the food chopper. It must be cold and rather fresh cut, or it will be stringy. Therefore the scissors may be best. Put the bacon, so cut fine, into a cold frying pan and stir while it toasts, never allowing it to get smoking hot. Add seasonings and serve.

Meat Gravy.

Use meat gravy instead of cream, cooking the two together until the gravy has blended with the greens.

Thickening Greens.

When greens are to be used for a garnish some butter can be melted and as much flour stirred into it as would make a medium thick sauce, cooking the flour rather well, yet gently, in the butter, then adding the greens and cooking to a blend. A little cream may be added to soften, as it always does, and a little fresh butter at last to make savory, or a meat stock may add fat and body as well with flavor.

To Crisp Greens.

Sometimes greens that seem wilted may be thoroughly cleaned, then left in ice cold water to grow crisp as they will do. The leaves of the rough pigweed will soon look as though they were growing. The heart of the dandelion expands when thus treated, etc.

Cooking Dandelion Greens.

After these greens have been cleaned and washed the larger and coarser sorts may be blanched ten minutes, the small and tender ones five. Rinse with cold water and cook gently in a covered kettle in water clinging from the rinse. Tender greens will require then only fifteen or twenty minutes of cooking to be tender. Dry and squeeze the water out, add butter and nothing else if you want them the nearest au naturel, and so most wholesome.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

In the Rain.

I received an invitation to a home wedding, the ceremony to be performed at high noon. A small porch at the home had been artistically decorated, and the wedding party was to stand there. It had rained hard all day, and as the wedding hour approached there seemed no chance for any change of weather. But promptly at 12 o'clock the guests were invited to the yard to stand under umbrellas, capes or coats to witness the ceremony which was performed on the porch as had been planned. J. W.

The Minister's Little Joke.

A country minister, who has a keen sense of humor, told me of this instance. It was in the hills of Pennsylvania and a farmer noted for his thriftiness and industry asked the minister to come out to his place on a certain day to marry him.

When the minister arrived at the designated time he found the farmer in his work clothes and bare feet, plowing, and leaving his team standing in the middle of the field he approached the minister. At the same time the bride, likewise no more gayly garbed, approached the pair.

The minister asked the groom if he had not better tie his team before the ceremony began.

"O," replied the man, "it won't take long, and they will be all right."

The minister thought he would give the man a good lesson in reverence and so he chose the longest service he knew and prolonged the prayer to almost endless length. Needless to say the neglected team had in the meantime plowed a furrow that was not consistent with a careful farmer's rule, and the minister enjoys his little joke to this day. L. B.

Married in a Hospital.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was held in a hospital. The young couple had set their wedding date, and on that day had set out for the justice of the peace. But fate intervened in the form of a reckless driver, who ran into them and demolished their car, so that both were injured [but not the reckless driver]. They were taken to the hospital, and later in the day, after their wounds were dressed, they decided that the wedding should take place as usual. And so, on adjoining hospital beds they were married and despite the strangeness of their wedding they are still married! J. L. B.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Uneducated Meterman.

Wife—O, Oscar, a strange man was here today and said he wished to read our gas meter.

Husband—Well, did you let him in?"

Wife—Mercy, no! He used very poor grammar, and I felt sure he would not read it properly. MRS. A. C.

Move Her in That Direction.

Wife—Mrs. S. said a sentimental song always moves her.

Hubby—Really? Let's play "Home Sweet Home." S. F.

Eternal Sleep.

My husband has little confidence in my driving. We were taking a long automobile trip and I said, "Shall I drive and let you sleep awhile?"

He said, "No, dear, I'm afraid I might sleep too long." J. M.

Next Best Thing.

Wifey—"Hubby, dear, what did you buy me for my birthday?"

Hubby [grouchy]—"You know, that wrist watch you wanted—well, I bought you an alarm clock."

F. O'N.

Failed to Register.

Wife—[Evening of election day]: "Did you vote today, dear?"

Hubby—"No, I didn't register."

Wife—[sweetly]: "You never do." MRS. W. R. C.

Divine—And Then Some.

He (reading an article in the paper)—It says here that the divine height of woman is 5 feet 5 inches.

She (angrily)—How dare you say that, when you know quite well that I am 5 feet 7 inches?

He—O, well, my dear, you are more than divine. M. P.

And She Said——

Wife: "When I begin to look old, will you love me?"

Husband [absentmindedly]: "Sure I do, dear." E. L. R.

In corsets—assured service

Stooping, bending, sitting—every movement of the body is a challenge to the service-quality of the elastic. In America's finest corsets, the supreme service-quality of Kenlastic is the answer. Discriminating women look for the mark that identifies this superior fabric—a wavy blue line inside the corset, at top and bottom.

TINTEX tints stand many launderings

. . . . WHEN you have tinted your dainty "undies", stockings, etc. with Tintex, you'll find that they stand repeated laundering without losing their colorful beauty. For all the Tintex pastel tints are extremely long-lasting. This means a great saving in time—and money, too!

. . . . and remember the wonderful simplicity of Tintex. You just "tint as you rinse". For lace-trimmed silks, there is a special Tintex that tints the silk without coloring the lace.

. . . . and there are fast and lustrous Tintex dark colors, too—Black, Navy Blue, Brown, Cardinal Red, Dark Green, Dark Blue and Khaki Brown. See them all on the Tintex Color Card—26 tints and dyes!

[Blue Box—for lace-trimmed silks (tints the silk—lace remains white). Gray Box—for tinting and dyeing all materials (silk, cotton, mixed goods).]

The Art of Letter Writing

Bread and Butter Notes, the Word of Condolence, or That of Congratulation Are Simple to Pen and Are Acts of Thoughtfulness That Will Not Be Forgotten

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

By Persis Standish.

MORE lost than the lost art of conversation is the lost art of letter writing. I have on my desk two letters, and have had a number of others, asking me questions about when and how certain letters should be written, on what kind of stationery, and in what manner. There are so many varieties of letters, each of their own kind important, that one hesitates to give general rules.

Business letters, of course, we will not discuss, since it is easy for the heads of firms to dictate the policies of their business letters for the whole organization. But there is one thing I would like to say about business letters that come to newspapers. Many of our correspondents complain now and then that they do not receive prompt answers. If they do not, it is because of the volume of the mail that comes to a newspaper, rather than for any other reason. For a letter to any department of a newspaper is a sacred thing. There is no other organization in the world that treats letters with the same consideration and the same importance as is given to them as newspapers. I have known it to happen that people have lost good positions for merely neglecting a letter—not letters, but a letter—either in answering it flippantly or neglecting to answer it at all. So our correspondents can write to any department of this paper and receive always the utmost consideration, the utmost silence, if they wish, and get the promptest reply it is possible to give. First come, first served.

The Letter of Condolence.

Next to the newspaper letters, the ones that socially should receive the first consideration are those of condolence. There is no possible way of expressing sympathy that is so adequate and at the same time so satisfying to the recipient as a letter. The letter need not be long, it need not be flowery, but it is easy to say in black and white things that are hard to express in the spoken word. When you see the bereaved one your own tears choke you, but if you are at a distance you can really express what you feel in sympathy for them. A letter of condolence can be extremely simple. Here is one received lately by a woman who had lost a child, from some one who is a practical stranger to her.

"Dear Mrs. Green: The little that the human word can do to express human sympathy, I wish to make it do now. Will you take the wish for the deed and believe that my heart goes out to you in this hour of your sorrow?

"CORA BROWN."

Expressing Thanks.

Next in importance in the letter writing scheme are letters of gratitude. They should be written almost immediately after the receipt of either gift or favor. Of course, in the case of wedding gifts they may be postponed until the honeymoon is over, if the bride wishes. However, this means a little bit procrastinating to me, as it is much easier to write a letter hot off the pan, if you know what I mean, than to try to write it a few weeks later when the incident is cold. For instance, if the bride writes immediately after she has received each gift, she will not miss the time that it takes to write the individual note and she will not become confused as to which letters she has written, and will not forget anybody. Also, she will not have a tremendous labor before her when she comes back from her honeymoon.

Letters of thanks for Christmas gifts should be sent no later than the 15th of January. A letter of gratitude for a gift can be very short, indeed, and still express a great deal of appreciation.

The typical letter for the bride or other recipient of gifts should be something like this:

"My dear Harriet: How do you manage to know just what it is I most desire to possess? Then, how do you manage to have it here at just the right moment when I most wish to possess it? I think you must either be or own a wizard.

"Thank you so much for the lovely gift. Do come and see it in my house. I shall be here, too. Affectionately,

"HAZEL."

Under the heading of letters of gratitude, of course the "bread and butter" letters are a most important group. They must be written immediately upon one's return from a visit. If one has been some time in a house—say a week or two—a short letter will not do. The letter then must be at least several pages long and attempt to chronicle events since one has left the house.

A visit of a week-end calls for just a note. Some very punctilious people write such a letter even to dinner hostesses and luncheon hostesses, if the dinner and luncheons were given for them especially. This is not absolutely necessary where a call can be paid shortly after the event, but it is nice, particularly if the guest of honor happened to be from out of town and the hostess was the friend of a very good friend.

Sending flowers sometimes does away with the necessity of writing such letters, but in case one sends flowers one should express on the card that goes with them one's appreciation for hospitality received.

Congratulations.

Letters of congratulation are among the hardest of all to write, but they are among the most delightful to receive. They should be written not only to men who are engaged to be married, but also in many other cases, such as graduations from college, success in an artistic way, remarkable promotions, and any other good fortune that happens to a dear friend. Of course, no example is needed here of this sort of letter because it is so easy to write from your heart on such an occasion.

Of love letters there is not much to say, Miss Blake having said most of it already, and probably warned you with the old slogan: "Write, and fear no man. Do not write, and fear no woman." However, there are lots of letters in social intercourse which are quite as dangerous as love letters, and about which nobody hears until there is a suit for libel, or other fracas not quite so serious, but equally unpleasant. In a general way it is safest never to say an unkind thing at all, but it is positively dangerous to say one in a letter. Your dearest friend today may turn out to be your dearest enemy tomorrow. This may sound cynical, but it is the way of the world.

A man or a woman have come between two men and two women many times. Letters have been shown in which something written in the strictest confidence and meant only for loving eyes have been flaunted before cynical ones, and then the little "bird on the wire" tells all, and there is trouble. Unless you absolutely know such and such to be a fact never put it in a letter. Then, if you know that it is a fact and it is an unpleasant fact, still do not put it in a letter. If you have any warning to give, or if you wish to say anything unpleasant, say it—but never write it!

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

The color scheme of this delightful room is cream and blue, with curtains bound in vermilion.

Sun Rooms Bring the Brightness and Freshness of Spring Days Right Into the House.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SPRING days, clear skies and pleasant weather bring around "sun room time" again. We must plan now to brighten up our sun rooms, to make them more livable for the many coming days which we shall enjoy in them. Such a wide variety of furnishings and decorations are on the market that any number of interesting schemes may be carried out successfully.

Adjoining a living room done in French provincial style is the charmingly simple little sun room illustrated today. The walls are covered with a blue and cream plaid paper and woodwork is painted deep blue. A group of three windows almost fills one wall. Novel window curtains are made of cream colored voile, bound with vermilion. They are finished at the top with narrow French headings, and are caught back with vermilion cords. Extending across the full width at the top of the window is a narrow wooden shelf, painted blue to match the woodwork. Colorful bits of odd pottery are ranged along this shelf. Placed against the group of windows is an old hickory flag seat settee. A pair of arm chairs and a side chair at a little desk match the settee.

Red, blue and cream colored striped linen makes seat pads for all of these. Decorative flowered linen upholsters a large, comfortable arm chair. A drop leaf table of hickory in one corner near the end of the settee holds a bright colored pottery lamp, with a lemon yellow paper shade decorated in black, as well as an enameled box and an ash tray. A small table at the other end holds a bright bowl of flowers. A wrought iron bridge lamp, lighting the desk, has a shade of accordion plaited, flowered yellow calico. Deep blue fiber rugging completely covers the floor.

Quite different in character is a larger and more luxurious sun room. Walls and woodwork are painted a pale sage green. At the many casement windows are curtains of copper colored silk gauze. They are sill length, hanging straight, and are edged with narrow multi-colored worsted fringe. Large comfortable bent reed chairs and sofa are enameled burnt orange with trims of deep green. Striped glazed chintz cushions repeat these colors. A wrought iron settee at one side of the room is fitted with figured linen cushions and a wrought iron bench, placed before one group of windows, has a shiny black patent leather seat pad.

As colorful as a garden of blooms is another sun room in a small apartment. Walls are a light sunny yellow and the woodwork is black, decorated with a fine line of jade green. Black tarlatan, gathered very full and stitched at the hems with several rows of brightly colored worsted, is used for window curtains. The furniture is a combination of reed and wood, painted jade green with black trims. Cushions for the chairs and sofa are of linen frieze in rainbow stripes of brilliant hue. Throwing the colors into strong relief is the black wool chenille floor covering.

Rainbow effects evidence great popularity for sun room use. At a recent exhibit, one of the most favored suites was one made of stick style bent reed, the sticks painted in alternating rainbow colors. The suite is set up in interesting display room. Walls are paneled and painted cream color with the panelings picked out in bright violet. At the windows are glass curtains of natural colored casement cloth, bordered with two inch bands of violet and sapphire blue glass rings. Cushions on the rainbow furniture are made of violet homespun, piped with blue. A pair of blue glass lamps on end tables have plaited violet paper shades, tied with blue tassel cords. Deep blue rugs are used on the floor.

Pleasingly effective is a sun room in a suburban house. The walls are done in pearl gray paper with an allover pattern of foliage in two tones of green and gray. Woodwork is painted a soft leaf green. Curtains at the long French windows are illusively different. They are made of two thicknesses of casement gauze, hanging straight to the floor. The one against the glass is of amber, the other of pale pinkish orange. They produce a soft glowing light that is most fascinating.

Bent reed furniture is painted a deep amber with leaf green trims. Cushions are of ombré striped material, shading from pale amber to deep orange. End tables and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of mellow golden maple. Green glass lamps conveniently placed have parchment shades. An extra arm chair placed near a set of narrow book shelves is upholstered in green and yellow checked linen. An amber glass lamp on a square maple table at one side of the chair has a marbleized paper shade. A Chinese rug almost completely covers the floor.

Incidental tables are of wrought iron with decorative tile tops. A colorful screen, painted in an italian renaissance design, stands in one corner of the room. Wrought iron lamps have shades of figured paper. Large black and white marbleized rubber tiles cover the floor. Wrought iron doors separate this sun room from the adjoining living room.

My Greatest Thrill

In the Nick of Time.

It was during the construction of my firm's new building. I came to see how the work was progressing. The elevators were running, but doors had not yet been put in for them. I looked down from the sixth floor to see where the elevator was, and not seeing it down below, I lifted my head. No sooner had I done this than the elevator, coming down, passed the floor I was standing on. If I had remained looking down a second longer I wouldn't be writing this.

I shudder now when I think of my narrow escape. W. McV.

A Scare in a Cave.

When I was a girl of about 15 I went with a party of twenty people to explore a cave.

The entrance was near the river's brink. It was a tunnel four or five feet in length and just large enough for my father and one of the women, who weighed 200, to squeeze in.

We had to lie flat and crawl, till suddenly we found ourselves in a spacious room. There were many such enlargements, each to be entered through tunnels or narrow winding passage ways. We ah-ed and oh-ed till several hours had elapsed.

At last we turned to retrace our steps, noticing the freakish shadows from our two lanterns flit about, listening to the weird sounds made by falling stones and dripping water. Then, lo! We had lost our way. Even the dog stood still and stared. The river was pouring in through an opening. The rush and roar of the angry waters was sickening. We were terror stricken. A woman fainted, another prayed, the rest of us stood like statues mute and still.

A brave little boy walked forward and discovered our river was only a stream of light, while the mighty roar of the water was the sound made by the wind outside, all of which had gone unnoticed when we had entered.

To this day my heart stands still for a second when I think of the terrible moment when we first beheld that "stream." G. E. A.

Remembered.

Years ago, while living in a small town, I played with a little girl next door who later married a wealthy man and took up her residence in a large city. I often heard of her wealth and charities, but never supposed she would have time to give her former playmate a thought.

My greatest thrill occurred on Christmas day, when the postman handed me a greeting card from her enclosing a good substantial check, with a few personal words added urging me to visit her this coming summer. A. A. E.

Scaring a Wildcat.

It was about 3 o'clock in the morning in a Canadian mining camp, where we were living, when I was awakened by a great commotion among the chickens. I went to the back door and saw a large cat just outside the henhouse door. I picked up some potatoes that were in the kitchen and threw them at the cat. It turned toward me, bristled up, and came in my direction.

I closed the door hurriedly and called my husband. As we went out the door we saw the cat go around the house and suddenly realized it was a wild cat! MRS. J. R. T.

A Narrow Escape.

After a long and tiring motor trip we had arrived in a strange town and rented a sleeping room in a private home. Having driven all day and the night before, we retired early and in a few minutes were almost asleep when I told my husband that I thought I smelled gas. He said he did, too, and turned on the electric light and saw an open gas pipe close to the electric light fixture in the ceiling. He lighted a match and a small explosion followed and a stream of flame burst from the pipe.

We told the people in whose home we were, and they immediately put a cap on the pipe, explaining that they had just turned on the gas, having moved in the house only a few days before and did not know there was a gas pipe in that room. MRS. A. E. P.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

High Handed.

Several years ago I boasted a first hand knowledge of numismatics. As I knew the majority of rare United States coins, I was ever on the lookout for them. When the neighborhood grocer, learning of my hobby, came to me and offered to sell me the score or so of coins that he had taken in during his years of business, I bought the lot after seeing several choice specimens. But, imagine my surprise, when, looking my purchase over more carefully, I found an almost perfect silver dollar of the year 1794, the first year they were coined. As I made no secret of my good fortune, my neighbors soon knew of it.

The next Sunday, a rather talkative woman I had known for some time came over and asked to borrow my coins, as one of her guests was a coin dealer and she would like to show him my collection. I did not feel worried when she failed to return them that evening. Monday she came over, and handing me my case, glibly began: "My friend who visited me last night, so wanted to buy your dollar that I couldn't refuse him, knowing you would be glad to get the money."

Then, while I stood speechless, she handed me $50 and added: "I went to so much trouble on your account that I know you won't miss the $10 that I took for myself to buy a new hat with." She then turned and walked away. MRS. R. C.

A Pretty Long Minute.

One day a neighbor girl came over to my house and asked me if I would lend her my skates for a minute, as she wanted to show them to her mother, for she wanted a pair like them. Of course I consented. After many weeks of waiting she returned them, all rusty and bent, saying, "I had an awfully nice time on them, but mother said I had better return them before something happens to them." They were so rusty I could never use them again. E. M. C.

CHILDREN ONCE PUNY—NOW NO MOTHER'S CARE

Before that wonderful little friend of school-children came to town known as PARTOLA,—"The Doctor in Candy Form"—many boys and girls were puny, sickly, a great care and worry to mothers. They were constipated, never told mother, hence the prevalence of system poisoning, professionally known as Toxemia.

But now, mother uses this remedy the little ones like—PARTOLA, a delightful pleasant mint-flavored laxative and internal antiseptic—that keeps bowels regular, appetites sharpened, digestion vigorous and system free from the poisonous bacteria that cause the child to fail in health and studies.

PARTOLA ANTISEPTIC & LAXATIVE The Doctor in Candy Form

Popular Actor Now Able to Eat What He Likes

THOUSANDS of theater-goers have rocked with laughter at "Charley" Grapewin's delightful comedy acts. But few ever guessed that some of Mr. Grapewin's funniest scenes were played while he was suffering agonies with stomach trouble.

While playing in his well-known success, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," Mr. Grapewin's stomach trouble became so bad that it seemed as if he might have to quit the stage for a time. Fortunately, he was induced to try Adlerika. Results were so good that he has never been without a bottle since. "It surely is great," he declares, "to be able to eat anything I want without fear of gas or other stomach trouble."

Intestinal Stasis

STOMACH GAS, indigestion, gas bloating, and other forms of stomach and bowel trouble are often due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This increasingly common disease, which is usually caused by improper food, lack of exercise, and other faults of modern life, is said to afflict three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis simply means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. Instead of being promptly passed out of the bowels, this waste matter remains many hours or even days longer than it should. It then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and causes gas bloating, sour stomach, indigestion and sleeplessness.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move daily, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or soda or magnesia cannot give more than temporary relief from Intestinal Stasis or Gas. It can be relieved permanently only by continued REAL intestinal cleansing.

Adlerika, first used by Dr. Carl Weschcke in his private practice, is a bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic which acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other detergent and gas-expelling elements.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of the first effects of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might poison your system.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as most stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Many physicians recognize it as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary.

Don't think if your bowels move daily that you cannot have Intestinal Stasis. Gas is one of the most common symptoms. You'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter which Adlerika brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it.

The popular actor, Mr. Charles Grapewin, of 311 N. Arden Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Grapewin is known to thousands of theater-goers throughout the United States and Canada.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli.—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

ZIP COON ate supper with me last night and afterwards he told me a story. Here it is as he told it to me:

His brother, Jim Coon, lives just over the hill and he's a great fisherman. Every time he passes Crafty Fox's den on his way to fish he sings out: "Hey, Crafty, old top, this is a great day for the fish to bite. Why don't you cut yourself a pole and come along? I'll show you how to hook up the nicest mess of wiggly shiners you ever clapped your eyes on."

He does not really want Crafty to come with him. He just says it to tease him.

"Go chase yourself," snaps back Crafty. "You can't teach me how to fish. I knew before you were born."

"All right," grins brother Jim. "I'll bet you don't know how to put a worm on a hook and you can't tell whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing up your bait." Then he would go whistling down the road.

He would go whistling down the road.

One day when he came to the lake he dropped his line into the water and the first bite—what do you think he pulled up? Old Tommy Turtle. Then Jim began to tease him.

"I won't let you go, Tommy, unless you pomise me you'll clean up all that old junk lying around the bottom of this fishing hole."

"I promise," said Tommy. "Just let me get back into the water and I'll move all that junk out of the way. I promise."

So kerplunk! Back he dived.

Brother Jim had not fished long before he saw old Crafty Fox sneaking through the woods with a fish pole over his shoulder.

"Get out of here," he barked. "This is my fishing ground and all the fish in it are mine."

"Excuse me for living," answered Brother Jim and moved away to the other side of the hole.

"YOU say I can't fish, hey?" sang out Crafty. "That I don't know whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing my bait, hey? Well, I'll show you."

He dropped his line into the water and the end of his pole began to twitch and bob up and down.

"A bite," he yelled. "A big bite. Now watch me, Jim Coon."

Up came an old busted shoe.

He pulled and pulled with all his might and at last up came an—old busted shoe.

Jim began to holler. "My, my, what a lovely shiner you caught."

Crafty was mad. Into the water went his hook and line. Yank! Another bite. He pulled and pulled and up came an old pair of torn breeches.

Crafty was so mad he began to snort. Just then another jerk came on the line and he pulled up an old pair of suspenders.

ALL that afternoon he did nothing but pull up bits of junk. Finally he was so mad he couldn't stand it any longer. He broke his pole in two and flung it in the lake.

"Don't ever say fish to me again, Jim Coon, or I'll beat you to a frazzle."

Then he staggered home. He was all tuckered out.

Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me.

Brother Jim went over to look at the pile of junk and suddenly he began to laugh, for there was old Tommy Turtle poking his head out of the water.

"I guess I got it all cleared up, Jim Coon. There isn't any more down there. Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me."

He blew a few bubbles and disappeared.

Then Jim rolled around on the bank and nearly burst with laughter because he knew now why Crafty Fox had not caught any fish.

I know a way to get clothes whiter without scrubbing

I'VE told all my neighbors about it, it's so wonderful! No hard rubbing or scrubbing, no boiling—just the simple matter of soaking the week's wash in safe, creamy, sterilizing suds.

Rinso suds! That's the whole secret. Rinso makes the water soft and sudsy all through—and the dirt and stains float right off by themselves!

Even cuffs, hems and edges that always had to be scrubbed until they were frayed, now come snowy with just a touch between the fingers. Of course my clothes last longer this way.

Rinso is kind to my hands, too. Keeps them from getting old and wash-worn.

Try it next washday!

No wasting fuel with Rinso—it sterilizes without boiling.

The Granulated Soap Rinso Soaks Clothes Whiter

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the cicada, sometimes called the locust, should live in the ground for seventeen years as a grub, clinging to the root of some tree and sucking sap from it, and then, some day, should turn loose, dig its way to the outer air and transform into the noisiest insect in the world.

The cicadas come out of the ground as grubs. They crawl hurriedly up the nearest bush, hunch up their backs and burst open their grub jackets. Then the sturdy, full grown cicada comes out, as big as a man's thumb. It is radiant, equipped with whirring wings, and given to much noise. Everybody is familiar with the rasping noise that the American cicada sets up. Yet it is only the male that is noisy. He has a bit of dry membrane like a drum head that he uses for the purpose. He pushes it in and out rapidly. He makes a noise on the same principle as the automobile horn.

It is little trouble on summer days to find, hanging on the bushes along the roadside the shells from which these cicadas have come. Often, also, it is easy to find pairs of cicada lovers. They take their places side by side on the limb of a tree. There they sit through the summer day and night, the female pensive, the male beating his endless serenade.

The female cuts a slit in the bark of the tree and lays her eggs. After a while these hatch out into funny looking little worm like things. These crawl out to the end of a limb and jump off. They fall upon the ground and dig in. They seize some friendly root and hang on. They are down for seventeen years. In most cases whole swarms go down at a time, set their alarm clocks for seventeen years, and all come up again at almost the same moment, when that time has passed. These are called seventeen year locusts. There are irregulars in the ranks, however, that appear at irregular intervals. But among the wierdest marvels of nature are these huge swarms that come to light but once in seventeen years.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

My little cousin, aged 3, saw a dog crossing the street the other day and said to me: "That dog is crossing the street without his mother."

Then on further thought, she said: "But it's all right; he looked both ways."

E. W.

Robert, my little next door friend, always kept a close watch on me when I went to get the car out, but his mother had told him he must never ask me to take him riding.

One day, seeing him with his hat and coat all on and standing near the hedge, I said brightly, "Well, Robert, are you going somewhere today?"

"O, yes," he answered at once, then added, "I fink I is, but I isn't asked yet."

B. R.

Tommy went to the hospital to see mother and the new baby sister. When his visit was over and he picked up his cap to leave the baby awoke and cried.

"Boy!" exclaimed Tommy proudly, "listen to her holler 'cause I gotta go!"

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS by Sara Moore

SONG FOR THE SENTIMENTAL.

Mary had a conscience, one
That was as chill as snow.
And everywhere that Mary went
It horned right in. You know!

She scorned to wed a millionaire
And make a loveless match.
She lost him to a debutante
Who made a clever snatch.

Now Mary has to realize
—Of toil she's had her fill—
If working girls won't wed for cash. . .
Some thrifty heiress will.

(Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.)

MEMORIAL.

Once, when one lost her sturdy oak
She wore black widow's veiling;
But even styles in mourning change,
A fact there's no assailing.
Though I've lost Jack I wear no weeds,
Crepe bands would be bologny,
His memory is kept alive
By checks for alimony.

GROUNDS FOR MARRIAGE.

O, I am jilting Jerry and
Dear Jerry's jilting me.
We do not lack affection, just
Compatibility.

For Jerry owns a motor boat
And I prefer a yawl;
I do the old time breast stroke; he
Performs that awkward crawl.

He does not like the car I drive;
I scorn his cigarets;
The tunes that raise my temperature
Are ones that he forgets.

And so we part regretfully
And feel that life's a botch.
'Tis not enough to wed upon
A mutual hate of—Scotch.

LADIES IN CRIME

Bernice Zalimas—Two Trials and Out

Gets 14 Years Dressed in Mourning, but Gets Out in Gay Clothing

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

IN HER WIDOW'S WEEDS Mrs. Bernice Zalimas was given 14 years in the penitentiary on a charge of murdering her husband of a few months with arsenic. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE first time she went to trial Bernice Zalimas, plump and pretty Lithuanian cloak model, wore all black, for wasn't she in mourning for her husband, Dominick, even though it was for his murder that she was being tried? She fainted often, and was sentenced to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Then the Supreme court remanded the case back for a new trial.

The second time she sat in court, Bernice, her widow's grief somewhat assuaged, wore those golden shades that combine happily with golden hair. She smiled more than she swooned. She was acquitted.

HONEYMOON TRAGEDY

From the very beginning, when the authorities first began to hint that this bride of four months had given arsenic to her husband, that she might be fancy free for other loves, Bernice had fashioned her defense, passionately, out of an indictment of her own Lithuanian neighbors in the vicinity of South Halsted and 48th streets.

"When any one dies suddenly in the Lithuanian neighborhood," the 23 year old bride had said, and kept on saying, "all the old women have a grand time making new gossip by stirring up rumors of murder. And when the wife is young and pretty and blonde she has no chance to escape being accused of killing her husband."

Officially, Dominick died of pneumonia and nephritis. The doctor summoned to the honeymoon flat at 4936 South Loomis avenue some four hours after Dominick was dead signed the death certificate this wise. That was on Nov. 18, 1924. Then the tiny whispers began to filter their way in and out of the neighborhood. They gathered momentum, and presently, on the first day of December, Dr. Irving Porges, a coroner's physician, was sent out to the house. The question mark which the city investigators thrust up was, "How could the physician, hastily summoned after Zalimas' death, have had opportunity to make the proper diagnosis?" The grave was opened; the dead man's vital organs were removed. A few days more, and Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's chemist, announced his findings:

"Enough arsenic to kill ten people."

TONGUES BEGIN TO WAG

Then the busy tongues began to wag in excited Lithuanian syllables. The old wives recalled Bernice's affection for two or three castoff suitors, especially the baker who came to deliver a dozen rolls and tarried long. They recollected how stormy had been the honeymoon. They remembered the separation of the newly wedded pair, and a reconciliation, shortly before the husband's death.

A little girl told what she said she knew of the comely blonde's stolen kisses with the visiting bakery man. A druggist searched his records to find that a Mrs. Zalimas had purchased arsenic from him.

And the police went out and brought Mrs. Zalimas back to jail.

Bernice was about a perfect 42, fine, buxom. But her yellow hair, piled high on her head, her pink cheeks, and her accent made of the obscure cloak model, a pivot figure over at the jail. She told how all her life she had wanted to get ahead, and of the busy days that followed it seemed as if she had succeeded in a way of which she had never dreamed.

While neighbors were over in the criminal court telling the prosecutors their version of the suspicious circumstances of Dominick's taking off, Bernice, from behind the bars, was growing autobiographical.

QUITE A LINGUIST

"I came from Lithuania when I was eight years old, and studied English in school. I speak also the Polish, the Russian and the Bohemian, as well as the Lithuanian. I went to work in a soap factory. I got to be assistant forelady. But a soap factory's no place for a girl with, what you call it, ambition.

"So I looked around and I got a job selling pretty dresses in a store. Those neighbor women, O, how they hated me when I left the factory. Jealous, they were.

"I bought myself a few dresses cheap, but they were pretty. Yes, and some silk stockings. I lived in the Lithuanian neighborhood with pa and ma. But I didn't speak to the neighbors. I knew better. I knew they didn't like me and they wanted to get something on me. Ma died three years ago, and so when I married Dominick he stayed on in the house with pa."

More specifically, on the charge that she had fed her bridegroom arsenic soup, Bernice made emphatic denial. First, that she hadn't done it; second, that the neighbors always try to frame a young widow, especially if they are jealous of her yellow hair and her black silk stockings; and, third, that she was too smart to have got herself caught if she had done it.

COULD HAVE ESCAPED

"If I'd a-killed him," she declared, I had two weeks in which to get away, and they'd a-never got me. Why, I had the post-mortem performed myself, to shut up those tongues of the old gossips."

But the post-mortem report that one-tenth of a grain of arsenic had been found, coupled with the stories the others were telling the investigators over in the Criminal court, held Bernice to the grand jury, and a few weeks later she was indicted for murder.

All the time she protested that her husband, who was a carpenter for the Pullman company by days and a practicing naprapath by nights, was forever "fussing with herbs and medicines" and must have taken arsenical poison by mistake.

Somebody found a two pound box of arsenic in the attic of her home. Somebody else, a little ten year old Anna Skbereckl, told of visiting Bernice and always being told to run away and play when Leo Kalinowski, the affectionate baker, came with the day's quota of bread and rolls. Once, Anna was sure, she had seen the two hugging and kissing.

TROUBLE PATCHED UP

These two pieces of evidence, together with the coroner's report were sufficient to the men on the grand jury. They indicted her for murder.

Then, to add his contribution, came Bruno, brother of the dead man. He told how Dominick and the coy but plump Bernice had been married on Independence day that same year, 1925. The storms had not been long in coming. On Oct. 7 the two separated. Several weeks later, Bruno said, he accompanied his brother to the office of an attorney to start divorce proceedings against the bride. Next day Dominick, accompanied this time by two brothers, went to tell Bernice what he was about to do.

"He was in there a long time," said Bruno, "and when he came out, he told us to go away, that everything was patched up, and there would be no divorce. We went."

The following night, so the story went on, Dominick telephoned his wife that he was ill, had pains in the chest and stomach; that the agony had come on just after he had eaten a nice bowl of soup at dinner that evening. Two days more—it is Nov. 14 now—he telephoned Bruno, so Bruno told the authorities, that the reconciliation business was all off and that he purposed to start divorce proceedings at once. He asked Bruno to come over and talk things over. Bruno didn't hurry. Four days passed, and the morning of the 18th Bruno learned that Dominick was dead.

That was the foundation upon which Assistant State's Attorneys Louis Gelman and Louis Blumenthal built their case.

YES, SHE'S FAT

Bernice took the stand. Yes, she was fat. But she was pretty. In response to the questionings of her attorney, Eugene McGarry, she told of her wedding. There were four merry days of "feasting" she explained.

As for Leo, the baker, the ex-suitor, why "of course I kissed him. All men kiss the bride," and that was the end of that.

When the questions touched the death scenes, Bernice just couldn't stand it. She sobbed and cried and wept, until the prosecutors were ready to blind-fold the jury and muffle their ears. Then she took out a handkerchief to wipe her eyes, and the fragrance of heliotrope perfume wafted its soft way down to the jury box. So the judge adjourned the session and the twelve good men and true were hurried out into an ante room to smoke black cigars and forget the heliotrope and the tears.

The last day of the trial, when Attorney McGarry was finishing his plea for her innocence, Bernice fainted. It took five men to carry her into the judge's chambers, but when she came to she gave unto each a long smile.

BUT IN NEW CLOTHES OF GAY COLORS, at her second trial, Bernice had her name enrolled on Cook county's growing list of women acquitted of murder. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The jury, that May day, listened intently as the prosecutors urged them not to let a pretty face and a few tears sway them. They deliberated three hours and thirty-five minutes. Then the foreman told the court that the twelve had found her guilty and sentenced her to 14 years in the penitentiary.

She didn't faint this time. She sprawled on her father's shoulder, and cried out:

"O, what can I say? Why have they condemned me so? God knows I am innocent of this terrible charge."

Next day, over in the jail, still puzzled because she had not been sent out, number 33, in the list of ladies tried for murder and acquitted, Bernice said this:

"I loved my husband and I always thought so much of the laws of this country. But now I can't love my husband nor the country. Why, I asked for the post-mortem. He was always drinking herb medicine; probably he mixed it wrong. But I'll get out yet, because I am innocent."

SMIRCH ON FAIR NAME

Then she explained fervently that what really hurt was not the thought of spending 14 years in jail, but the smirch on her fair name. Only, she could just as well dispense with the 14 year sentence, too.

The following August Bernice filed a suit in the Superior court to collect her husband's insurance. That she wanted to use it to pay her expenses for her second trial for his murder did not apparently strike her as ironic. It was a nice problem she had before her. Dominick was insured for $5,000. But if he met death by accidental or violent means then the insurance money doubled. She wanted the $10,000, but she couldn't say that his death was violent. For she needed the money to prove just the opposite. She maintained that death was accidental and that the $10,000 was hers by right and reason.

In the midst of these deliberations the Supreme court granted her a stay of sentence, then a new trial, on the grounds of a technical flaw in the admission of evidence by the druggist who said he had sold arsenic to a Mrs. Zalimas, but wouldn't identify her as the Mrs. Zalimas on trial.

In January, 1926, she was granted bail and went to a hospital for a while. By the spring of the year she was rested, slimmer, and had some pretty new clothes. Her year of mourning was up, and she burst forth in gay colors.

She took the stand. Attorney McGarry asked his client, "Did you ever administer poison to your husband?"

I DIDN'T DO IT!

Then things began to happen in that courtroom. Bernice cut swaths in the air with her hands. Her body swayed back and forth. In a frenzy of screams she yelled out, "I didn't do it! Why should I do it? I swear to Almighty God I didn't do it!"

Then she swooned and court was temporarily adjourned.

Once again the jury went out. This time they stayed out two hours and a half. Once again they filed in. This time the foreman announced that the twelve had found Bernice Zalimas not guilty.

"Thank God, thank God" sang out the exuberant Bernice, and she started on a hugging and kissing pilgrimage. She made for the jury box. She grabbed the first man in line. He was so tiny and she was still so buxom. She swung on to him, she flung her arms about his neck; she planted a kiss on his cheek. He nearly lost his balance, he teetered, he braced himself against her. And he blushed a deep red.

Number two, number three, number four, and on until seven jurors had been kissed. I saw a tall thin man, near the back, dodge toward the door as he murmured to his companion, "I'm gonna get out of this."

Four others followed suit. Bernice, calmer now, gave out her official paan of thanks.

"I prayed to God, and He answered my prayer. Now I have got justice and I am going to leave Chicago for a while and try to forget. I may go to New York, perhaps to Europe."

No, Bernice didn't go to Europe.

She got married. Not to Leo, the baker. But to Joseph Patunis of Chicago, and they are living happily.

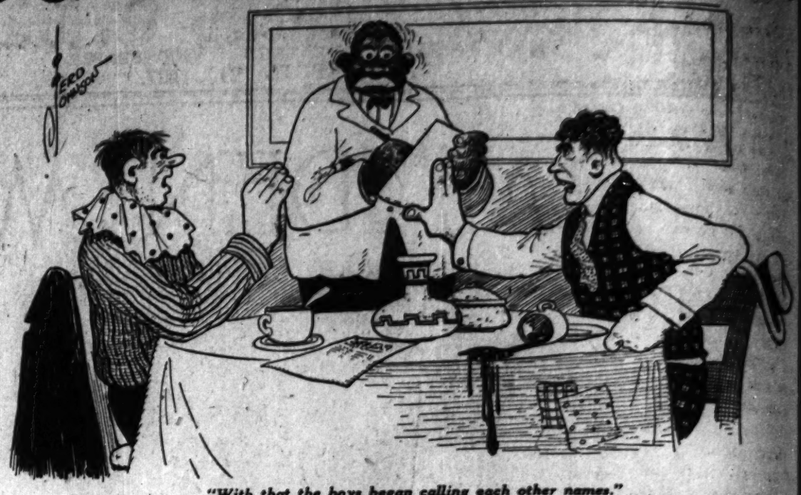
THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

On Peacemakers, and the Trouble They Stir Up.



"With that the boys began calling each other names."

A GREAT deal of talk about peace has been going around lately, and it is my opinion that the authorities ought to regulate this kind of thing, because I have noticed that whenever you try to stir up peace between a couple of old established enemies you are likely to cause trouble.

I mean that if I have positive information that a gentleman is a dirty bum and no gentleman, I do not want anybody to show me that I am mistaken, because that would make me out a sucker, and anyway, I know better. Moreover, I once had an experience with peacemakers that came near costing me a large sum of dough and convinced me that, as a general proposition, peace is bad for business in my business.

A HANDKERCHIEF FIGHTER

At the time that I am speaking about I had a heavyweight chump by the name of Curley Herr, who was what we call a handkerchief fighter. By that I do not mean to imply that he actually carried a handkerchief, because he was in no way effeminate or refined, and in justice to him I will state that he was called a handkerchief fighter merely because he was a bum and could have wrapped up all his baggage in a handkerchief, if any.

There was another chump in the town by the name of Young Reeling, and, after some time, the gentleman who promoted the bouts in this town suggested that we should toss the two of them into the ring and decide which was the worst, although that was a very fine point and something like trying to decide whether the deuce of clubs is worse than the deuce of spades.

However, we made the match, and in collaboration with the gentleman who managed Young Reeling, I began sending statements to the newspapers in which both chumps said very insulting things about each other, all of which were substantially correct in my opinion, but intended only in a spirit of fair, manly sport, nevertheless. Of course, we did not tell our chumps that we were sending these articles to the press, and they became very angry at each other, and the customers were looking forward to a grudge fight and we were greatly pleased, because this was good for business.

FORGERY!

But in this town there were some people in the reform business who followed the peace business as a side line, and when they began to read about this grudge fight they thought it would be a fine thing to make friends of my bum and the other bum. You cannot imagine the dishonest and unsportsmanlike methods that these people will descend to when they decide that they have got to cause peace, and you will be surprised to learn that they actually forged the signatures of Curley Herr and Young Reeling to accomplish their purpose. So on the day before the fight my fellow received a letter stating:

"Old Pal Curley: What is the sense of you and I being enemies. Leave us talk it over in a friendly way. Be my guest for dinner at eight o'clock tonight at the Owl lunch.

"Your Pal,
"YOUNG REELING."

And Young Reeling received a letter stating the same thing, and signed with my guy's name.

AT THE OWL LUNCH

I assure you that none of us other gentlemen knew anything about this underhanded attempt to corrupt two sincere athletes, or we would have stopped it, because if it had gotten into the papers it would have cast a bomb shell on to the escutcheon of clean sport in that town.

But these peace people sent an anonymous tip to the sporting editors, and they were all concealed in the ice box of the Owl lunch when my guy walked in and shook hands with Young Reeling. The waiter handed the boys the menu and my bum, figuring that he was a guest, just handed it back and said, "I'll take a double order of that." And Young Reeling, figuring that Curley Herr was going to take the fall, as the phrase goes, also handed back the menu and said, 'I will take the same and a cup of coffee."

I do not know how long these boys were guilty of peaceful relations, but nothing of an unpleasant nature occurred until the waiter came back with the check, which was for $12, and my bum pointed to the other bum and said, "Give it to him as I am his guest."

"What do mean you are my guest?" Young Reeling replied, "Because I have got no dough, as I am your guest."

"I have got a letter here which says I am your guest," Curley Herr said, and Young Reeling also took out a letter and said, "Why, you cheap bum, I have got a letter which says I am your guest."

A NARROW ESCAPE

With that the boys began calling each other names, and Curley Herr was sitting on the floor under the table with this other boy's head between his knees, pounding him on the nose, or potato, with a five pound sugar bowl when Mr. Swanson, the proprietor of the joint, came out from behind the counter and threw both of the noble gladiators out of the Owl lunch.

Well, that was a very narrow escape for us, because the sporting editors had to tell their readers that they had seen Curley Herr and Young Reeling in a brawl, and consequently the deal was a sell out. But when I think of the deceitful methods of those people who go around trying to stir up peace all the time, I am convinced that peace talk is dangerous propaganda and a constant menace to business.

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

It Seems to Be A Horse on The Two Boys

[The boys are in Pete's office preparing to sign the papers for the horse they have just purchased from him.]

Sam—What is we gotta sign, Pete, dat's whut I wanna know?

Pete—Yo' boys have a seat heah an' I'll go out an' see if I can't dig up some refreshments. I'll be back in a minute.

Sam—Take yo' time, Pete, take yo' time. We'll wait heah.

Sam—Whut is I done done now, Henry?

Henry—In de firs' place, I tol' yo' dat dat broken down nag dat he got out in de yard dere is li'ble to die any minute from old age.

Sam—Well, whut is I gotta do wid it? I can't help it if he dies, kin I?

Henry—De mo' I talk to you, de dumber yo' gits. I tol' yo' dat hoss wasn't worth fifty dollahs, an' when Pete started bluffin' us by tellin' us he had a offer of a hund'ed dollahs, yo' had to holler up an' ast him if he'd sell us de hoss fo' a hund'ed.

"'Tain't nothin' de matter wid dis stuff, is it Pete?"

REFRESHMENTS

Sam—I didn't want nobody else to git de hoss, Henry, 'cause I don' know where I kin git anotheh hoss.

Henry—After yo' said dat, yo' heard whut Pete said. He said, "Sold," so quick dat he like to knocked us both down.

Sam—Well, anyway we got a hoss, Henry.

Henry—We payin' enough to git a flock of 'em like dat one.

Sam—Wait a minute. Heah come Pete back heah now. Don' say no mo'.

Pete—Well, boys, I got a little bottle heah of impo'ted stuff. I sort o' anti-ticipated yo' boys comin' oveh t'night.

Sam—We don' want yo' to anti-ticipate nothin' though, Pete. Ain't no use to do dat but we WILL have a little drink heah on yo'.

Henry—Well, I kind-a feel poorly t'night.

Pete—Boys, heah yo' is. Go ahead, help yo'self.

Sam [losing no time in refreshing himself]—Well, heah I go.

Henry [taking bottle from Sam]—Wait a minute heah. Leave some in dere.

Sam—Um-um—ain't dat sompin'. Dat's pretty good, Pete.

Pete—Go ahead, Henry.

A SECOND BOTTLE

Henry—Well, heah's lookin' at yo' boys.

Sam—Good stuff, ain't it, Henry?

[Pete opens a closet door in his office and brings out another bottle for his own use.]

Henry—Whut is yo' fixin' to do, Pete?

Pete—I got anotheh bottle o' stuff heah in de closet. Yo' boys go ahead an' drink de bottle I brought yo'—I'll drink dis.

Henry [suspiciously]—O—O.

Sam [frightened]—Awa—Awa—'tain't nothin' de matteh wid dis stuff, is it, Pete?

Pete—Oh, no. But I been drinkin' dis same stuff heah fo' years an' years an' I ain't neveh been sick from it.

Henry—Check me out from now on.

Sam—Well, let's git to talkin' heah 'bout de hoss.

Pete—Now, boys, I done done yo' a favor an' sold yo' de hoss fo' a hun'ed dollahs. Now heah is de papers fo' yo' boys to sign.

Sam—Whut is we gotta sign sompin' fo', Pete?

READING THE PAPERS

Pete—Wheveh yo' sell a hoss yo' gotta sign sompin'. Dat's a rule among hosses. Henry knows dat 'cause Henry's got a lot o' brains, ain't yo', Henry?

Henry [flattered]—O, yeh; Pete's right, Sam.

Sam—Whut do de papers say, Pete?

Pete—Well, I anti-ticipated sellin' dis heah hoss today so I had a friend o' mine to draw up de papers—an' heah dey is.

Sam [as he takes papers from Pete]—Mus' I read 'em, Henry?

Henry—Go ahead, read it out loud.

Pete—Don' yo' boys want anotheh little swig o' dis stuff heah?

Henry—No mo' swigs till we git dis heah hoss thing set.

Sam—Well, heah I go; I goin' read dis thing now, Henry.

Henry—Go ahead; lemme heah it.

Sam—Heah I go——[Reads]. Dis—argument——

Pete—Dat word's "agreement"—"agreement."

Sam—Dat's right. [Reads again.] Dis—agreement—entered into—dis day of—a—nothin' heah—by an' between—Pete Willis—de party o' de firs' part——

Henry—Wait a minute heah. Where is de party goin' be? I don' wanna go to no mo' parties.

Sam—I don't know, Henry. 'Splain dat to us, Pete.

Pete [taking papers from Sam]—Betteh lemme read dat, Sam. I'll git it oveh to yo' quicker. Dat means dat I is de party o' de firs' part an' Sam Smith an' Henry Johnson is de party o' de secon' part. Dey jus 'put dat in to keep from mixin' us up.

Sam—O, yeh, I see. Go ahead, read some mo'.

DE HOSS' AGE

Pete—Whereas, both parties agree to de followin'. De party o' de firs' part agrees to sell de party o' de secon' part a certain hoss—an' de party o' de secon' part agrees to buy from party o' de firs' part, a cer-tain hoss—de price to be twenty-five—[Catching himself.] Wait a minute heah; de man done made a mistake—dat should be a hund'ed. I'll change dat right now. Lemme git de pen an' ink heah.

Sam—Dat mus' be de hoss's age, ain't it, Pete?

Pete—Yo' understan', don' yo', Henry?

Henry—Oh, yeh—sho'—go ahead, I'm listenin'. [Doubtful.] Yo' sho', though, Pete, dat dat twenty-five dollahs don' b'long in dere, is yo'?

Pete—O, sure; I can't see how dey made a mistake like dat, cause a hund'ed is rock bottom.

Sam—Read on dere, Pete.

Pete—Now den, it say heah dat—after dis agreement is signed, de said hoss is in de possession o' de parties o' de secon' part an' regardless o' whut happens to de said hoss, de party o' de firs' part is no longer responsible—or even when de party o' de secon' part go to get said animal an' find him in bad condition, includin' death, he shall still be in de possession o' de party o' de secon' part, an' de party o' de firs' part is immune, exempt an' ev'vything else from bein' li'ble.

Sam—Wait a minute heah, wait a minute heah now.

Pete—Now listen heah, boys; jus' calm down now. I had de lawyer to put dat in fo' yo' own protection. Yo' might not understan' it, Sam, but Henry do, don' you', Henry?

Henry [overcome with flattery]—O, yeh; Sam, Pete is right. Me 'n' yo' is gotta be protected. Think if dat hoss would bite somebody. O, yes, we gotta be protected. Pete is right.

Sam—Dat's a'right, Henry. Jus' so YOU knew whut we is doin' heah. YOU is de president o' de comp'ny, yo' know.

Henry [still a little doubtful]—But tell me dis, Pete—dat hoss ain't dead now, is he?

Pete—O, no. He's jumpin' 'round out dere rarin' to go.

Sam—Read on den, Pete. Whut else do it say dere?

Pete—Dat's all it say. It jus' say heah—witness our han's an' seals dis day. [Picking up the pen.] Now—a, heah is de pen, Sam——

Sam—But wait a minute heah, Pete——

Pete [forcing pen into Sam's hand]—Dat's it. Now, hol' it dis way. Now, don' git ink on yo'.

Sam—But befo' I sign dis thing I wanna say—a——

Pete—Heah 'tis, right down heah on dis line. Now make a S firs——

Sam—Awa—Awa—But I tell yo', Pete——

Pete [forcing his signature]—Now, make a A—M.

Sam—Uh, huh—now—a—awa—awa—but—a——

Pete [guiding Sam's hand]—Now write Smith right dere on de same line. Don't take yo' han' up—you'll git ink all oveh yo'. Dat's it—S-M-I-T-H—Smith—dat's it. Now, Henry——

Sam—Wait a minute heah, though, Pete——

Pete—Be careful, Sam. Neveh talk while we is signin' sompin'. Ain't dat right, Henry?

Henry—O, yeh; Pete is right.

BAD NEWS!

Henry—Don' yo' think dat Sam's name on de thing is 'nuf fo' us, Pete?

Pete—Now listen, Henry—a man wid yo' brains knows dat it gotta have both names on it. Yo' know dat, Henry. Yo' got plen'y sense.

Henry—Pete is right.

Sam—Go ahead an' sign it, Henry.

Pete [as Henry signs the agreement]—Dat's it—Henry—Johnson. [Folding up the agreement.] Now boys, de hoss is yours. Yo' say dat you'd gimme part cash an' I'll git yo' to sign de notes fo' de balance. From now on de hoss b'longs to yo' two boys, an' I wish yo' all de luck in de world now dat de hoss is yours. An' I hopes yo' make a lot o' money.

"Dat's it—S-M-I-T-H, Smith—dat's it."

Sam—Um—um. Henry, now we is got a hoss. De hoss b'longs to us now.

[A knock is heard at the office door.]

Henry—Somebody at de door, Pete.

Pete—Come in, come in.

[One of the boys employed in the poolroom comes into the office, out of breath from running.]

Boy—Pete, yo' betteh come out in de back yard a minute——

Pete—Whut's de matteh?

Boy—I went out in de barn to git some wood to put in de stove an' de hoss is layin' down on de floor coughin'.

Henry—O—O.

Sam [as he jumps up and starts for the barn]—Awa—awa—awa——

Solomon's Pools Are Used Again.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

JERUSALEM.—For the first time in many centuries Solomon's Pools, one of the most ancient water supply systems known to the world, were filled again the other day. They were repaired by the Palestine government and will be used again, as they were in the time of ancient Judea, to supply water temporarily for Jerusalem's population. A public festival in honor of the occasion was held by the municipality.

A COLD WIFE.

Hub—How cold you've been to me lately.

Wife—Stupid! Can't you see it's simply a delicate way of making you understand I need some new furs?—Boston Transcript.

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

My girl friend and I were speaking of science before going to class.

"I know he will call on me," my girl friend said. The rain was coming down in torrents and I did not answer. But after class I asked her how she knew he would call on her.

"Oh, I knew he would look for the bright pupils on such a dark day."

She Takes the Prize.

A neighbor was in the other day. She is a young married woman, and we were talking of colors. She is rather dark and nice looking.

I said "I imagine you look well in pink."

She replied, "Yes, I do, and I also look well in red, green, yellow, blue—in fact, all colors are very becoming to me."

I looked at her to see if she was joking—not a bit. She added, "And there is scarcely any style of dress or hats that I can't wear."

Talk about conceit—she takes first prize!

Pretty Poor Sport.

A good friend of mine, a professional boxer, upon becoming acquainted, immediately extends an invitation to the party to come to his room and inspect his press clippings in regard to his fights, lingering lovingly over hard fought victories, but turning pages quickly when coming upon a defeat.

If questioned, he relates the bad condition he was in at that time, etc., blaming the sympathetic attitude held for the winner by the audience or referee.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE ..... By Duke Bakrak

A Kid's Fight Seems Headed for Tha Soopreme Court.

There's talk of putting me in tha cellar.

ABOUT 4 o'clock lass Tuesday I get a phone call at tha office from the B. and C. From tha way she talks I could tell she was all excited an fer a minute I didn' know whether our youngster had swallowed a safety pin or tha parlor rug. What she wants to know is could I come right home on account she's had a helova row with the janitor. I told her that tha boss was either shootin rotten golf or his wife must of spent more than he expected on tha new Easter outfit and that if I asked him to get off earlier he might tell me to make it permanent. Ennyway I said fer her to light the gas oven and I would speak to the czar when I got home.

'NOTHER FIGHT

Then I get informed it aint tha heat this time but that our youngster and his was playing in tha yard and his kid socks ours over tha eye with a stick and that she saw tha whole thing from our back porch. Incidentally she quite fergot to mention tha fact that our angel child started tha rumpuss by rocking his kid to sleep with a good sized rock which landed somewhere between his adams apple. To hear tha B. and C.'s side of tha case, our Precious was showing the rock to the lad and for some reezon or other it slipped outen her hand.

Ennyway when I get home,

One of these dicks has got a notice in his hand.

tha story is gone over again and from the size of our offspring's eye, tha implement used could have been nothin less than a garbage can or maybe a cupple dozen bed slats. I immediately beat it downstairs to find out what tha hell was tha big idea and instead of being treated like a gentleman, this bohunk drags out his Olaf an shows me tha damage what was done. Outside of a cupple broken teeth and a bloody nose tha child was in perfect condition.

My idea was to make a suggestion in the way of not lettin tha kids play together again, even apologize and maybe split a bottle of brew with him, thereby creating a peace treaty. Instead of all this, he's got fire in his eye an he calls me a dirty name in Swedish an shoves me off his stoop. Well, after sizing up his 5 feet 2 and about 102 pounds I decide that it takes two to make a battle an I busted him on the chin. He went down like a ton of bricks and for fear he might come back to life suddenly and reciprocate I beat it up tha steps.

COMFORT

I musta got up to tha 4th or 5th step when I get a clout in tha middle of my back with what I thought was either a ice box or a set of dining room furniture. What happened was, his ole lady, who weighs about 240 and has got a arm like a side of beef, was watchin tha fracas, and after I got in with my haymaker she's all set to go, with tha business end of a vacuum cleaner.

I'm too much of a gentleman to ever lay my hands on a woman. If I ever do forget myself, I'm certainly not gonna tackle one with her dimensions. When I got back up to our flat I was in such splendid shape that when I tried to eat, tha back of my neck was holding a contest to see whether it could produce more pain than my ankles. The B. and C. witnessed tha entire proceedings from are porch and puts her arm around me an says as how manly I was and that she certainly was proud of me. A bottle of linament wood of done me a damn site more good.

DUNT ANSWER

Ennyway I had to give up tha idea of eatin and after rubbing a ½ pint of alcohol on tha outside and about a pint on tha inside, I went to bed. After tossing fer about three hours and finally dozing off, tha damn door bell started to ring. Tha first thought what struck my mind was that tha Efficiency Engineer of the Furnace Department had dug up a few of his cousins and was preparing to start a New Customer Campaign for our local undertaker.

Well, we didn' answer tha bell and pretty soon two handsome Norwegians by the name of Clancy and Faherty start pounding gently on tha back door with either a telegraph pole or a railroad tie. We got a glass top on tha door and after lighting tha kitchin light, I see one of these dicks has got a notice in his hand. He put it against tha glass, and on top in very beautiful Gothic type it says, "Warrant," further down there was somethin about "Deliver the Body," "Salt an Battery," "Party of tha 1st part," and a lotta other damn fool stuff. Of course I wasn't expecting that they was bringing a invitation to be present at tha King's Court instead of a police court, but they certainly might of waited until morning.

When I opened tha door I figgered maybe by buying these dicks a couple of shots and handing them a little bull they would shove matters off till tha next day. To my great surprise they was very polite as they answered me back by sayin, "Getchyure hat'n coat." I certainly didn' expect that kind of treatment cause they was such perfect gentlemen. They removed their hats everytime their heads itched.

Can ya imagine me with a couple hundred fractured ribs, two or three headaches, and tha B. and C. crying? Guess she figgered she'd hafta go back to work until my 20 years was up. Ennyway when we get to tha station there's talk of putting me in tha cellar, generally when anybody invites me into their cellars I can make it in nothing flat, but I wasn't so damn anxious this time even if tha desk sargeant did call it a jug.

CHARLIE GOODMAN, ESQ.

About this time I figger I got some rights as a citizen an I inquired as how could a guy out an I'm tole I wood hafta get a bondsman. Well, I bought some bonds once in a Building and Loan Ass'n, but fer the life of me I couldn' remember tha guy's name what I bought 'em from. Just then some bozo steps up and slips me his card which reads "Professional Bondsman." He informs me that fer 20 bucks he will go my bond, I couldn' figger out as to why I should give this bird twenty, cause tha case wasn't so serious, and maybe I could get a amateur bondsman for ten. It seems there aint no amateurs in anything ennymore since Red Grange and the rest have joined up so I tole the bird to fix it up and I wood get a hold of 20 iron man for him by the next morning, as they was gonna try tha case then, and I was tole to be there at 10 sharp.

I got to work extra early and xplained tha matter to the boss and he called up a lawyer friend by tha name of Charlie Goodman Esq. Right off tha bat I figgerred any guy by the name of Esq. couldn' be much good, on tha way over to the court he says we not only got a cinch case but that we will turn around and sue the plaintiff for fifty thousand bucks. If any janitor can save that much kale I will make application to their union an take a course in tha profession.

I was tole to be at tha court at 10 sharp and as they are very punktual, the case was called at half past 12. Tha High Priest of tha Royal Garbage Can brought in 10 witnesses and as sure as I'm a foot high nobody saw tha fracas exceptin his ole lady. Also he had what was called character witnesses. If any one of them had any character, I'm a damn poor judge of people. All at a sudden his honor hollers out, "Bakrak Vs Jorgenson" an we all walked up. After Jorgie explained as how I had a revolver in one hand and a knife in the other an showed tha judge all his witnesses, his wife tells the judge that her husband was so excited that he only thought it was a revolver. She claimed it was a shot gun.

25 AND COSTS

Our turn came next and when the judge sees my lawyer deposit 7 or 8 books on the railing he assumes what looked to me like a dirty look. After quoting cases what happened as far back as 600 B. C. to tha present day, the judge admitted he certainly was a smart lawyer and that the verdict was 25 dollars and costs.

I guess from the way the case was handled I shood be lucky I didn' get life. Well, we paid the $41.60, but they aint heard the last of it, even if I hafta take the case to tha soopreme court. If they don't reverse tha verdict, there's gonna be a vacancy in our building and my future gonna be some street in Russia.

MECHANICAL TROUBLE

In a great office building there stood on the same desk a typewriting machine and a telephone that glared at each other despairingly. Both were extremely sad, for all day long the typewriter had been pounded and the telephone continually shouted at.

Thus, when 5 o'clock arrived, each gave a little smile of relief, realizing that the day was finally at a close.

"If I only knew what they were talking about!" moaned the poor typewriter.

"Ah," sighed the other, "I wish I didn't!"—London Opinion.

YESTERDAY I walked into the public library an' inquired kood I please look at a bartender's guide. The elderly squaw behind the desk elevates both eyebrows an' informs me that such low literature is not carried in stock.

"Well," sez I, "have yew any book wich will tell me the exact amount uv horse power wich a raisin contains?"

"Not that I am aware uv," sez old Nokomis, with a withering glance.

"Sum bimbo ought to write such a book," sez I, "because wen one raisin meets more raisins in the same batch, the result seems to be more er less uv a gamble. Sumtimes they act sociable but jist as often they pull the answer to 'Wen Greek Meets Greek.' Yup, sum hombre shood tell the answer to that important query, 'How Many Raisins Constitute A Riot?'"

HE GETS A RISE

"I am afraid we have no books wich will assist yew," sez Father Time's mother-in-law.

"Well," sez I, "even yer own personal opinion wood be appreciated. In uther words, as one home brew hound to another, how many raisins wood yew put——"

"SIR!!!!" howls the female antique, rising to her feet like a whale kumming to the surface.

"O, alrite, alrite," sez I; "far be it frum me to ask anybody to break loose frum their own recipe gratis. I'll buy the information off yuh. Write it down on a hunk uv paper so I can't forget it."

The Human Antique registers Despair an' flops back into her seat with a racket resembling the fall uv Rome. At this moment in breezes Murphy the cop, wich seems to relieve her, because she straightens up again with a triumphant smirk.

"Officer," sez the Flapper uv 1812, "this impertinent creature had the audacity to kum into this highly respectable institution an' inquire about raisins, liquor recipes, home brew, an' uther such vulgar subjects wich are disagreeable to a respectable lady like myself. I wish yew wood take care uv him!"

"I can't take care uv him," sez Murphy, lookin' kinda helpless; "I'd like to help him, alrite, but the truth is, I aint so good myself at making that stuff. My last batch turned out terrible——"

"No, no, no!" squawks the Dignified Relic, "yew don't seem to understand! This person wuz very insulting! He asked me to give him my own personal recipe for the vile stuff! I wuz never so astounded in——"

"I didn't ask ner to give it—I offered to buy it!" sez I.

"Yes, that's it," howls her; "he offered to buy my own personal recipe for——"

"Oho!" snorts Murphy; "now I git the idea! So now he refuses to pay, huh? Why, the crook!" He turned to me. "Lissen," sez he, "give the lady wot yew promised to pay her for the information she passed out!"

The squaw behind the desk turned blue in the face an' almost swallowed her false teeth. Then she separated herself frum a boatload uv adjectives wich, in her opinion, described a few uv the defects uv the police force, after wich she announced in great indignation that she hadn't told me nothing at all.

"Well, then, wot's all the howling fur?" sez Murphy, gitting real peeved. "If yew aint told him nothing, he don't owe yew nothing!"

OFF GOES CHAPEAU

This starts a verbal thunderstorm, so I walks over an' sits down at a table in the reading room. Wen Mrs. Methuselah had finished telling Murphy wot she thought of him in 25,000 words, he retaliated by passing out his un-biased opinion uv her in 4 languages, after wich he left the Castle Uv Knowledge an' wandered down the street still wondering wot the argument wuz all about. Old Rain-In-The-Face snapped her false teeth together an' looked in my direction for sumthing to wail about.

"It is customary," she snorts, "to remove yer hat in this place."

"Fair enough," sez I, crawling out frum under my chapeau. "'Wen in Rome, do as the dagoes do.'"

I picked up a book wot gives the population uv every city in the United States an' Tennessee. This book wuz uv a very instructive nature, in fact, all a person had to do wuz use this particular volume as an authority, an' he wood be given his choice uv the Poor House or a Nut College. According to it, Chicago has a population uv 835,212. The page wich contained the copyright date wuz missing, so I trots up to the desk.

"Wen wuz this book published?" I asks.

"I don't know," sez she; "the date is missing. I suppose sum malicious person has stolen that particular page."

"Probably an autograph collector," sez I; "I have an idea that he took it because it read: 'This book belongs to Geo. Washington.'"

INTERESTING BOOKS

Jist then a hombre kums into the joint an' inquires if they have any law books.

"Yes," sez the girl friend, "we have an Illinois Statute; I think the date is 1885."

"How nise!" squawks the new customer; "yew otta take it out to the cemetary an' cremate it. It wood be a great help to me, I'm sure, because the only law in that volume wich is still in existence is: 'Thou Shall Not Marry More Than One Woman At A Time.'"

In the meantime I found a copy uv Uncle Tom's Cabin under "Recent Fiction." This got quite a snicker out uv me, so Madam X invited me to freeze my face.

"If yew kin git such a loud grin out uv such a sad, touching story as Uncle Tom's Cabin, I fear this place will ring with riotous laughter if yew ever set eyes on that side-splitting volume uv humor, 'The Fort Dearborn Massacre,' sez she.

"I still wish yew had a bartender's guide," sez I, "because I'm worried——"

"Isn't there any other book yew wood be willing to look at?" sez she; 'sumthing uv an intellectual nature?"

"Well, there is another book I woodn't mind glancing at," sez I; "it's called 'The Life An' Death Uv Tracy, The Outlaw, With Actual Photographs Taken In The Morgue.' Drag it out an' I'll see if the pictures interest me."

Mrs. Methuselah threw her hands in the direction uv the comets, an' broke loose with a gasp uv horror, so I figured that maybe this particular work aint regarded as a classic.

"Have yew any travel books?" sez I.

"Well," sez she, "I wood be tempted to give yew any book in this library if yew wood only take yer hat an' travel! I can't git over the idea uv yew kumming into this place an' asking a perfectly respectable lady questions about liquor, bartender's guides, an' the like. I otta have yew arrested, in fact I wood have had yew arrested if that police officer had as much intelligence as an ordinary angle-worm!"

IT WUZ RAINING

"Yew needn't shed any grief-water about it," sez I, gittin' peeved; "I only came in here in the first place because it wuz raining. It will be raining a helluva lot harder before I kum in again. Adios, so long, good bye, an' farewell, to say nothing uv auf wiedersehen, au revoir, bon voyage, an' Departure plus Exit. I'll see yew again wen dinosaurs run wild on Main street!" An' so saying good afternoon, I started to leave, but wuz interrupted by the reappearance uv Murphy the cop.

"Lady," sez Murphy to the female calamity, "I've bin talking it over with the Chief, an' we have agreed that yew haven't got any case against this fellow. In the first place, yew didn't have any right to tell him anything about home brew recipes, because that aint connected with yer work here! In the second place, yew aint got no witnesses to prove that yew gave him this information, an' in the third place, I don't see how yew kin collect the money he offered to pay yew, because he says——"

OOOF! OOOF!

Mrs. Methuselah reached under her desk an' came up with a handful uv books. She put one right over the plate, an' Murphy howls "Ooof!" The next throw wuz high an', a trifle wide, followed by 2 more wich any umpire on earth wood have called Strikes, because I got both uv them in the stummick.

Then I got dam good an' sore, because I noticed that both the books wich had slapped me on the bread-pan were labeled: BARTENDER'S GUIDE.

EXPLAINED.

A lady was ill and insisted upon being operated on for appendicitis. When she was better again she asked the doctor what he had found in her appendix. "Well," he replied, looking puzzled, "it was extraordinary. I never found anything like it in an appendix before; there were several small hard peas in it." "O," said the lady, "that accounts for our having no sweet peas this year. I must have sown the pills."—London Passing Show.

Jerry—No, but I got a little sore when her father started using it for a punchboard.

STORIES of GIRLS

By Margaret Orr

The author of this series, Mrs. Margaret Orr, had intimate opportunity to gather the material which is the basis of these "Stories of Girls." Mrs. Orr worked with police detectives for three years, investigated Massachusetts girls' parole department three years, and studied causes of youthful crime, both in Paris and Madrid. Mrs. Orr is in her early thirties, so can catch the viewpoint and feeling of delinquent girls while applying adult experience.

For the sake of the girls themselves fictitious names are given in all cases, but the incidents are based on truth.

The Gang Queen Who Was Like an Opal

HER majesty explains:

But first we must explain her majesty and that house in Silver square.

Silver square is a place the sun itself can scarcely find by peeping over glooming buildings. The trees in Silver square are gray; the cobble stones white with unimprinted dust. The mansion long ago began to echo the scurrying of rats.

But behind the closed blinds of one of these houses, with various other members of her gang, lived the girl.

She was called the Queen of Silver square. For she was at the head of this information center for criminals.

She was not 20. Yet from this house she directed various groups supplying drugs. She planned all the robberies of a warehouse gang. She bargained for the sale of the goods to the fences. Under her guidance, card indexes were filled out with the names, addresses, and detailed information concerning wealthy and charitable people.

THE LURE OF ACTION

She herself seldom took part in a deal. She was too valuable.

But one day she got tired of Silver square. She felt an old longing for the excitement of a dangerous job.

To forget this, she walked uptown.

The shop windows were gay. They made her think of jewels. And she decided she must have an opal.

For an opal is the stone beloved of thieves. Wrapped in a bay leaf, it is said to sharpen the sight of the person who has it and to dim the eyes of those around. Besides, it has at its heart the fiery flame of the ruby, the emerald's springtime beauty, the violet of the amethyst, and the yellow of the topaz. Yes, an opal was what she wanted.

So she went into a jeweler's and asked to see a tray of uncut stones. And there was no reason why a beautiful and expensively dressed young woman should not see them.

JUST A FUMBLE

Except that jewel stealing had been her cleverest work. And her fingers tingled at the sight of the stones.

But her hand had lost its skill. She fumbled a bit. The store detective saw it. He followed her and turned her over to the police. The opal and three or four other stones were taken from her.

When the rainbow colored gems were thrown on the table before the judge, the queen was asked what she had to say about them.

"They are my folks," she answered. "All hard as rocks. All colors. All as earth made them." Then she laughed rather bitterly for one not 20. "And I got every one of those colors in my life," she went on. "I'm not like the opal. Only I took a chance I shouldn't have. So I'm not 'loved of thieves' any longer. Just an unlucky stone."

SENTENCE SERMONS

In Spite of All—

—The controversies the people are still interested in religion.

—The road signs the fool finds it easy to find trouble.

—The predictions of the opposition party the country seems to survive the elections.

—The efforts of legislatures we have not improved on the ten commandments.

—The high cost of living the country still seems to afford its luxuries.

—The gifts to charity very few of us are in the poorhouse from overgiving.

—Men's stupid creeds, the world seems very much interested in God.

Chicagoans Watch Diamond Rush.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa—Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Compton of Chicago were interested spectators at the start of the recent diamond rush to stake out claims in the new diamond fields at Grasfontein. They were amazed at the remarkable phenomenon of bare prairies changing over night to a city of 40,000. The diamond rush is run much like a race. When the Union Jack was lowered 25,000 diggers dashed for the spot to stake claims. Some American well-trained athletes to run for them. Rival syndicates desiring good claims. These athletes drew fabulous prices for their efforts. Half an hour after the runners had started motorists were permitted to drive pell-mell over the ditches and ant hills.

Plan Train to Run 184 Miles an Hour

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN.—Visitors to Berlin in the future may have an opportunity to travel from the German capital to the Ruhr district in a train at the rate of 184 miles an hour. Engineers are studying plans for the construction of a monorail suspended transportation system that will outspeed airplanes. In one town in Germany, Elberfeld, monorail trains are now operated successfully.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

The Separate Frock for Spring Carries the Truly Feminine Touches of Ruffles, Lace and Fine Tucks, and Calls for a Big Hat Trimmed with a Flower or a Plume

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paris fashion makers seem to have some sort of advance information as to weather conditions for the coming summer, because they are advancing the coatless dress. It is often of sheer material and calculated only for a period of usefulness when the sun is tempering the wind so that it will be comfortable in its shorn state.

During the absolute monarchy of the ensemble, even for the hottest weather, the frock alone lost much of its decorative aspect. Particularly as coats have been chiefly straight and narrow, so that bows, flares, and other departures from the pencil line made ugly bumps in the contours of the coat. However, this season, when dresses are to be smart without any sort of wrap, they are reappearing in their decorative form. This means complication of lines and details, as well as the familiar complication of cut that has been a distinguishing feature of smart clothes for some time. The whole aspect of the woman, indeed, changes when these single frocks are worn. Big hats, trimmed with both flowers and plumes—one at a time, of course—are worn, handbags are more elaborate, and, in fact, all details are more decidedly feminine. This kind of chic is not exactly the fluffy ruffle type, but it is as dainty as the romantic garb of the civil war period.

The practicability of this kind of wrapless ensemble will depend, naturally, largely upon weather conditions, but all we can do is to hope, for the best Parisiennes are hoping, and they have sufficient faith to make this mode a success already in France, which is often a semi-frigid zone all summer long. Perhaps it is because they so love being all that is feminine in dress as well as in nature. There certainly is an allure about the dainty and vaporous frock worn with a big hat which man finds irresistable, and no Parisienne is superior to exercising it.

The all lace frock for daytime comes back in force with the return of the single dress to fashion, and laces in every hue are worn. However, the smartest colors for the daytime frock are beige and the new ibis, which is a sort of soft peach shade. These frocks do not, generally, employ any large quantity of material. They are rather straight in line, but are not less feminine because of this.

Doucet, who is always a master of the lace frock, is showing a good many charming lace gowns for daytime, of which our first model on the left is one of the chief. As you see, this dress is most simple in effect. It is made of beige lace, rather coarse in pattern, and the body of the dress is straight line, with wide sleeves cut in one with the waist. The beige of the lace is exquisitely contrasted by the trimming of black cotton net bands, which circle the deep cuffs on the sleeves and trim the triangular apron tunic on both waist and skirt.

The skirt tunic is flared markedly at the hipline, presenting a variation of the silhouette that is agreeable and novel. There is a triple narrow girdle of beige crêpe, meeting at the sides and separated by intervening spaces in front. A row of beige crêpe buttons trim the front of the frock from the round neck line to the hip line. Not the least of the charm of this model lies in the oversize scarlet flower that is placed at the left side of the girdle. With this frock is worn a large hat of picot trimmed with scarlet flowers.

Our second model shows a combination of materials that is perfect for the dressy single frock, and that is taffeta and organdie. Boué Soeurs, who created this model, have combined two tones of blue—navy blue taffeta that forms the sleeveless over dress and pastel blue organdie that is used for the under frock. Blue is without doubt the favorite color this spring, and blue in two or more tones in one ensemble is a poplar color combination. The over dress of this model has a bloused waist, without sleeves or collar, and open in an inverted V at the center front to show the foundation.

The foundation frock has a long straight blouse cut in a basque-like V at the hip line and edged with a plaited ruffle. The buttons are of dark blue taffeta. The skirt is plaited. Sleeves are flared from the armholes and the lower part being plaited. Their flare is also increased by a narrow plaited ruffle. The round collar of the under dress lies over the blue taffeta. This kind of double dress is most practical, for it may be worn with or without the over dress of taffeta, thus being suitable for moderate and very hot days.

Our third sketch shows a different kind of solitary frock, and one that presents a striking color combination, being made of three shades of fuchsia, ranging from the violet purple to the purple red. The dress proper is of violet crêpe de chine, and the wide bands and godets at the sides of the skirt are made of the violet red that is generally called fuchsia in two tones. The application of these shades is cleverly achieved in the blouse by overlaying the bands at the sides with a triangle that is slightly deeper in color. This is done by wide and narrow bands on the unusual flared sleeves.

The deep collar and gilet are of violet crêpe. Doucet achieves a charming flare to the skirt by means of alternating godets and panels in the three shades. The narrow violet belt has a fantaisie buckle of black enamel inlaid with red and violet.

The fourth sketch shows an afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier. This model is made of a deep maize yellow crêpe satin, and it is trimmed with bands showing the reverse, crêpe, side of the material. The motif of the diagonal is used to give a graceful line, the diagonal closing to the blouse, and the diagonal tiers in the skirt meeting at the left side, where the two tiers form a drooping drapery. Tiers and closing are edged with crêpe bands. A large buckle of Indian red stones is placed at the waist line. The tight sleeves are banded above the wrist with the crêpe side of the satin. With this frock is worn a close fitting hat trimmed with two pompoms of ostrich, also a creation of Marthe Regnier.

The lace dress, beige in color and trimmed with bands of black net, has a novel tunic and a single flower of scarlet silk. It is shown at the extreme left.

The Boue model, sketched next, is a double dress of navy blue taffeta and pastel blue organdie. It is trimmed with plaited ruffles of pastel blue.

Crepe de chine in three tones of fuchsia makes this Doucet frock, with its flaring skirt, that is made buoffant by godets in the three shades. Third from the left.

Last, maize-yellow crepe satin, trimmed with reverse bands, forms this smart afternoon frock from Marthe Regnier.

HOW TO HAVE A LOVELY SKIN - - - - - - - - - - by Antoinette Donnelly

Soap and Water and a Soft Brush Are the Greatest as Well as the Simplest Aids to a Beautiful Complexion.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Of all the ills that flesh is heir to or acquires by unhygienic living, I do not believe there is a single item which causes more actual unhappiness and mental torture than a blemished complexion. Almost any one can laugh and be fat; be fearfully skinny and laugh with her tormentors; lose a few handfuls of hairs and be terrified, yet still be able to extract a smile over the remaining ones. But for a young person whose skin is marred with acne, blackheads, or pimples there is nothing but abject misery.

Time after time girls, and boys, too, write me they are ashamed to go out because of their poor complexions. A pity when, with the exception of a few rare cases, it is something that may be remedied, and in a comparatively short time. In fact, ninety-nine cases out of a hundred may be prevented by the simplest precautions—for the most part the free and generous application of nothing more complicated than soap and water and, as grandma used to say, "elbow grease."

There are some fortunate persons with that quality of skin so fine grained that blackhead trouble, and consequently pimple and acne conditions, escape them entirely. Few, however, may lay claim to a spotless reputation as far as blackheads are concerned. At one time or another they have had to face the disfiguring comedoes and apply a few extra measures to make good their departure.

Treating Skin Troubles.

In treating all three of the most frequent complexion ills you may boil your energy down to an attack upon those blackheads already embedded and on their prevention. Pimples and acne are really nothing more nor less than an inflammation of the sebaceous glands and hair follicles, the tiny comedo being the root of the evil of inflammation.

If the skin is kept free from blackheads, which usually begin to make their appearance on the face at the self-conscious age, the humiliation and mental distress would be reduced to almost nothing.

Blackheads are masses of fat and debris of the skin which have solidified in the glands. These masses act as foreign bodies, irritate the skin, and become infected and then inflamed.

Most frequently the face is chiefly affected. Again, the face, back, shoulders, and chest are troubled. If treatment is not given early there is great danger of scars from prolonged inflammation. At any rate, enlarged pores will result, which give the same pitted effect to the face.

The prevalence of acne during adolescence is due to the fact that at that time the fat glands, like the hair follicles, take on a new activity. The secretion of fat is greatly increased, and it requires only a slight disturbance of the function to cause the accumulation of fat in the glands and the formation of blackheads.

Persons with coarse pores and large, fat glands have the worst cases of acne. Conditions of the general health influence the development of this trouble. Not infrequently it is found association with cold hands and feet, and not uncommonly with dyspepsia and constipation, or other irregularities which lower the vigor and impair the resistance.

Why the Face Suffers.

The face is most troubled because it is the most exposed part of the body and because sweat glands are abundant there and are easily choked with dust and grime, which add to the disfigurement.

With normally healthy people, then, it is a matter of local care almost exclusively. If the circulation is good, the digestion good, and elimination regular, you may pin your faith on the flesh brush, soap, and water.

The vigor with which you scrub is determined by the condition of the skin. A thin and dry skin will perhaps be less affected, but will require care to prevent an unduly dry or chapped condition. In severe blackhead trouble, however, if the skin is greasy and thick, there is little danger of scrubbing too vigorously.

Mild cases of blackheads are frequently cured by bathing the face with soap and warm water, using a complexion brush and scrubbing thoroughly the affected parts. Rinse in warm and then in cold water. In more exaggerated cases, steaming the face is advised. First, cleanse with a cold cream. Applying the cold cream first often helps to soften the hardened substance, so that they are more easily removed. Have two towels ready for steaming. Apply them alternately after wringing out in hot water. Then remove as many blackheads as you can remove easily with a comedo extractor or with the fingers. If with the latter, use on the fingers a clean piece of linen, and also extract the blackheads with as gentle pressure as possible. Do not try to force out the tiny masses that will not come with moderate pressure. Wipe with a solution of hydrogen peroxide or alcohol. When this has been done apply cold water freely to the face and finish off with an ice rub.

Avoid Creams and Oils.

Severe cases of pimples and acne are known to be caused primarily by an increased activity of the fat glands. Therefore, the use of creams and oils on the face for cleansing and other purposes should be avoided in acne cases.

Obstinate cases of acne require the skill of an experienced physician. X-ray is the specific treatment which cures the vast majority of them. You are particularly urged to trust the work only to one with skill and experience, however.

In home treatment, which is sufficient for milder cases, the washing of the skin is the most helpful thing. One vigorous scrubbing a day with soap and water must be given, followed by a sponging-off with alcohol to cleanse it further. The washing not only gets rid of extraneous dirt but it tends to prevent further infection and reduces the excessive fat to the minimum.

After the face is washed the pimples that show they have come to a head by a distinct yellow point should be opened with a needle. Before they are opened the surface should be wiped with alcohol; also after the pus is extracted. The needle should be sterilized for each attack by dipping in alcohol, tincture of iodine, or peroxide of hydrogen.

Be careful not to overdo any of these operations. Remove only the blackheads and treat only the pimples that are ripe for removal and treatment. Massage is advised against in severe acne cases because of the danger of spreading the infection.

Answers to Antoinette Donnelly's Beauty Queries.

EAGER: Substituting stuffed dates and salted nuts for candy will avail you nothing in your desire to reduce. You want to eliminate and not substitute. The nuts and dates are fattening, just as the candy is. You need my booklet on reducing, which may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

ESSIE H.: Ingrown toenails are caused by ill fitting shoes. If your shoes are too narrow or too short the toenails come to run diagonally on the toes instead of parallel. The shoe pushes the front end of the nail around and causes the opposite corners to dig into the flesh. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the treatment of ingrown toenails.

E. M.: Your trouble is too much sleep and not sufficient exercise. Eight hours' sleep in a well ventilated room is sufficient for the average person. A walk of four miles a day, and exercises to be done on arising are what you need. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for them.

ETTA H.: Brushing the hair gives it the luster you desire. It keeps the scalp in a healthy condition. Brush for five minutes every morning and night with businesslike strokes, until there is a feeling of life in the scalp.

A. T. V.: Fruit juices, grape juice, apples, oranges, and lemon juice—stimulate a flow of saliva and are cleansing to the teeth. An apple eaten before going to bed, followed by brushing the teeth, will protect them from the action of bacteria during the night.

V. H.: The shooting pains in your legs are undoubtedly the result of wearing shoes with too high heels. For business wear they are not only harmful, but are not in good taste. Have yourself fitted to a pair of street shoes with heels about an inch and a half in height.

MRS. C. S.: Whiteheads are chalky deposits under the skin. They are an imprisoned blackhead. Apply hot towels to the face to soften the skin. Then open each blemish with a sterilized needle and press out the contents with the needle. Wipe the spot with peroxide and gently massage with cold cream. For treatment of dry skin send a stamped, addressed envelope.

MARION H.: Equal parts of camphor and glycerin massaged into the hands several times a day will soften and whiten them. Stains may be removed from the hands by lemon juice. It is advisable to keep a lemon handy for this purpose. Better send a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the "Care of the Hands." It has many helpful suggestions for you.

MRS. J. B. N.: A vegetable diet tends to keep the intestines active. This is particularly true of fresh green vegetables, such as spinach, lettuce, asparagus, beet tops, and celery. On such a diet you are not liable to grow stout. Eat sparingly of potatoes, as the starch in the potato is the hardest of all starches to digest.

E. B. G.: The hollows will remain in your cheeks until such time as you have the spaces caused by loss of teeth filled in by bridgework. Loss of teeth is responsible for much digestive trouble, the food not being properly masticated. And hollows give an expression of age, which no woman wishes to have.

MRS. M.: KEEPING THE TONGUE CLEAN PROTECTS the teeth, as the tongue collects tartar and bacteria, particularly near the root. Fruit acids are cleansing, as is also a weak solution of vinegar.

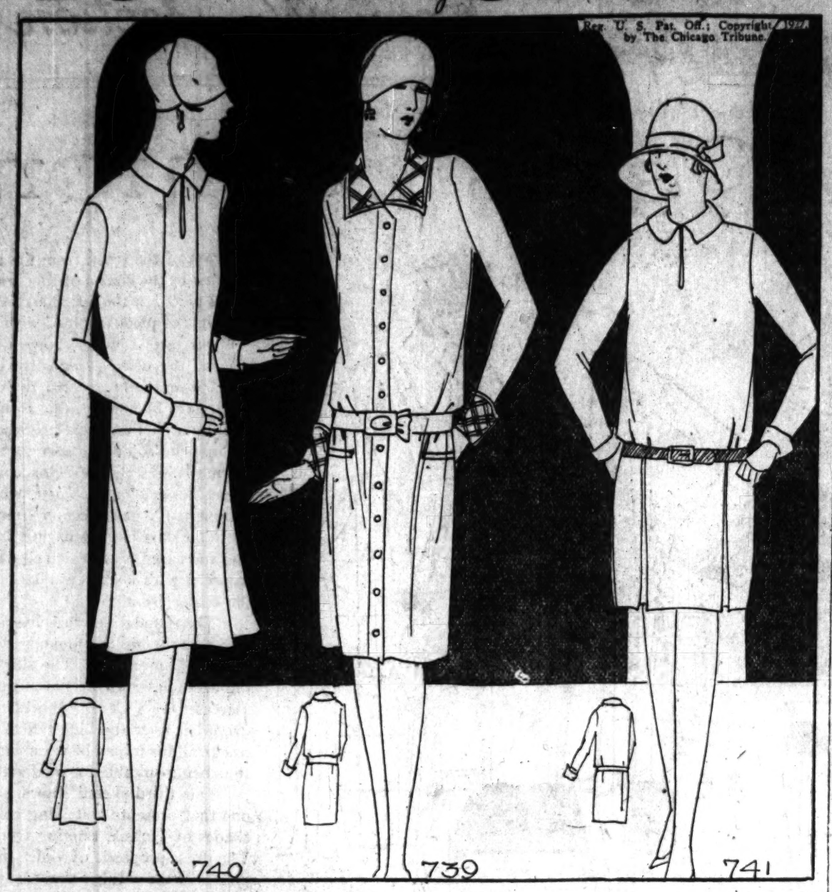
MRS. F. L.: OPINIONS DIFFER AS TO THE CAUSE of eczema. In some cases there may be a slight tendency to inheritance, but it is not generally considered in the majority of cases. The treatment depends upon your general condition and the part of the body affected, and should be determined by a competent physician after making an examination.

JIM G.: SKIN GRAFTING IS NECESSARY TO REMOVE deep tattoo marks. Work of this kind is done by skin specialists.

DOROTHY M.: DEEP BREATHING EXERCISES IMprove the circulation, develop the bust and chest, and often will cure headaches. They start the blood flowing vigorously through your veins and for one with weak lungs there is nothing better than deep breathing.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

Patterns by Clotilde



FLAT crêpe in a crushed raspberry shade, with collar, cuffs and front panel in a deeper shade would make up charmingly by pattern No. 740. The dress isn't at all difficult to make, and the straight lines with the gracefully flaring sides will be universally becoming. Three shades instead of two could be used in making this dress, making the main part of the dress of one, the panel of a second, and the collar and cuffs of a third.

The circular skirt is seamed together at the sides, and French seams will be right to use. Put the right side seam in by hand, then turn to the wrong side, baste and then stitch the wrong side seam on the machine. Finish the seams of the waist in the same manner. The panel front can have the edges turned in, laid in place on the dress and stitched close to the edge. Or the dress can be laid over the panel edges and stitched in place.

The seams would look well with a narrow piping of the dress material, and if this is used, the same method should be followed in putting the waist and skirt together. The dress is slashed down from the neck in the center front, and the edges bound.

The collar can be made double, or if you prefer to make it of a single thickness it will be pretty to finish the edges with a narrow, bias binding. The cuffs should be made the same as the collar. The sleeves are full length and close fitting. Notches on the sleeves pattern show just where the outer edges of the sleeve is to be gathered to make fullness at the elbow. Take the smallest possible stitches in gathering, distribute the fullness over the given space evenly, and press carefully. This fullness makes the necessary "pocket" for the elbow. It is a good idea not to make these close fitting sleeves too close fitting. They are not only uncomfortable, but they don't look well. A sleeve of this kind can be made reasonably close fitting without being actually tight.

Pattern No. 741 is an excellent design for a dress for school wear. The dress is cut with the back in one piece, and in the front the dress is slashed under the belt to allow for the plaits. There is a slashed opening in the center front and this allows the dress to be slipped on and off over the head. Pretty little collar and cuffs finish the neck and sleeves; and the latter are full length and close fitting.

Kasha in a becoming color, or one of the other woolens in a small check, might be used. Even though warm weather isn't far away, there are many days when a dress with a little warmth isn't uncomfortable. Challis is an excellent material for this kind of a dress, and unless the trimming prevents, it can be washed as satisfactorily as a linen handkerchief.

The narrow belt may be made of the dress material, or one of calfskin may be chosen.

Navy blue crêpe de Chine, with one of the plaid taffetas was used in making the dress by pattern No. 739. This is one of the straight line designs that is so generally becoming; and a feature that will appeal to most women is that it opens the length of the front. There is an applied plait of the dress material the length of the front and this gives a good finish there. Two inserted pockets in the skirt add to the attractiveness as well as the usefulness of the dress; and the broad suede belt gives the right finish at the waistline.

Take great care in cutting and measuring for the buttonholes. Then overcast every one from the wrong side before working. One of the heavier crêpes or satins would also be suitable materials for this design, and two tones of the same color and material could be used in the making.

740—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

739—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

741—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 10 requires 2⅛ yards of 40 or 44 inch material.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

BABY ARTICLES ARE GLADLY WELCOMED.

DON'T all of us like to think that the arrival of a baby means happiness for every one—happiness for the mother, for the family, and the promise of a happy childhood for the little newcomer? In our families, we see everything possible is done, and somehow we like to think that every baby and mother receive similar care.

Yet our files are filled with cases where parents are facing the prospect of a little one with nothing done, and absolutely no means of providing for the baby. Illness in many of these families has consumed the family savings, and all these expectant parents want the little newcomer to have every advantage—but they simply cannot provide unless we help them.

An infant in any family of comfortable circumstances seldom wears out his first clothes, and there they are, ready for a lot more service. Gifts from those whose babies have outgrown their first outfits, infant clothes, cribs, carriages, and beds will be welcomed. Many of us can give these articles, and think what they will mean to the many poor expectant mothers.

If you have some of these baby articles which have outlived their usefulness to you, let me know that you will help! I can place everything of the sort where it will mean the difference between happiness and misery. So please let me know what you have to give!

If You Have a Car.

"I am coming to you in the hope you will be able to find some one who is willing to give pleasure to a shutin. My sister, who has been sick for a year, is now able to go out for a short drive, but is too weak to walk. We do not own a car and I wondered if it would be possible to get in touch with some one who has leisure time and a car who would be glad to do an act of kindness. M. R. G."

If you have an automobile and would like to devote a little of your time to making others happy, this would be a splendid opportunity, and probably would be the means of restoring this young woman's health.

For a Convalescent.

"Do you think you could get me a tennis set and a racket? I have been sick for a long time and the doctor tells me to get out in the sun. I like to play tennis, but I can't afford to buy either of these articles. A. S."

Have you either of these articles, which will help make our correspondent a strong and healthy young woman again? She'll be most appreciative for them.

Out of Work.

"I have been out of work for some time and I need a spring overcoat, size 42. Do you think one of your readers has an old one to give to me? "E. H."

Last year's top coat might do this correspondent quite well. May he not have it?

Two Small Boys Need Shoes.

"I know of two boys who are needing shoes badly. One is Sam, 13 years old, whose father deserted and left his mother with five children younger than him to support. He wears shoes, size 8, in a man's size. He goes to school and is trying to make good so he can help his mother support his little sisters. The other boy is James. His father has been ill now for three months and it has been necessary to go into debt to pay the rent and buy food. He is a little tot and wears size 8 in children's shoes. H. J. A.

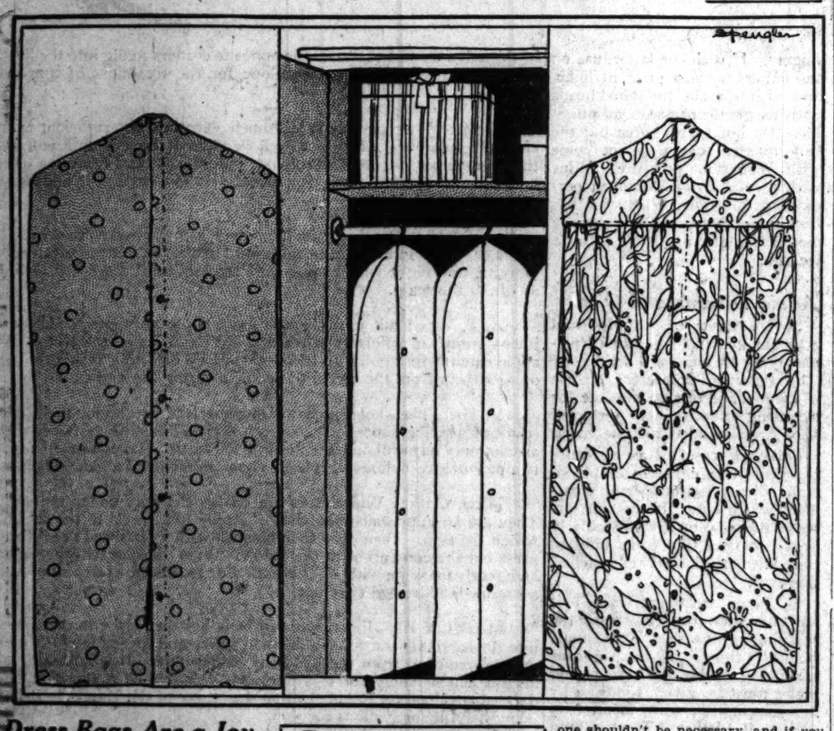
Spring showers mean wet feet and resultant ill health when little boys' feet are not well shod. Can you give Sam or James a pair of shoes?

Victims of Sickness.

"I am a widow depending upon my sons for support, but they have so many expenses, there is never enough for clothing for us. We have had a great deal of sickness and doctor bills, and my youngest daughter, who is just getting well, needs a coat, size 16 or 18. I am in need of clothing, too—a coat and a black dress, size 44. If you can help us, we will be most thankful. Mrs. P."

When one has the expense of ill health to cope with, it is hard to provide the necessary clothing. I am sure you can help in this case with a cast-off garment or two.

Practical and Fancy Needlework . . . By Clotilde



Dress Bags Are a Joy to the Woman Who Likes to Keep Her Gowns Fresh and Attractive.

DRESS bags are really a necessity, if we are to keep things looking fresh, and this is especially true in towns where soft coal is used. Of course, you can buy pretty, satisfactory bags in a great variety of designs, but there are many women who enjoy making these things, and in so doing a considerable sum of money is saved.

About 3¼ yards of 36 inch material is needed, or if you buy anything narrower you will need 5 yards for one bag.

Some bags are made the shape of a clothes hanger at the top, and the rest of the way the bag pieces are perfectly straight. One piece makes the back, and in the front there are two. These front pieces are hemmed down one edge, using an inch wide hem, and the strips cut wide enough to seam to the back, and allow the hems to lap. These hems may be stitched together down from the top for six or nine inches, then fastened the rest of the way with several buttons and buttonholes.

Another style of bag is made with a sort of yoke top, back and front. This is cut the shape of the hanger across the top, and measures nine inches deep. To this the lower parts of the bag are gathered, allowing one and one-half across for fullness. In the front there are two pieces, the same as in the other one. There are lapped, hemmed edges that button together, or they may tie if you prefer. While patterns for these bags may be bought one shouldn't be necessary, and if you are not used to cutting patterns, do it first in paper—of course making the width ample so a dress won't be crushed.

Some women make a gayly colored cretonne bag for each one of their dresses, and it isn't a bad idea.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

by Doris Blake

The Power of Parental Example Does Everything to Incline the Twig in the Way It Should Grow

WHAT ails youth?

With every new incident of crime committed by a member of the younger generation the question is advanced. And a sweeping condemnation of the entire group known as the younger generation follows.

That there is something wrong with a certain portion of our young people cannot be denied. District attorneys and other officials of law claim youthful offenders are supplanting in numbers the hardened mature criminals of an earlier day, and women in charge of female police departments in large cities report appalling conditions of vice among girls.

Nevertheless it is unfair to embrace the whole crop of boys and girls in a charge of waywardness. They deserve fairer treatment from us elders. They deserve it for no other reason than that the offenders among them are offenders principally because of laxity of parental control, of bad parental example, and of indifference on the part of elders generally over the plight in which many of this younger generation finds themselves. Through no fault of their own they are living in cooped up quarters that provide no opportunity for them to rid themselves normally of that excess energy for which youth has ever been noted and without which it would not be worth its salt.

The saner diagnosticians are probing now to locate the source of the ailments of youth. They are on the right track. There never was a time when parenthood was a harder job and never a time when self-indulgence and bad example were practiced so diligently by parents.

Remedy Lies with Parents.

Whatever the causes of this debacle of youth, and many have been advanced in exoneration of parents [cheap literature, live-your-own-life propaganda, the movies, the automobile, the jazz age], the remedy lies with the older generation. It rests with parents in better control of themselves, and with adults, generally, who will get together to provide a healthier outlet for the surplus energy of youth.

These young people cannot help having been born into a generation that saw an upheaval with so devastating an aftermath as the world war. But parents can help them. They can help by decent example. Not only the individual parent but the whole body of elders to whom the young must naturally look for guidance can put their shoulders to the wheel and help straighten out this vital problem of youth.

There is no end of good in that much maligned younger crowd, even among the so-called wild ones, if it were only given half a chance to blossom. You could not be the confidante of thousands of them, as I am, and not realize they are waging a terrific uphill fight. Some God-given instinct possesses them to want to do the right thing. They are not happy doing the wrong. Yet they see on every hand the transgressors getting away with everything from petty vice to murder and they are plainly confused.

It is not an unusual thing to get a letter from some thoughtful member of that younger crowd complaining about the conduct of its elders. It might come as a stunning surprise to a number of parents to learn what is going on in the back of the minds of their children. The thoughtful among them, and, believe me, they are plentiful enough in number to make me their champion, are crying out for that old fashioned parent in whose virtue, ruggedness, and strength of character they may have implicit faith.

Letter from a Son.

Just listen to this from one of them, a serious minded young college chap. "It is the jazz age of fathers," he begins. "Fathers seem to be becoming kids instead of acting their part. They seem to be greedier for enjoyment than the young, and that, heaven knows, is GREEDY.

"At any rate, if they are not, they are made to appear so. When I come out from shows lately, I feel ashamed to face my father. Ashamed for him and fathers like him. I can see youngsters playing kissing games and the like. That seems natural. But when I see on the stage or in the movies, fathers portrayed in the rôles of beaus, mashers, and irresponsible men, my heart aches, and the thread of tenderness, and confidence, and faith which should be between me and my father is somehow snapped. They say the theater and the movies and literature of the day reflect life. Well, if this is the life of fathers, then it might be best to keep the children in ignorance of it.

"I wish sometimes I had been born 75 or 100 years ago, when it was possible for a child to believe in his father implicitly. I firmly believe one of the reasons children go wrong is because they see older people portrayed in every conceivable situation they should not see. I don't know that I care for censorship. But a sense of decency ought to compel writers and artists of every description and joke-makers to keep facts about life at least within the ramifications of civility. Don't distort our parents to us."

And here is a letter from a girl 21: "My mother, I am sorry to say, isn't like a real mother at all. She is flighty. She is 45, and the other day she was driving a car and ran into another car. The officer who arrested her complained because there was liquor on her breath. I had to believe it because I have smelled it there many times myself when she comes home after an afternoon with her 'pals.'

"When she was young she worked. She had a strict mother and a stricter father. She somehow seems to be making up for it now. She has no authority over herself. Father has no authority over her. And I confess I blush for my mother at times. My father has been fortunate in making money that gives her all the luxuries. I hope the boy I am going to marry never makes that much if it brings the same temptations to cut loose. I could not bear to think of my life as a succession of afternoons spent at card tables and chasing more excitable amusements. I want to be a better mother than that. This may seem a hard and sophisticated thing for me to say, but it is true that I want to make a really great success of my life."

Another youngster wrote me not long ago that "she wished her mother wouldn't dress and act so silly." These are not hard hearted children. They preface their parental criticisms with an apology to which their parental conduct does not entitle them. Sometimes I wonder if a reversal of the order of "bringing them up" wouldn't be a good thing. Turn the wayward parent over to the child for training. It might make the world safer for the children.

Happily, not all parents are indifferent to the welfare of their children. There are parents of successful children who preach the religion of example as sincerely as the religion ever was preached. But there is no gainsaying the fact that making a home really a home is a bigger problem today than it was 30 years ago. Then it was a comparatively easy matter to be a parent and to do your duty as a parent. Today parenthood requires sterner rectitude to escape helplessness before the juggernaut of progress that has brought with it wealth, comforts, and pleasures, discomfort, rebellion, and degeneracy.

The Power of Example.

No amount of preaching obedience to law theoretically can overcome the ill effects on the child who knows his father is a bootlegger or a bootlegger's customer. And that goes many ways: father dodging his taxes; father holding a conference on how to dodge them; father substituting shoddy materials for the proper kind, giving his son an example that might easily start him on the road to Sing Sing. The business of "putting something over on the next fellow in commercial deals" recited in a son's presence is fatal to his young morals. The shreds of honesty are destroyed.

The lying mother, lying to her friends, lying to her admirer, or lying to the husband, when once caught in the act by the child has ruined that child's life. Parents are nothing if they are not respected. A youngster is better off brought up in an orphan asylum without having known the caress of a parent than to have one whose ways are steeped in that good old biblical word, iniquity.

People are honest not because it was preached to them but because their forbears were honest. Children are moral not because morality is handed down in slogans but because of morality in the home, morality in business, morality in personal relations. All these things begin with the personal equation. Hypocrisy has no greater foe than childhood, as one savant observes. The child instinctively feels when his parents are sincere and when they are not sincere. Once a child has discovered his parents' insincerity he is ready to become a menace to society and himself.

Providing an Outlet.

After example in collecting the ailments of youth comes provision for an outlet for their energy into joyful, healthful physical recreation. Amusement on every side is coupled with indoor confinement. It naturally follows that thoughts are turned from healthful outdoor recreation to the neurotic game or amusement of the confined, indoor sort.

Why should not the problem of the healthful bringing up of a child's mind and body claim the attention of the community to the same extent that a problem of commercial and industrial extensions claims it? We have chambers of commerce planning for business. We have industrial conference boards planning for industry. We have Rotarian organizations planning civic enterprises. Why not devise ways and means of restoring through recreation the healthy, moral atmosphere it once had? Surely our civilization is rich enough and ample enough for that. Can't we build temples of play as we build citadels of work? Can't we build them with the same planning, the same energy, and for the production of the same efficient results?

Embarrassing Moments

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moment, The Tribune, Chicago. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

In Gloves.

The most embarrassing moment of my life happened during the first week of my first position as stenographer.

As I had a few minutes leisure one day when the boss stepped out of the office, I tried on a pair of black kid gloves I had bought during my lunch hour. They were a tight fit, and I had some trouble in getting them on. While I was admiring them my boss rushed into the office, bringing with him some men he had met in the hall, one of them being the president of the concern, from the home office.

Hurrying into his private office, he called out, "Bring your notebook, Miss L——." Immediately I began peeling off the new gloves—but—they wouldn't peel! After I had struggled for some minutes trying to get them off, and became more and more nervous, and excited, the boss looked out, and seeing what the trouble was, said, "Leave them on. Mr. B. must catch a train in a few minutes and wants to dictate a letter to the home office before he leaves here."

So, with three amused men watching me, I took Mr. B.'s dictation with tight fitting black kid gloves on my hands, and with a longing in my heart for the earth to open up and swallow me.

F. M. L.

Force of Habit.

While I am not exactly a half century old, I do remember when we wore skirts so long that we had to hold them up while walking on muddy or damp pavements.

Imagine my embarrassment one day during the last rainy seige, as I hurried across one of the busiest corners, to discover that I was daintily lifting my knee length skirt as I stepped across a muddy place!

E. E. C.

Putting It Frankly.

I had become well acquainted with many of the guards and some of the officers at the state reformatory, but I did not know the new superintendent who had been at the institution but a month.

One morning while I was busy working at my table, the assistant superintendent, a guard, and a third man came up to see me. The assistant superintendent asked me if I had ever met Mr. E——, the superintendent.

"I wouldn't know him from a bundle of hay wire," I replied without looking up. There was a silence.

Then the assistant said, "Well, this is Mr. E——."

Luckily for me, the superintendent had a sense of humor. Since then he and I have become good friends.

E. T. B.

Horrors!

I was registering for a college course in English and was trying to get a professor who had a reputation for being easy. There was one man, Mr. M., whom I didn't know but whom I had heard was quite hard, and I didn't want to get in his class at any cost. The man who was signing my card, however, wanted me to take this certain class, so I answered, "O, I wouldn't take a course under that man at all. He is a bore, as well as being hard to get a grade from."

I noticed he blushed; then another man at his side turned and said, "So that's the kind of a reputation you have, M.?" I faded away.

G. B.

Looks Told.

A sum of money had disappeared from the office, and the circumstances were such that almost any one of the force could be a guilty party. The police were called in and for a while things hummed around there. Every one, from chief of staff clear down to the janitor, was had up for questioning, and although we were trying to do "business as usual," we were all pretty tense and looking crosseyed at our neighbor.

I had begun to develop a nervous headache, when finally the boss approached a group of us and in a lowered, confidential tone, began, "Now, folks, I have this money, and it just goes right to my heart to have to tell you——"

Before I could get my wits about me, I thought that he was confessing to us that he had taken it himself (instead of trying to advise us that the culprit had been apprehended), and my horrified expression and smothered ejaculation, before I could come to, caught his attention, and made perfectly clear to him what I was thinking.

He made no comment, neither then nor afterwards, but now when we meet as we must sometimes in the pursuance of our duties, he looks—believe me, he looks!

Wants Other Beaux.

"Dear Miss Blake: Some time ago I met a 16 year old girl whom I instantly liked. I continued to see her every day and as the days went by I fell in love with her. Though I love her as no one has ever loved, she acts as if she did not care for me at all. However, she has told a friend of mine that she likes me a great deal.

"I suppose that she thinks I am too young (I am 17) for her and that probably is the reason she acts that way.

"What is your advice in this case? Do you think I am too young for her?

"CHARLES."

You have paid her too much attention and she has tired of it, Charles. You can't expect a young girl of her years to concentrate on one beau. It's asking too much.

Getting Careless.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been keeping company with a girl of 18 for the last two years and love her dearly.

"But of late she is careless of her personal appearance and quite a few times I have had to suggest that she remove the high water mark from her neck before we go out.

"When I reminded her of these little things she starts to cry and tells me I don't love her.

"This may sound funny to you, Miss Blake, but I am serious, as I love this girl. Please tell me, is there no way I can make her realize the error of her ways, or shall I give her up?

"PERPLEXED."

Any one so careless about her person will be negligent about other things. One can't feel proud of a friend who isn't more particular about her appearance. After your comment, her pride should make her take greater care if she hasn't the natural inclination.

He Remembers.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18. Until a few months ago I went with a young man one year my senior. We had an argument in which neither of us were right. I offered my apology soon afterwards, but it took him a couple of weeks longer. He is friendly towards me again. I dance with him a great deal, but he never asks me to go with him any more. I am quite popular, but don't seem to care for any but this one. How can I win him back, or do you think I can?

"LONESOME AND SORRY."

Apparently he hasn't the happy faculty of forgetting differences as quickly as you, dear, but he may be around yet. Don't refuse other invitations while waiting, though. Let him see you can attract others.

Her Fancy's Changed.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 17 and love a girl one month younger than myself. We happen to go to the same place every Monday, and I was in the habit of taking her home until lately. She has been going home with some one else for the last few weeks. Her father is rather strict with her and he will not allow her to have any callers. We have gone out a few times, but I always had to meet her on the corner. Now she seems to be busy all the time and she will not see me even on the corner. I am forced to doubt as to how busy she is. She acts colder now and I wonder if she still cares.

"EARL."

It doesn't look that way, Earl. Her fancy has changed, as it's quite liable to at her age. Just make the best of it and look around for another.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Whether Wild or Domestic, Cultivated or Free Growing, the Edible Greens Are a Virtuous Tribe.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Mrs. Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington

"GOD'S medicine" is one of the names given to greens by a people destitute of a knowledge of vitamins even to this day. This is not saying a thing against vitamins. We believe with all our heart and all our mind that the more exact, and extensive, and technical a man's knowledge of the nutrients is the better off he is, and the world as well, in so far as his influence counts.

Nevertheless, it is interesting to discover what a close agreement there often is between the modern and scientific knowledge of foods, and the great common sense decisions of primitive men, even when they have been bagridden with superstition. Quite ancient peoples have assigned specific medical virtues to this green and that, but this is not surprising when we consider what the old medical pharmacopoeia was—a list of plants or parts of plants, or of their essences or combinations. The bitter greens, or in special the chicory, used to be a standard home remedy for jaundice and other liver complaints. By the way, the epicurean table of today has greatly profited by the cultivation of this, which was but a wild and sprawling weed.

It is a pity that the race cannot hold on to all knowledge, especially about foods, but when one sort comes another sort is likely to go wholly or in part. For instance, today we surely know more exactly and extensively and technically the worth of green leaves in the diet, but only a few people—there used to be many—know about the great variety of edible wild greens which the spring time brings, and the summer continues, than did more primitive people. These two kinds of knowledge surely bolster one the other, and it is a mistake because we have one to hold the other of little account.

A woman of country upbringing of more than half a century back has this as her list of the greens she has eaten: Pokeweed shoots, black mustard, chicory, all kinds of dock, purslane, pigweed, plantain, wild lettuce (volunteer lettuce), young red clover, dandelion, milkweed (substitute for asparagus), mallow, lamb's quarter (cenopodium), sheep's sorrel, and a number of others more rare.

Our botanies and various other books yield entertaining and even fascinating knowledge about each of these plants, or "edible weeds." Typically, as well as typically ancient, waste places yield pot herbs for our health insurance and to satisfy our liking for something different.

The Amaranth Pigweed.

As an example of food growing in the most waste of modern places we may take what is called sometimes the "rough pigweed," to distinguish it from the smooth, which is also called lamb's quarter, and belongs to the goosefoot family, while that weed growing in our most modern of waste places belongs to that family of most poetical associations, the amaranths. One of the modern waste places it favors is the hard packed soil around rather neglected and barren city apartment buildings, often where not a blade of grass raises its head, and too often it grows there undisturbed by residents who need just such a food as it is to give them some zest for living.

A popular name for this is "red root," which it has, and another is "beet root," for when cooked it has a faint beet aroma, though it is not as savory as cooked beet tops, one of the most delicious of our garden greens. It is often found in forests, in vacant lots, and the tips of its branches are good to cook the summer through, while the other pigweed is strictly a spring green.

Purslane.

Here is another and even more delicious green—because of its acidity—which grows in waste places but loves best the thrifty kitchen garden, in which place it has been so hated as to furnish charming and humorous subject for many references in that gay book, "My Summer in a Garden," by Charles Dudley Warner, which acknowledges the fact that the Chinese eat it. So do the Dutch, who even can it for home and world use. And so will you eat it if you once learn to prepare it. Yet tons of this are weeded out of gardens every year and left to wilt. With sliced new beets it is delicious.

Dandelions.

But for many people the dandelions lead the list of greens from earliest March to late May, after which they are mostly too bitter and sunburned, although when they come up with long grass they may be good if untimely mowing time for it. This year I saw in middle March a man turning aside the dead and heavy grasses of last year, growing next a fence around a great public building, to get dandelions. I envied him his "mess." In Italian markets one may sometimes find dandelions in late winter which are nothing but a red ball with a white heart, real vegetable lobster when cooked.

Other Greens.

A philanthropic emperor in China once had a book prepared which contained, it is said, a list of over 3,000 edible plants common to his country, copies of which were sent to every district where distress and poverty prevailed. We have a tremendous list coming from forests, fields, and seashore, all with some sort of edible history. The buds of the beech and calamus flower and other things like this have been eaten without being subjected to the pot.

Old Ways with Greens.

Some one once sent me this, headed "Grandmother's Method of Preserving Greens and Vegetables: Gather the broad leaved dandelions when tender, wash thoroughly, then with a thread and needle string them through the bud, or core, and hang in the window till dry, when the strings may be wrapped in newspaper to keep out the dust till used. String beans and peas may be strung the same way, and are preferable to salting down, for the flavor is kept better. Squash, pumpkin, turnips, apples or any pithy vegetables may be pared round and round, then strung and dried." Of course, okra and peppers are still prepared in this fashion, even in commercial quantities.

Preparing Greens.

It is much easier to pick over and trim greens before wetting them. It is lovely business to dig dandelions, give them a good shake to remove dead leaves and grass, and trim them before taking them into the house. The shake also removes anything like sand, and so shortens the work when they are washed. While each green requires its own special treatment in general, each must be examined, or picked over, and trimmed, then must follow two steps more before they are really ready to cook—washing and blanching—and this latter is only a more thorough or last step in the cleaning.

Washing Greens.

In washing greens or strawberries it is always best to put them into an ample quantity of water, and then to lift them out of it rather than to pour the water off them as is sometimes done, when sand or whatever heavy dirt is in the pan is poured back over them.

Blanching Greens.

It is sure that uncooked green leaves are medically best as food, therefore in cooking them our whole aim should be to make the process a careful or gentle one so that we may not by heat lessen their contribution to our diet with little left save their roughage value. To drop them into boiling water is exceeding cleansing and then to rinse them in cold shortens the cooking time, it has been proven. The rapid change of temperature gives effects equal to cooking. To keep them long in boiling water leaches out their valuable solubles, so we make the process brief, or not over five minutes, and then only if they are a little old. The tenderest require only a minute of blanching.

A Cooking Prohibition.

Do not use soda in cooking any vegetable. The French woman will tell for the worse. The greatest of our modern food scientists, who know because of long years of experiment, tell us that the soda destroys the vitamins. We believe them. More than that, it offers an excuse for careless cooking with more fire than is in any way good for the green, whether it is kept green or not. The soda is supposed to preserve the green color, etc. This may be preserved by careful and gentle cooking. Too much fire will turn a cooked green from green to yellow in a flash of the eye.

The Real Cooking.

The blanching is a part of the cooking, but after that comes the time process. After the greens are blanched they may generally be cooked in no more water than what clings to them. Doing this also makes it essential to keep the fire low, otherwise this bit you that it makes them "horrid," meaning that it affects their flavor of water will disappear as steam and the greens will burn. Or when a cook cannot manage this sort of cooking she can put the blanched greens in the double boiler. She may be surprised to find much more water in it when they have cooked tender than she imagined was there. This is because the greens are ninety-five per cent water, and some of what is in them has been cooked out, while that on them has not cooked away as it would in even the slowest cooking, generally.

Butter and Cream Dressing.

For fine and soft greens a butter and cream dressing is highly acceptable. Dry the greens quickly, or press them dry, chop them fine, and then combine them with a little hot cream seasoned with salt, pepper and butter, and perhaps a little nutmeg. Cook the two together until the cream seems mainly absorbed, and serve. This is nice cooking which no recipe can do. Judgment and care are the agents.

On Seasoning Greens Generally.

In the old days a piece of pork or bacon was cooked with greens to add the agreeable fat dressing. Vinegar was the only thing added besides the salt, which latter not needed when the meat was salty. As served, no butter or oil would have clung to the greens because they were too wet. When the pot liquor was used for something the virtues in the greens were in a sense salvaged but the too long cooking yielded anything but a dainty dish. Now we cook the greens in the least bit of water, lest they be sodden or water soaked, and then dry out or press out any water left so that butter will be a satisfactory dressing, and the one that makes them most savory.

Melted Butter and Lemon Juice.

To get an acid green like the much appreciated sorrel cultivated in France and elsewhere, a seasoning of butter and lemon juice and salt and perhaps a bit of paprika is made into a sort of sauce and poured over it. The greens must be served at once after this dressing is put over them. Two tablespoons of melted butter and more or less of the juice of one lemon are the proportions and right for a small amount of greens.

French Dressing on Greens.

A French dressing on dry hot greens may be as satisfactory as when these are molded and served cold for a salad.

Bacon Dressing.

This dressing which makes wilted lettuce and is good on green or wax string beans cooked is also excellent on the less delicate greens: One-fourth pound of well chilled and sliced bacon, two tablespoons of vinegar, a little sugar. To make it milder yet add to it a tablespoon or two of sour cream. Pare off any smoky edges from the bacon and remove any bits of gristle. Then either cut into bits with scissors, or put through the food chopper. It must be cold and rather fresh cut, or it will be stringy. Therefore the scissors may be best. Put the bacon, so cut fine, into a cold frying pan and stir while it toasts, never allowing it to get smoking hot. Add seasonings and serve.

Meat Gravy.

Use meat gravy instead of cream, cooking the two together until the gravy has blended with the greens.

Thickening Greens.

When greens are to be used for a garnish some butter can be melted and as much flour stirred in to it as would make a medium thick sauce, cooking the flour rather well, yet gently, in the butter, then adding the greens and cooking to a blend. A little cream may be added to soften, as it always does, and a little fresh butter at last to make savory, or a meat stock may add fat and body as well with flavor.

To Crisp Greens.

Sometimes greens that seem wilted may be thoroughly cleaned, then left in ice cold water to grow crisp as they will do. The leaves of the rough pigweed will soon look as though they were growing. The heart of the dandelion expands when thus treated, etc.

Cooking Dandelion Greens.

After these greens have been cleaned and washed the larger and coarser sorts may be blanched ten minutes, the small and tender ones five. Rinse with cold water and cook gently in a covered kettle in water clinging from the rinse. Tender greens will require then only fifteen or twenty minutes of cooking to be tender. Dry and squeeze the water out, add butter and nothing else if you want them the nearest au naturel, and so most wholesome.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

In the Rain.

I received an invitation to a home wedding, the ceremony to be performed at high noon. A small porch at the home had been artistically decorated, and the wedding party was to stand there. It had rained hard all day, and as the wedding hour approached there seemed no chance for any change of weather. But promptly at 12 o'clock the guests were invited to the yard to stand under umbrellas, capes or coats to witness the ceremony which was performed on the porch as had been planned. J. W.

The Minister's Little Joke.

A country minister, who has a keen sense of humor, told me of this instance. It was in the hills of Pennsylvania and a farmer noted for his thriftiness and industry asked the minister to come out to his place on a certain day to marry him.

When the minister arrived at the designated time he found the farmer in his work clothes and bare feet, plowing, and leaving his team standing in the middle of the field he approached the minister. At the same time the bride, likewise no more gayly garbed, approached the pair.

The minister asked the groom if he had not better tie his team before the ceremony began.

"O," replied the man, "it won't take long, and they will be all right."

The minister thought he would give the man a good lesson in reverence and so he chose the longest service he knew and prolonged the prayer to almost endless length. Needless to say the neglected team had in the meantime plowed a furrow that was not consistent with a careful farmer's rule, and the minister enjoys his little joke to this day. L. B.

Married in a Hospital.

The strangest wedding I ever attended was held in a hospital. The young couple had set their wedding date, and on that day had set out for the justice of the peace. But fate intervened in the form of a reckless driver, who ran into them and demolished their car, so that both were injured [but not the reckless driver]. They were taken to the hospital, and later in the day, after their wounds were dressed, they decided that the wedding should take place as usual. And so, on adjoining hospital beds they were married and despite the strangeness of their wedding they are still married! J. L. B.

BRIGHT SAYINGS of HUSBANDS & WIVES

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Uneducated Meterman.

Wife—O, Oscar, a strange man was here today and said he wished to read our gas meter.

Husband—Well, did you let him in?"

Wife—Mercy, no! He used very poor grammar, and I felt sure he would not read it properly. Mrs. A. C.

Move Her in That Direction.

Wife—Mrs. S. said a sentimental song always moves her.

Hubby—Really? Let's play "Home Sweet Home." S. F.

Eternal Sleep.

My husband has little confidence in my driving. We were taking a long automobile trip and I said, "Shall I drive and let you sleep awhile?"

He said, "No, dear, I'm afraid I might sleep too long." J. M.

Next Best Thing.

Wifey—"Hubby, dear, what did you buy me for my birthday?"

Hubby [grouchy]—"You know, that wrist watch you wanted—well, I bought you an alarm clock."

F. O'N.

Failed to Register.

Wife—[Evening of election day]: "Did you vote today, dear?"

Hubby—"No, I didn't register."

Wife—[sweetly]: "You never do." Mrs. W. R. C.

Divine—And Then Some.

He (reading an article in the paper)—It says here that the divine height of woman is 5 feet 5 inches.

She (angrily)—How dare you say that, when you know quite well that I am 5 feet 7 inches?

He—O, well, my dear, you are more than divine. M. P.

And She Said——

Wife: "When I begin to look old, will you love me?"

Husband [absentmindedly]: "Sure I do, dear." E. L. R.

In corsets—assured service

Stooping, bending, sitting—every movement of the body is a challenge to the service-quality of the elastic. In America's finest corsets, the supreme service-quality of Kenlastic is the answer. Discriminating women look for the mark that identifies this superior fabric—a wavy blue line inside the corset, at top and bottom.

TINTEX tints stand many launderings

.... WHEN you have tinted your dainty "undies", stockings, etc. with Tintex, you'll find that they stand repeated laundering without losing their colorful beauty. For all the Tintex pastel tints are extremely long-lasting. This means a great saving in time—and money, too!

.... and remember the wonderful simplicity of Tintex. You just "tint as you rinse". For lace-trimmed silks, there is a special Tintex that tints the silk without coloring the lace.

.... and there are fast and lustrous Tintex dark colors, too—Black, Navy Blue, Brown, Cardinal Red, Dark Green, Dark Blue and Khaki Brown. See them all on the Tintex Color Card—25 tints and dyes!

Blue Box—for lace-trimmed silks (tints the silk—best tints in white). Grey Box—for tinting and dyeing all materials (silk, cotton, mixed goods).

You see and enjoy your saving on each purchase.

You take home the full dollar's worth for every dollar you use here.

The Art of Letter Writing

Bread and Butter Notes, the Word of Condolence, or That of Congratulation Are Simple to Pen and Are Acts of Thoughtfulness That Will Not Be Forgotten

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

By Persis Standish.

MORE lost than the lost art of conversation is the lost art of letter writing. I have on my desk two letters, and have had a number of others, asking me questions about when and how certain letters should be written, on what kind of stationery, and in what manner. There are so many varieties of letters, each of their own kind important, that one hesitates to give general rules.

Business letters, of course, we will not discuss, since it is easy for the heads of firms to dictate the policies of their business letters for the whole organization. But there is one thing I would like to say about business letters that come to newspapers. Many of our correspondents complain now and then that they do not receive prompt answers. If they do not, it is because of the volume of the mail that comes to a newspaper, rather than for any other reason. For a letter to any department of a newspaper is a sacred thing. There is no other organization in the world that treats letters with the same consideration and the same importance as is given to them as newspapers. I have known it to happen that people have lost good positions for merely neglecting a letter—not letters, but a letter—either in answering it flippantly or neglecting to answer it at all. So our correspondents can write to any department of this paper and receive always the utmost consideration, the utmost silence, if they wish, and get the promptest reply it is possible to give. First come, first served.

The Letter of Condolence.

Next to the newspaper letters, the ones that socially should receive the first consideration are those of condolence. There is no possible way of expressing sympathy that is so adequate and at the same time so satisfying to the recipient as a letter. The letter need not be long, it need not be flowery, but it is easy to say in black and white things that are hard to express in the spoken word. When you see the bereaved one your own tears choke you, but if you are at a distance you can really express what you feel in sympathy for them. A letter of condolence can be extremely simple. Here is one received lately by a woman who had lost a child, from some one who is a practical stranger to her.

"Dear Mrs. Green: The little that the human word can do to express human sympathy, I wish to make it do now. Will you take the wish for the deed and believe that my heart goes out to you in this hour of your sorrow?

"CORA BROWN."

Expressing Thanks.

Next in importance in the letter writing scheme are letters of gratitude. They should be written almost immediately after the receipt of either gift or favor. Of course, in the case of wedding gifts they may be postponed until the honeymoon is over, if the bride wishes. However, this seems a little bit procrastinating to me, as it is much easier to write a letter hot off the pan, if you know what I mean, than to try to write it a few weeks later when the incident is cold. For instance, if the bride writes immediately after she has received each gift, she will not miss the time that it takes to write the individual note and she will not become confused as to which letters she has written, and will not forget anybody. Also, she will not have a tremendous labor before her when she comes back from her honeymoon.

Letters of thanks for Christmas gifts should be sent no later than the 15th of January. A letter of gratitude for a gift can be very short, indeed, and still express a great deal of appreciation.

The typical letter for the bride or other recipient of gifts should be something like this:

"My dear Harriet: How do you manage to know just what it is I most want to possess? Then, how do you manage to have it here at just the right moment when I most wish to possess it? I think you must either be or own a wizard.

"Thank you so much for the lovely gift. Do come and see it in my house. I shall be here, too. Affectionately,

"HAZEL."

Under the heading of letters of gratitude, of course the "bread and butter" letters are a most important group. They must be written immediately upon one's return from a visit. If one has been some time in a house—say a week or two—a short letter will not do. The letter then must be at least several pages long and attempt to chronicle events since one has left the house.

A visit of a week-end calls for just a note. Some very punctilious people write such a letter even to dinner hostesses and luncheon hostesses, if the dinner and luncheons were given for them especially. This is not absolutely necessary where a call can be paid shortly after the event, but it is nice, particularly if the guest of honor happened to be from out of town and the hostess was the friend of a very good friend.

Sending flowers sometimes does away with the necessity of writing such letters, but in case one sends flowers one should express on the card that goes with them one's appreciation for hospitality received.

Congratulations.

Letters of congratulation are among the hardest of all to write, but they are among the most delightful to receive. They should be written not only to men who are engaged to be married, but also in many other cases, such as graduations from college, success in an artistic way, remarkable promotions, and any other good fortune that happens to a dear friend. Of course, no example is needed here of this sort of letter because it is so easy to write from your heart on such an occasion.

Of love letters there is not much to say, Miss Blake having said most of it already, and probably warned you with the old slogan: "Write, and fear no man. Do not write, and fear no woman." However, there are lots of letters in social intercourse which are quite as dangerous as love letters, and about which nobody hears until there is a suit for libel, or other fracas not quite so serious, but equally unpleasant. In a general way it is safest never to say an unkind thing at all, but it is positively dangerous to say one in a letter. Your dearest friend today may turn out to be your deadest enemy tomorrow. This may sound cynical, but it is the way of the world.

A man or a woman have come between two men and two women many times. Letters have been shown in which something written in the strictest confidence and meant only for loving eyes have been flaunted before cynical ones, and then the little "bird on the wire" tells all, and there is trouble. Unless you absolutely know such and such to be a fact never put it in a letter. Then, if you know that it is a fact and it is an unpleasant fact, still do not put it in a letter. If you have any warning to give, or if you wish to say anything unpleasant, say it—but never write it!

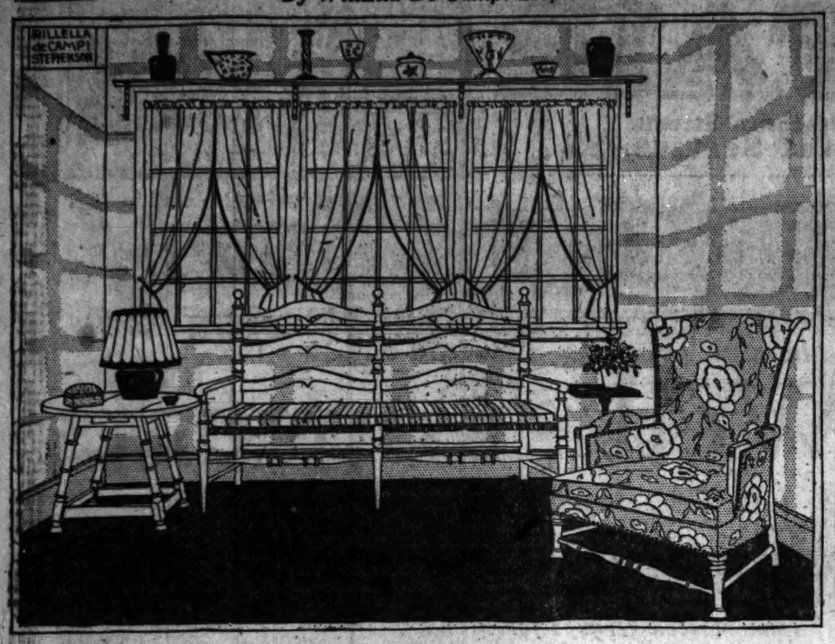
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.



The color scheme of this delightful room is cream and blue, with curtains bound in vermilion.

Sun Rooms Bring the Brightness and Freshness of Spring Days Right Into the House.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Willa de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SPRING days, clear skies and pleasant weather bring around "sun room time" again. We must plan now to brighten up our sun rooms, to make them more livable for the many coming days which we shall enjoy in them. Such a wide variety of furnishings and decorations are on the market that any number of interesting schemes may be carried out successfully.

Adjoining a living room done in French provincial style is the charmingly simple little sun room illustrated today. The walls are covered with a blue and cream plaid paper and woodwork is painted deep blue. A group of three windows almost fills one wall. Novel window curtains are made of cream colored voile, bound with vermilion. They are finished at the top with narrow French headings, and are caught back with vermilion cords. Extending across the full width at the top of the window is a narrow wooden shelf, painted blue to match the woodwork. Colorful bits of odd pottery are ranged along this shelf. Placed against the group of windows is an old hickory flag seat settee. A pair of arm chairs and a side chair at a little desk match the settee.

Red, blue and cream colored striped linen makes seat pads for all of these. Decorative flowered linen upholsters a large, comfortable arm chair. A drop leaf table of hickory in one corner near the end of the settee holds a bright colored pottery lamp, with a lemon yellow paper shade decorated in black, as well as an enameled box and an ash tray. A small table at the other end holds a bright bowl of flowers. A wrought iron bridge lamp, lighting the desk, has a shade of accordion plaited, flowered yellow calico. Deep blue fiber rugging completely covers the floor.

Quite different in character is a larger and more luxurious sun room. Walls and woodwork are painted a pale sage green. At the many casement windows are curtains of copper colored silk gauze. They are sill length, hanging straight, and are edged with narrow multi-colored worsted fringe. Large comfortable bent reed chairs and sofa are enameled burnt orange with trims of deep green. Striped glazed chintz cushions repeat these colors. A wrought iron settee at one side of the room is fitted with figured linen cushions and a wrought iron bench, placed before one group of windows, has a shiny black patent leather seat pad.

As colorful as a garden of blooms is another sun room in a small apartment. Walls are a light sunny yellow and the woodwork is black, decorated with a fine line of jade green. Black tarlatan, gathered very full and stitched at the hems with several rows of brightly colored worsted, is used for window curtains. The furniture is a combination of reed and wood, painted jade green with black trims. Cushions for the chairs and sofa are of linen frieze in rainbow stripes of brilliant hue. Throwing the colors into strong relief is the black wool chenille floor covering.

Rainbow effects evidence great popularity for sun room use. At a recent exhibit, one of the most favored suites was one made of stick style bent reed, the sticks painted in alternating rainbow colors. The suite is set up in interesting display room. Walls are paneled and painted cream color with the panelings picked out in bright violet. At the windows are glass curtains of natural colored casement cloth, bordered with two inch bands of violet and sapphire blue glass rings. Cushions on the rainbow furniture are made of violet homespun, piped with blue. A pair of blue glass lamps on end tables have plaited violet paper shades, tied with blue tassel cords. Deep blue rugs are used on the floor.

Pleasingly effective is a sun room in a suburban house. The walls are done in pearl gray paper with an allover pattern of foliage in two tones of green and gray. Woodwork is painted a soft leaf green. Curtains at the long French windows are illusively different. They are made of two thicknesses of casement gauze, hanging straight to the floor. The one against the glass is of amber, the other of pale pinkish orange. They produce a soft glowing light that is most fascinating.

Bent reed furniture is painted a deep amber with leaf green trims. Cushions are of ombré striped material, shading from pale amber to deep orange. End tables and a pair of ladder back chairs are made of mellow golden maple. Green glass lamps conveniently placed have parchment shades. An extra arm chair placed near a set of narrow book shelves is upholstered in green and yellow checked linen. An amber glass lamp on a square maple table at one side of the chair has a marbleized paper shade. A Chinese rug almost completely covers the floor.

Incidental tables are of wrought iron with decorative tile tops. A colorful screen, painted in an Italian renaissance design, stands in one corner of the room. Wrought iron lamps have shades of figured paper. Large black and white marbleized rubber tiles cover the floor. Wrought iron doors separate this sun room from the adjoining living room.

My Greatest Thrill

In the Nick of Time.

It was during the construction of my firm's new building. I came to see how the work was progressing. The elevators were running, but doors had not yet been put in for them. I looked down from the sixth floor to see where the elevator was, and not seeing it down below, I lifted my head. No sooner had I done this than the elevator, coming down, passed the floor I was standing on. If I had remained looking down a second longer I wouldn't be writing this.

I shudder now when I think of my narrow escape. W. McV.

A Scare in a Cave.

When I was a girl of about 15 I went with a party of twenty people to explore a cave.

The entrance was near the river's brink. It was a tunnel four or five feet in length and just large enough for my father and one of the women, who weighed 200, to squeeze in.

We had to lie flat and crawl, till suddenly we found ourselves in a spacious room. There were many such enlargements, each to be entered through tunnels or narrow winding passage ways. We ah-ed and oh-ed till several hours had elapsed.

At last we turned to retrace our steps, noticing the freakish shadows from our two lanterns flit about, listening to the weird sounds made by falling stones and dripping water. Then, lo! We had lost our way. Even the dog stood still and stared. The river was pouring in through an opening. The rush and roar of the angry waters was sickening. We were terror stricken. A woman fainted, another prayed, the rest of us stood like statues mute and still.

A brave little boy walked forward and discovered our river was only a stream of light, while the mighty roar of the water was the sound made by the wind outside, all of which had gone unnoticed when we had entered.

To this day my heart stands still for a second when I think of the terrible moment when we first beheld that "stream." G. E. A.

Remembered.

Years ago, while living in a small town, I played with a little girl next door who later married a wealthy man and took up her residence in a large city. I often heard of her wealth and charities, but never supposed she would have time to give her former playmate a thought.

My greatest thrill occurred on Christmas day, when the postman handed me a greeting card from her enclosing a good substantial check, with a few personal words added urging me to visit her this coming summer. A. A. E.

Scaring a Wildcat.

It was about 3 o'clock in the morning in a Canadian mining camp, where we were living, when I was awakened by a great commotion among the chickens. I went to the back door and saw a large cat just outside the henhouse door. I picked up some potatoes that were in the kitchen and threw them at the cat. It turned toward me, bristled up, and came in my direction.

I closed the door hurriedly and called my husband. As we went out the door we saw the cat go around the house and suddenly realized it was a wild cat! MRS. J. R. T.

A Narrow Escape.

After a long and tiring motor trip we had arrived in a strange town and rented a sleeping room in a private home. Having driven all day and the night before, we retired early and in a few minutes were almost asleep when I told my husband that I thought I smelled gas. He said he did, too, and turned on the electric light and saw an open gas pipe close to the electric light fixture in the ceiling. He lighted a match and a small explosion followed and a stream of flame burst from the pipe.

We told the people in whose home we were, and they immediately put a cap on the pipe, explaining that they had just turned on the gas, having moved in the house only a few days before and did not know there was a gas pipe in that room. MRS. A. E. P.

The Cheekiest Person I Ever Met

High Handed.

Several years ago I boasted a first hand knowledge of numismatics. As I knew the majority of rare United States coins, I was ever on the lookout for them. When the neighborhood grocer, learning of my hobby, came to me and offered to sell me the score or so of coins that he had taken in during his years of business, I bought the lot after seeing several choice specimens. But, imagine my surprise, when, looking my purchase over more carefully, I found an almost perfect silver dollar of the year 1794, the first year they were coined. As I made no secret of my good fortune, my neighbors soon knew of it.

The next Sunday, a rather talkative woman I had known for some time came over and asked to borrow my coins, as one of her guests was a coin dealer and she would like to show him my collection. I did not feel worried when she failed to return them that evening. Monday she came over, and handing me my case, glibly began: "My friend who visited me last night, so wanted to buy your dollar that I couldn't refuse him, knowing you would be glad to get the money."

Then, while I stood speechless, she handed me $50 and added: "I went to so much trouble on your account that I know you won't miss the $10 that I took for myself to buy a new hat with." She then turned and walked away. MRS. R. C.

A Pretty Long Memory.

One day a neighbor girl came to my house and asked me if I would lend her my skates for a while, as she wanted to show them to another girl, for she wanted a pair like them. Of course I consented. After many weeks of waiting she returned them all rusty and bent, saying, "I had an awfully nice time on your skates, but mother said I had better return them before something happens to them." They were so rusty I could not use them again. E. M.

PARTOLA ANTISEPTIC & LAXATIVE The Doctor in Candy Form

Popular Actor Now Able to Eat What He Likes

THOUSANDS of theater-goers have rocked with laughter at "Charley" Grapewin's delightful comedy acts. But few ever guessed that some of Mr. Grapewin's funniest scenes were played while he was suffering agonies with stomach trouble.

While playing in his well-known success, "The Awakening of Mr. Pipp," Mr. Grapewin's stomach trouble became so bad that it seemed as if he might have to quit the stage for a time. Fortunately, he was induced to try Adlerika. Results were so good that he has never been without a bottle since. "It surely is great," he declares, "to be able to eat anything I want without fear of gas or other stomach trouble."

Intestinal Stasis

STOMACH GAS, indigestion, gas bloating, and other forms of stomach and bowel trouble are often due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This increasingly common disease, which is usually caused by improper food, lack of exercise, and other faults of modern life, is said to afflict three people out of every four.

Intestinal Stasis simply means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. Instead of being promptly passed out of the bowels, this waste matter remains many hours or even days longer than it should. It then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and causes gas bloating, sour stomach, indigestion and sleeplessness.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move daily, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or soda or magnesia cannot give more than temporary relief from Intestinal Stasis or Gas. It can be relieved permanently only by continued REAL intestinal cleansing.

Adlerika, first used by Dr. Carl Weschcke in his private practice, is a bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic which acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other detergent and gas-expelling elements.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of the first effects of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervousness, sleeplessness and other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might poison your system.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as most stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Many physicians recognize it as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary.

Don't think if your bowels move daily that you cannot have Intestinal Stasis. Gas is one of the most common symptoms. You'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter which Adlerika brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it.

The popular actor, Mr. Charles Grapewin, of 311 N. Arden Blvd., Los Angeles, Cal. Mr. Grapewin is known to thousands of theater-goers throughout the United States and Canada.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

ZIP COON ate supper with me last night and afterwards he told me a story. Here it is as he told it to me:

His brother, Jim Coon, lives just over the hill and he's a great fisherman. Every time he passes Crafty Fox's den on his way to fish he sings out: "Hey, Crafty, old top, this is a great day for the fish to bite. Why don't you cut yourself a pole and come along? I'll show you how to hook up the nicest mess of wiggly shiners you ever clapped your eyes on."

He does not really want Crafty to come with him. He just says it to tease him.

He would go whistling down the road.

"Go chase yourself," snaps back Crafty. "You can't teach me how to fish. I knew before you were born."

"All right," grins brother Jim. "I'll bet you don't know how to put a worm on a hook and you can't tell whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing up your bait." Then he would go whistling down the road.

One day when he came to the lake he dropped his line into the water and the first bite—what do you think he pulled up? Old Tommy Turtle. Then Jim began to tease him.

"I won't let you go, Tommy, unless you pomise me you'll clean up all that old junk lying around the bottom of this fishing hole."

"I promise," said Tommy. "Just let me get back into the water and I'll move all that junk out of the way. I promise."

So kerplunk! Back he dived.

Brother Jim had not fished long before he saw old Crafty Fox sneaking through the woods with a fish pole over his shoulder.

"Get out of here," he barked. "This is my fishing ground and all the fish in it are mine."

"Excuse me for living," answered Brother Jim and moved away to the other side of the hole.

"YOU say I can't fish, hey?" sang out Crafty. "That I don't know whether it's a fish biting or a crawfish chewing my bait, hey? Well, I'll show you."

He dropped his line into the water and the end of his pole began to twitch and bob up and down.

"A bite," he yelled. "A big bite. Now watch me, Jim Coon."

Up came an old busted shoe.

He pulled and pulled with all his might and at last up came an—old busted shoe.

Jim began to holler. "My, my, what a lovely shiner you caught."

Crafty was mad. Into the water went his hook and line. Yank! Another bite. He pulled and pulled and up came an old pair of torn breeches.

Crafty was so mad he began to snort. Just then another jerk came on the line and he pulled up an old pair of suspenders.

ALL that afternoon he did nothing but pull up bits of junk. Finally he was so mad he couldn't stand it any longer. He broke his pole in two and flung it in the lake.

"Don't ever say fish to me again, Jim Coon, or I'll beat you to a frazzle."

Then he staggered home. He was all tuckered out.

Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me.

Brother Jim went over to look at the pile of junk and suddenly he began to laugh, for there was old Tommy Turtle poking his head out of the water.

"I guess I got it all cleared up, Jim Coon. There isn't any more down there. Much obliged to you for pulling it up for me."

He blew a few bubbles and disappeared.

Then Jim rolled around on the bank and nearly burst with laughter because he knew now why Crafty Fox had not caught any fish.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the cicada, sometimes called the locust, should live in the ground for seventeen years as a grub, clinging to the root of some tree and sucking sap from it, and then, some day, should turn loose, dig its way to the outer air and transform into the noisiest insect in the world.

The cicadas come out of the ground as grubs. They crawl hurriedly up the nearest bush, hunch up their backs and burst open their grub jackets. Then the sturdy, full grown cicada comes out, as big as a man's thumb. It is radiant, equipped with whirring wings, and given to much noise. Everybody is familiar with the rasping noise that the American cicada sets up. Yet it is only the male that is noisy. He has a bit of dry membrane like a drum head that he uses for the purpose. He pushes it in and out rapidly. He makes a noise on the same principle as the automobile horn.

It is little trouble on summer days to find, hanging on the bushes along the roadside the shells from which these cicadas have come. Often, also, it is easy to find pairs of cicada lovers. They take their places side by side on the limb of a tree. There they sit through the summer day and night, the female pensive, the male beating his endless serenade.

The female cuts a slit in the bark of the tree and lays her eggs. After a while these hatch out into funny looking little worm like things. These crawl out to the end of a limb and jump off. They fall upon the ground and dig in. They seize some friendly root and hang on. They are down for seventeen years. In most cases whole swarms go down at a time, set their alarm clocks for seventeen years, and all come up again at almost the same moment, when that time has passed. These are called seventeen year locusts. There are irregularities in the ranks, however, that appear at irregular intervals. But among the wierdest marvels of nature are these huge swarms that come to light but once in seventeen years.

$5 Apiece for Bright Sayings

The Tribune will pay $5 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

My little cousin, aged 3, saw a dog crossing the street the other day and said to me: "That dog is crossing the street without his mother."

Then on further thought, she said: "But it's all right; he looked both ways."

E. W.

Robert, my little next door friend, always kept a close watch on me when I went to get the car out, but his mother had told him he must never ask me to take him riding.

One day, seeing him with his hat and coat all on and standing near the hedge, I said brightly, "Well, Robert, are you going somewhere today?"

"O, yes," he answered at once, then added, "I fink I is—but I isn't asked yet."

B. R.

Tommy went to the hospital to see mother and the new baby sister. When his visit was over and he picked up his cap to leave the baby awoke and cried.

"Boy!" exclaimed Tom my proudly, "listen to her holler 'cause I gotta go!"

I know a way to get clothes whiter without scrubbing

No wasting fuel with Rinso—it sterilizes without boiling.

I'VE told all my neighbors about it, it's so wonderful! No hard rubbing or scrubbing, no boiling—just the simple matter of soaking the week's wash in safe, creamy, sterilizing suds.

Rinso suds! That's the whole secret. Rinso makes the water soft and sudsy all through—and the dirt and stains float right off by themselves!

Even cuffs, hems and edges that always had to be scrubbed until they were frayed, now come snowy with just a touch between the fingers. Of course my clothes last longer this way.

Rinso is kind to my hands, too. Keeps them from getting old and wash-worn. Try it next washday!

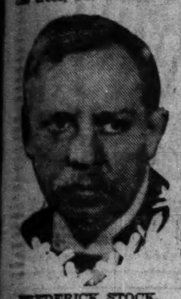
Critic Reviews Concert Season

By Edward Moore

It has been a busy season for the Chicago Symphony orchestra. At that, the year is not over for a good many of the players. There is a spring tour in prospect, and toward the end of June some fifty of them will forgather at Ravinia for ten weeks of opera and concert under the trees, but this would seem to be a fairly good time to estimate what has happened since they all assembled last October at Orchestra hall.



FREDERICK STOCK, conductor of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. [Kochne Photo.]

Gather around, then, and let us grow statistical for a few moments. When the shouting and the tumult died at Orchestra hall last night, the orchestra had finished twenty-eight weeks of concert playing. Twenty-eight pairs of concerts made up the Friday afternoon-Saturday night series, wherein each pair has identical programs. Fifty-six concerts there, plus twelve more in the Tuesday afternoon series, plus sixteen "pops," plus twelve children's programs in two series of six each.

Now let us add them up. They make an even one hundred in Orchestra hall alone, but that is not all. The orchestra has had regular assignments in Milwaukee, other regular assignments at the University of Chicago, a few more at Aurora and Oak Park. Altogether you will find that it has been doing an average of a little better than four concerts each week throughout the twenty-eight weeks.

But is this all that these ninety or a hundred men have to do to earn their salaries; to sit down and play a couple of hours four times a week? Answer, in massed ensemble from the men themselves, it is not. In order to give concerts they must have something to play, and in order to have something to play they must rehearse. We who go to concerts casually may think Mr. Stock merely stands up in front of the orchestra and makes cryptic motions with stick, left hand, and glance of the eye, forgetting that the principal part of what he is doing is to signal indications of what has been worked out in detail and by hard labor during rehearsal hours.

Rehearsing 124 Compositions.

In order to make this season possible, it was necessary to rehearse no less than 124 compositions of greater or less length, the works of sixty-seven different composers. There is something of an order. Mr. Stock has many times in public and private paid tribute to the musicianship of the men in the Chicago Symphony orchestra. These figures may give some slight indication of what he means. The wonder is that they were able to come anywhere near such a number, not to mention the fact of a uniformly fine, even brilliant, performance, and remembering always that there are only twenty-four hours in a day and seven days in a week.

This has been the Beethoven centennial year, as has been frequently pointed out in every publication even remotely connected with music, therefore it is not surprising that Beethoven has led in number of performances on Mr. Stock's list. No less than nineteen different Beethoven works have been played during the season, the entire nine symphonies, three of the piano concertos, the single violin concerto, the triple concerto for violin, cello, and piano; the "Coriolanus," "Prometheus," "Egmont," and third "Leonore" overtures, and such other works as the Minuet and Finale from opus 59, No. 3, the Polonaise, and the Overture and Grand Fugue.

This account applies to the Friday-Saturday series alone. It makes no mention of the fact that Mr. Stock repeated several of these works on other series, nor that the fifth, or "Emperor" piano concerto, was played on three different series: Friday-Saturday by Harold Samuel, Tuesday by Elly Ney, and Thursday "pop" by Joseph Brinkman. At that, Mr. Stock did not complete all his plans for doing homage to the memory of Beethoven. At the beginning of the season he had included the "Missa Solemnis" in his list, but this project had to be abandoned. No one can say, however, that he has not done plenty, culminating with the Ninth Symphony in the week just finished.

Once again one feels like applauding Mr. Stock for the manner in which he presented the Beethoven music, not only the noble magnificence of performance, but his idea of spreading the Beethoven program over the entire season instead of concentrating it into a Beethoven gorge. It may be many years before so much Beethoven is heard again, but it would be more years before people would care to hear it at all if it had been confined, as certain other organizations have tried to do, into a single Beethoven week. For it is always true that one can hear too much of any composer, whether that composer be Beethoven, Brahms, Wagner, Puccini, or the most toe-tickling of jazz writers.

Opinions of Novelties Vary.

After the Beethoven list is ended, other composers do not show up in such fruitful numbers. Wagner is credited with eight performances, counting excerpts from different operas as individual compositions; Richard Strauss has six; Bach, Brahms, and Mozart four each; Handel, Schubert, and Tschaikowsky three each. After these they come along in twos and ones. But, digesting more statistics, twenty-five items on this season's répertoire were first performances, and twelve, not always novelties, were American compositions. Perhaps this does not make much of a showing for American composers, to whom Mr. Stock always lends a receptive ear, but it is undoubtedly quite as much of a showing as they are entitled to make. When more of them write good music, more of them will appear on the symphony programs.

As to the novelties, every hearer is entitled to his own opinion as to which sounded the best. You may say a word for John Alden Carpenter's suite from his ballet, "Skyscrapers," with its ingenious complexities of rhythm, and its expressive, well mannered comments on jazz music. Or there was Miaskowsky's Sixth Symphony, written in the manner of nearly half a century ago, but presenting in musical terms a dramatic history of the Russian revolution. Or there was Emerson Whithorne's "Poem" for piano and orchestra, which, when Walter Gieseking played it, set nearly every one by the ears and strained the patriotism of the most chauvinistic. Or there was Skilton's "Primeval Suite," which sought to reproduce the tunes of the Indians, or Henry Eichheim's "Burma," which translated the sounds and the smell of the orient, or Leo Sowerby's "Medieval Poem," which turned out to be chiefly the kind of music that had been developing in Mr. Sowerby's own inner consciousness.

Perhaps the most startling of all to the unsuspecting were two, both of which went under the same name, "Concerto Grosso, though one was written by Kaminski and the other by Krenek. They were highly interesting examples of what the younger composers of middle Europe are trying to do these days, couched in the most modern idiom of sound, and because they were both so remote from any former musical experiences, somewhat stupefying to their auditors. Of the two, the Krenek work came off the better, even. Of the two, the Krenek work came off the better, though as a matter of composers' technique. Kaminski had tried to write according to the Handelian model of a double orchestra, but with all the skill of Mr. Stock and his men it could not sound anything but confused and muddy. Krenek was also a bit Handelian in the matter of contrasting a quartet with the full orchestra, but it will take a number of hearings before a Chicago audience is ready to take his work to its collective heart.

Soloists Were Numerous.

Soloists were numerous this year, no less than twenty-five specialists of instrument or voice being bulletined on the programs. Sometimes they appeared more than once. Young Master Jacques Gordon, for instance, played three

GOOD MORNING!

It's one you won't be ashamed to cry over and one that you'll HAVE to laugh over. It's full to the brim and running over with human-ness. A big, warm, eventful, thrilling, finely constructed drama dedicated to the "armies that never disband; that are mobilized for a conflict that never ends"—America's firemen!

MAY McAVOY is her charming self in "The Fire Brigade." [Nickolas Muray Photo.]

Do you remember the old song about the mother who "had three sons, three only ones——" that she sent away to war? Well, "The Fire Brigade" has a mother who gives her three to the fire department of her city, in the service of which her husband has died and where her husband's father, "Gramp," still holds forth in an out of the way station where the engine is still drawn by eager, steaming white horses.

A woman with "a listening heart," whose lips turn white and who looks straight ahead with praying eyes at each sound of clanging bells.

Two of her stalwart, laughing sons are killed in action. There remains her baby—Terry—who, being only a rookie, is at the station "Gramp" captains, which is across the street from the O'Neill home.

Charlie Ray as We Used to Know Him.

With joy and thanksgiving be it here said that, as Terry O'Neill, Charles Ray comes into his own again. Not for years has he had such a rôle. Once more, as in the days when his awkward, lovable, gangling, sheepish, desperate, straight shooting, boyish impersonations were our delight, he is that appealing, sad eyed, rib ticklingly funny chap he used to be. You're going to be mighty happy over young Mr. Ray—who appears exactly as young as he ever did—this trip.

Please take note before we plunge into the story that May McAvoy continues to remain off the shelf and that the cast contains Tom O'Brien, that tough egg of "The Big Parade"; Warner Richmond, who managed the ball team in "Slide, Kelly, Slide"; De Witt Jennings, Bert Woodruff, Vivia Ogden—the gossip in "Way Down East"; Eugenie Besserer, and a generous handful of other excellent players. All have been splendidly cast.

You learn right at the beginning of the picture that fire fighting is in the O'Neill blood and almost immediately you feel as if you had known the O'Neills all your life.

It is not so much later that you find out what causes many of the terrible fires that have been raging recently in the vicinity. Faulty building.

Fire Chief Wallace appears before the building commission and protests against contracts being given a certain Wainwright to whom he knows the commission has been sold out. He knows this man constructs cheaply and dishonestly. His concrete is largely sand. His insulation is defective. His timbers are too small and where iron is supposed to be used, sheet metal over wood is made to serve. Result is that when a fire starts it gains headway rapidly, pillars crumble, walls crackle and fall and there is destruction of property and great loss of life.

For his pains Wallace gets dismissal. But that comes a long way toward the conclusion of the story and much water flows under the bridge before it happens.

You're in at the Fires.

In the meantime you live right along with the boys and their mother and their pals. You see fire drills, tear to fires, swallow hard over what happens at those fires, exult over the bravery of the heroes who live whole lives in a moment, and smile fondly over the romance of young Terry and Helen Corwin—who is the daughter of a certain much advertised philanthropist—James Corwin—who is hand and glove with Wainwright in all his crooked dealings.

Wainwright builds an orphanage that is sponsored by Corwin. Wallace sends Terry to cover the place and get evidence that it is not fit for the housing of helpless little children, or, indeed any human beings.

Terry gets the evidence and discovers besides—what he discovers. No more, please, for I don't want you writing in saying I've spoiled this picture for you by telling the plot.

In addition to everything else it hands you, "The Fire Brigade" presents about half a reel of gorgeous colored photography. Some of the love scenes have been thus pictured and they are charming.

"O," young Terry says to his Helen, "you look just like a lady out of a book!" And does she? SHE DOES! But he, brave in his uniform and brass buttons, with the flush on his face and the brown eyes shining, is not like a hero out of a book. He's just a fine, clean, great hearted lad, such as any mother might wish her boy to be.

The love making between Mr. Ray and Miss McAvoy is an adorable exhibition.

Well—as I see it—"The Fire Brigade" is a great picture. Proof of its greatness lies—to me—in the fact that it is ten reels long and SEEMS no more than six.

No dud of a photoplay can fool you like that.

Can it?

Bits aBOUTem.

COLLEEN MOORE, I am told, sends out about 12,000 photographs a month at a cost of ten cents each—or more. This, in response to requests from fans. One reason why movie stars need large salaries.

QUEEN MARIE was offered $25,000 for one day's work in "Resurrection" by United Artists. She refused the job and Clarissa Selwynne got it. But Clarissa did NOT get the $25,000.

WALLACE BEERY and RAYMOND HATTON who scrapped—it's said—and vowed that never, no never, would they appear together in another picture, have, according to late report, made up and, sweetly reconciled, will be seen co-starring in the Paramount production, "Fireman, Save My Child." A note on my desk says that, "To make the reunion complete, the entire production line-up which scored so heavily in 'Behind the Front,' and 'We're In The Navy Now,' will be behind the camera for 'Fireman, Save My Child.'"

RUTH STONEHOUSE—remember Ruth out at Essanay?—has been engaged by Mrs. Wallace Reid for a rôle in "The Satin Woman," now under production.

RUSSIA HAS INVITED CHARLIE CHAPLIN to come there and produce films by the state film trust. "We will greet you with open arms," declares Russia.

"WIND" is the name of Lillian Gish's new starring vehicle for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Lars Hanson, who was the minister in "The Scarlet Letter," has the leading male rôle.

See you tomorrow!

The Rev. Clergy

By H. L. Mencken.

THE easiest way to get a reputation as a liar is to tell the truth. It is an ancient platitude, but still hale and hearty. There was a new proof of it very lately, when Sinclair Lewis published his "Elmer Gantry." All the Gantrys of the land rose up as one man to denounce the book as a libel upon the cloth and its author as a scoundrel. Yet that book remains fundamentally true. Lewis does not argue in it that all evangelical clergymen are like his grotesque hero; he merely argues that such men exist. Who, having any first-hand knowledge of holy men, and being free to speak frankly, will deny it? Certainly not I.

In this department, I believe, I may pretend to a certain expertness, or, at all events, to rather more learning than is common. For the reverend clergy, as representatives of the most ancient profession known to man, have always interested me greatly, and I have devoted no little of my time, since laying off the follies of youth, to studying their ideas and searching their psyches. There is too much tendency, in the modern age, to dismiss them as anachronisms. This, I am convinced, is a grievous error, and I have not been guilty of it. They are still important men, and they will remain so for long ages. So I have striven diligently to load up with knowledge of them, and to try to understand them.

Well, it is my firm conviction, after all this labor, that Elmer Gantry is a true and palpable hit. He is not only possible; he is even typical. There is, in almost every American town, an evangelical pastor who approximates him quite as closely as any real American boy ever approximated Huckleberry Finn. He may not be exactly duplicated, of course, anywhere, but he is duplicated at least in part well nigh everywhere. For all Lewis' portrait of him says, reading it aright, is that the clergy of the hell fire sects, taking one with another, are not what is called gentlemen—that they come, in the main, out of the humbler orders of the people, and carry the peculiar weaknesses of their class into the sacred office. This is not merely true; it is obvious.

But there is no need to get into a lather of excitement and indignation over the fact. For all I know to the contrary, it may be better to have them so than to have them otherwise. I am inclined, in truth, to believe firmly that it is. It is precious easy, as the history of the world has often demonstrated, to so refine a clergy that it quite loses contact with the flock it is told off to serve. When that happens the church becomes a mere parasite, without rational purpose or usefulness. The doctrines it teaches may continue to be highly virtuous, and may even increase greatly in plausibility and beauty, but they can have no more effect upon the masses of men than the sonorous blather of university philosophers.

I am not arguing here that the ideas propagated by the Gantrys of this great republic are true. As a matter of fact, I question many of them, and have often put my questioning into harsh and even ribald terms. But I believe that they are ideas suitable to the intellectual habits and limitations of the people they are aimed at, and that, whether they are true or false, they at least urge those people to what is commonly regarded as better living. Is that urge always translated into overt acts? I don't know, and it is not important. The main point is that the urge itself is implanted. The devices used are often absurd, and sometimes almost insane, but it would certainly be going too far to say that they are wholly ineffective.

Their effectiveness, indeed, is probably quite as great as that of the devices of any other religious system. For no religion, it must be plain, ever succeeds in transforming its votaries completely, save perhaps in the case of isolated saints. In even the most subtle and rational there is an enormous gap between the teaching and the practice. It must be thus so long as mankind is what it is—and the fact is always as plain among the clergy as in the flock. Gantry is thus no libel; he is simply the projection of an undeniable fact. And in the character of his peculiar weaknesses, it seems to me, he beautifully exemplifies the special deficiencies of the theological scheme he stands for and of the class from which he springs.

That theological scheme labors under the difficulty of having to make itself comprehensible to men and women of elemental minds, lacking in even the most ordinary information and quite incapable of any sort of thought save the simplest. The fact robs it at once of the mystical elements which enter so largely into all other religious systems and reduces it to a series of bald syllogisms, most of them palpably unsound in premises. Its logic has the childish naïveté of that of a political orator, a newspaper editorial writer, or a chiropractor. In proportion as it stampedes the groundlings it dismays the learned.

But it must be kept on that level in order that it may be grasped at all, and so the business of propagating it can only be carried on by men with a special gift for nonsense. Either they are innocents themselves, and hence anaesthetic to dubious evidence and confused reasoning, or they are romantic cynics like Gantry, full of a conviction that a good end justifies any means. I don't think that many of them are hypocrites. Gantry himself is surely not one. He is simply a man who estimates syllogisms, not by their premises but by their conclusions, and logicians by their success, not by their professional correctness and private virtue.

Educated beyond a certain point, such men tend to revolt against the oversimplified dogmas of their primary faith. But not many of them are so educated. There is within their communion a deep-seated and powerful feeling, almost an instinct, that the business is dangerous. So part of their function as ecclesiastics is to combat certain sorts of knowledge with every resource at their command, and in the more remote and isolated parts of the country they commonly succeed. In some places, indeed, they have resorted to the ancient ecclesiastical device of calling in the secular arm to aid them, and there the astounding spectacle is presented of teachers being punished for teaching what every civilized human being is supposed to know.

But this endeavor, in a country wherein communications remain comparatively free, grows increasingly difficult. What the young cannot acquire officially they pick up by bootlegging, and their eagerness for it augments in proportion to the difficulty of getting at it. Its effect upon them, from the standpoint of the dominant theology, is plainly disastrous. They may not abandon that theology formally; even in petto they may retain a sentimental affection for it. But its hold upon them is loosened; they no longer feel any urge to propagate it. Thus recruiting for the sacred office becomes difficult, and even impossible, in this relatively enlightened class, and candidates for the cloth must be sought on those lower levels where the density of Gantrys is higher.

The fact explains both the curious ignorance of the great majority of evangelical clergymen—an ignorance often shocking to the observer who makes any contact with them—and their weakness for the devices of quackery. It is not the graduate of the Yale law school who becomes a shyster; it is the poor fellow whose equipment is barely sufficient to make him a lawyer at all. And it is not the young doctor from the Harvard medical school who becomes a quack, but the alumnus of the college that is only one jump ahead of the police. So among holy men. The easier the way to the pulpit and the heavier the burdens upon genuine knowledge, the larger the production of Gantrys.

I am no constructive critic, and hence do not propose a remedy. No doubt nature will achieve an effective one, given time enough. For the tides of human progress are obviously running against the whole Gantry hocus-pocus. It is no more possible to dam them up by law than it would be to dam up the tides of the sea. Soon or late they must overwhelm even the Bible belt. When that time comes the Gantry type of pastor will find his flock laughing at him, not only when he is clowning, but also and more especially when he is in deadly earnest. Thus he will either have to take on the enlightenment and intellectual integrity of the higher varieties of holy clerk, now the chief objects of his scorn, or abandon the ghostly trade altogether.

Thumbs Down on "Love Is Like That"

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The theater on Broadway moved into the last six weeks of its season Easter Monday night. One more flash and the lights will go out. A lot of them are beginning to burn a little dim already.

There are twelve new plays scheduled in this Easter week rush, but none of them is of particular promise. The one we saw tonight, for instance, a romantic comedy by S. N. Behrman and Kenyon Nicholson called "Love Is Like That," was a disappointment.

ANN DAVIS plays the heroine in this romance. [White Studio Photo.]

Behrman is the author of last week's Guild play, "The Second Man," and Nicholson wrote "The Barker," which is a success. But as collaborators neither does the other any good.

"Love Is Like That" is one of those obvious romantic comedies about the refugee Russian prince. This particular prince is given an interesting start by being discovered as a stowaway aboard an ocean liner and rescued by a pretty lady just as he is about to give up and fling himself overboard.

She hides him in her cabin with her chaperon, and gets him by Ellis island when she furnishes bond that he will not become a public charge. Then she brings him home and demands that her father, an Oklahoma oil man being dragged through the vulgarian set of New York society, shall give him a job.

Father is not at all sympathetic but the heroine's aunt thinks to marry the prince off would be a good joke on somebody. Soon he is engaged to a hard boiled widow, but really in love with his rescuing angel. To escape the widow he pretends to be an impostor, a valet. But even by being noble he cannot win the heroine, who loves an Oklahoma boy. She seemed a little distressed that this was so, and so did the audience because Basil Rathbone, who is tall, handsome and has the most princely manners, played the Russian.

That is probably the play's chief weakness. Its romance is all twisted. In Cincinnati, where it was tried by the Stuart Walker stock a year ago, they said it had two good acts and one not so good. I found the not so good one but could not locate the two that were good. Must have been two other acts.

Ann Davis plays the heroine, and both Catherine Willard and Lucille Watson are in the cast.

Maria on the Loose:

I have only one other new play to tell you about this week. "One Glorious Hour," it is called, and it is not a bit over sixty minutes too long. And yet it is informative.

There are, it appears from the play, restless baronesses in the wildernesses of central Europe who on occasion go violently Elinor Glyn. One of these is the heroine of "One Glorious Hour." Her name is Maria, and on a summer's day she took her rowboat and went for a sail. Comes a wind and Maria and the boat crash on the opposite shore, miles from home.

But, fortunately, near their landing place there is a castle, and in the castle three young men, not at all unlike the artists of Trilby's adventure. One of the artists—the one who writes sonnets—senses that all is not right on the beach and, going down, carries Maria into the castle.

She is at least passing fair, and, after a drink of water, moderately charming. The boys agree to keep her. Next day they loan her a bathing suit, and, being a modest baroness, she wears nothing else for three acts.

Well, sir, believe it or not, the poet writes sonnets to her, the pianist sets them to music, and the painter puts her on canvas. And, save for a rather large vaccination scar abaft the kneecap, she is a picture worthy any artist's canvas.

For eight days Maria lives with the boys, they respecting her bathing suit and she respecting their art. Then, comes the yawn, and Maria, being more restless than usual, drapes a beautiful Spanish shawl about her shoulders [she found it in the castle, if you must know] and goes in search of Eric, the poet.

Finding Eric asleep with his boots on, she lures him off stage, out under the bunchlights. . . . The next day the baron and his troop of horse, for the moment on foot, come in search of Maria. Finding her, he exclaims:

"Well, well, Maria! Up to your old tricks, I see!"

And Maria, having no satisfactory answer, and it then being curtain time, anyway, goes home with him. She has, she exultantly declares, had her hour of freedom, so who cares?

Eric is rather sad. But what's he to do? That's the play.

Vivienne Osborne is the beautiful bathing girl, and extremely easy to look at, even for three acts. Ulrich Haupt is the poet, Effingham Pinto the pianist, and Jay Fassett the painter. Joseph Kilgour is in the cast, but not for long. Which probably pleases Joseph.

A Price for Every Purse.

Price cutting in the New York theater has become an art. By its scientific application the competition of the movies is gradually being met. A man told me last week that he had averaged two nights a week at the theater all this season, that he had seen many good plays and several that he considered fine, and that he had not once paid even the box office price for his tickets. He is a steady and devoted patron of the cut-rate brokers.

From September to April 200 plays were produced in the local playhouses. A hundred of them can safely be listed with the failures, and probably another fifty as no better than moderate successes. Of fifty plays on Broadway last week twenty-three were presumably in demand at the speculators' and twenty-seven were being sold for practically half price. By the end of the week, because it was Holy Week, the cut-rate list had jumped to thirty-five.

One showman, Gustav Blum, has frankly made a success of his season by selling two seats for the price of one, not only through the brokers but with the aid of a mailing list. Where the cheaper seats were priced at $1.10 the customers have been given two at 55c each. And if their pride dictated that they should sit in the orchestra seats they get two for $2.20, or were more comfortably placed with two for $3.30. Which brought their evening's entertainment pretty close to what it would have cost them to go to the movies, of which, an increasing number confessed, they were growing tired.

Naturally this has meant a paring of the cost of operating the shows. The salaries of the players have been cut to the minimum, and most of the plays so offered get along with one set of scenery and small casts.

Cheaper Tickets a Help.

A natural assumption is that these cheaper entertainments are far below standard. But that is not true. They include, for example, Walter Hampden's "Caponsacchi," dramatized from Browning's "The Ring and the Book," which as high an authority as William Lyon Phelps has placed at the head of his list of the best plays of the season. Also "The Devil in the Cheese," which is likewise in the Phelps list.

A comedy produced early in the season by John Golden, "Two Girls Wanted," miffed at by the critics, is now in its thirty-first week. Four of the big musical shows were in the cut rates last week—"Le Maire's Affairs," which is new; "The Countess Maritza," "Queen High," and "The Ramblers," with Clark and McCullough—though for these it was only the cheaper seats that were cut.

"The Squall," a favorite cut-rater, has played to a profit for twenty-three weeks, and "Tommy," a homey little play,

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

LETTERS come in about "Trelawny of the Wells": letters telling me why it was not so good in Mr. Tyler's revival as when it was given here in 1899 by Mr. Daniel Frohman's company from the old Lyceum Theater in New York; letters telling me why it was better last week than in 1899; letters scolding me for not having been ecstatic in reporting the Monday performance; letters reproving me for reporting the performance as if it were an event of mighty importance; letters saying I erred in not having involved in my report something about the manner in which the comedy was acted by Mr. Frohman's players; letters insisting that I displayed a palmy-days complex in implying that the players of 1899 were ever so much better than the players of 1927 when submitted to the test of "Trelawny": letters from active actors, from ex-actors, and from persons who hope to be actors explaining this and explaining that as to the comedy and as to the manner in which it ought to be performed. Letters,—and ever so many, with none distinctively unlike the run of letters mailed hither when, now-and-then, there is something in the theater that is, for one reason or another, of special interest to those who may be classified as once-in-a-season theater-goers—those who explain that they go to the theater nowadays "only when there is something good to be seen." Of course, what they mean is not that they go whenever there is "something good," but when there is something that they regard as good because it was held to be good in the long-ago.

ALAN EDWARDS He's vis-à-vis with Miss Munson in "Twinkle! Twinkle!"

And the letters that come with such occasions are, for me, among the delectable mitigations of going to the theater for hire: they are least irritating when they are meant to be most so; and nine in every ten of them have the beneficial effect of making me feel to be years younger than I am, so seasoned and mellow and authoritative are they in tone and text. Thus, from a lady I know to be aged all of thirty-seven years: "It is just too bad that you lack the background to realize that things like 'Trelawny' with selected actors serve, for those of us who have most loved the theater through the years, to define a period; to put into an intimate, first-hand survey the special talents of the men and the women whom we have seen pass, as it were, through the Seven Ages of an actor's life." I shall chuckle about that letter whenever I meet or whenever I think of the writer; for not more than two years have passed since she told me, of an evening when all present were meaning to entertain me by talking shop—my shop—that her first play had been "The Girl of the Golden West," and that she had seen it while still in seminary!

On Remembering the 1899 Actors.

"You write," writes Mr. H. T. Craven, "that, 'all-in-all, it is a delightful and an amusing example of how an old play may be disinterred'; but you go on to indicate that you know just how it was acted before it was entombed, and without saying wherein you feel the difference lies. Some of us, Sir, have, like you, memories of many a 'celebrity,' as you would put it, who was in that cast of twenty-five years ago, and would enjoy having you chat about them." And Mr. Craven is one of maybe twenty readers good enough to send in a copy of the 1899 cast in Chicago—a cast differing, as to two or three rôles, from that which had given the comedy earlier in New York, and as to two or three from that which afterward gave it in Philadelphia, where I saw it.

But it doesn't seem to me that there can be measurable interest to readers of THE TRIBUNE in telling that I thought William Courtleigh ever so much better than John Kellard as Gadd, or John Mason better than Rollo Peters as Wrench, the elder George Boniface not nearly so good as Wilton Lackaye as Telfer, and so on. The revival was delightful and it was amusing to me; and it was both wellnigh entirely because I had seen the comedy when it was not obscured by the actors. It may be that as many as 13,000 persons saw "Trelawny" last week in the Blackstone; and I doubt that any of the others took as much of real delight and amusement from the performance as I. The comedy is among the minor plays which I actually love: I have read it through with undiminished pleasure five or six times in the years since I first saw it performed. I believe that I shall never forget the performances I saw in 1899: there is to this day a catch in my throat when I recall Mr. Courtleigh as Gadd decided that, after all, he would best take the proffered rôle of the Demon of Discontent in the pantomime; and I still know a smiling joy at the memory of Charles Butler's standing on his head as Colpoys vainly trying to be a funny-man off-stage. I shall never forget that performance; and I should have forgotten lest Monday night's by now had it been merely a performance, and not an occasion: an occasion for the actors fortunate to be concerned in Mr. Tyler's latest expression of his amiable and harmless instinct for barnuming; an occasion for the audience, which had its little difficulties in remembering just who was who of the celebrities; and an occasion for me because I had seen the comedy properly acted.

For these star-studded casts are, more than nine times in ten, largely a matter of hooey. They do no harm; they afford an enormous delight to the aforesaid once-a-year playgoers; and they serve to make clear what most theater-goers need to know—that the best of actors are of far less importance in the economy of drama than is a good play. And, withal, there is really nothing in these well-meant hippodromes wherewith to reproach the actors engaged in them. When they are miscast, as is most often the case, the blame is not on them: their business is to provide the celebrity.

Miscellany.

"Look Who's Here!" a comic piece by Frederick Landis, is to be made known this week in Logansport (Ind.) . . . Mr. Landis is not new in play-writing. Back in the days when the Progressive movement seemed to be meaning something in national politics, he and Bayard Veiller wrote a piece named "The People Are Coming!"; and I don't recall that it was staged, although bulletined for a time by one of the leading producers. A tale of his—I think it was named "He Knew Lincoln"—was the basis of Augustus Thomas' "The Copperhead," in which Lionel Barrymore acted here in the Studebaker.

Noël Coward, who not so long ago issued a stirring ukase that his future from then onward would be devoted to writing for the broad-minded and civilized public of this United States, is back in London, and at present engaged in writing skits for the revues. . . . He's a clever chap—nearly one-fifth as clever as most of the London and New-York playreporters said he was when they had nothing much to go on save the mess named "The Vortex."

"Oh, Earnest!" seems to be the name of the song-and-dance version of Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest." Miss Marjorie Gateson, Hal Forde, and Miss Dorothy Dilley are in it.

Miss Katharine Cornell, whose decisions are a matter of vast moment to the gentlemen who write about the theater for the New-York dailies, is said to be about to make one as between Somerset Maugham's "The Letter," a current London success, and a piece by the German authors of "The Garden of Eden."

Thumbs Down on "Love Is Like That"

By Burns Mantle

is still prosperous in its fourteenth week. The Blum prize is a comedy called "Gertie," which has done so well at half-price, being now in its twenty-third week, that the producer took his profits and put on a mystery melodrama called "The Mystery Ship," which is pretty bad, but with which he is threatening to do well by selling it cheap.

Few plays are worth more than the price their producers can get for them. Many are not worth that. But the new development in price cutting goes to prove a favorite contention of mine that the interest in the theater is as great as it ever was. The cost of playgoing is its chief handicap.

Paying the Bills.

The financing of the theater is still its most romantic if not its most fascinating feature. Because he had faith in a play called "The Ladder," and because he believed its theme, which is based on the theosophists' belief in reincarnation, was both purposeful and helpful, Edgar B. Davis has spent close to half a million dollars in six months trying to build it into a success. His advertising bill for one week recently was $10,000. And he has not quit yet. "The Ladder," now in its twenty-sixth week, goes on steadily losing money and still Mr. Davis will not give up.

Last week the Neighborhood playhouse backers, the Misses Lewisohn, announced that they were reluctantly obliged to abandon that enterprise. They, too, have lost over half a million dollars, in spite of the fact that they have produced as many popular successes as failures at their Neighborhood playhouse. There is a reason for this failure, however. The theater is obscurely located and seats less than 300 people. Playing to capacity over a period of weeks, it was still impossible to make both ends meet. And in addition to the theater there were numerous classes in the various departments of stage work which have been conducted at a loss. The Neighborhood, as an endowed theater, was run in connection with the Henry Street settlement.

Highly Speculative.

Gambling in theatrical enterprises has probably put more money in circulation than any other single speculative business. Last week a prominent vaudeville agent took a lease on two of the six theaters the Chanin brothers have built in New York since the war. And the story of where this money came from reads as much like the plot of an O. Henry story as anything could.

Years ago the sister of the vaudeville agent ran a restaurant. Among her patrons was an ambitious youth blessed with a voracious appetite, but very little money. The sister, taking an interest in the boy, made a practice of slipping an extra slice of roast beef in his sandwiches. He did not, I understand, eat ham. And the boy was grateful.

The years went by and the hearty eater prospered. Now he is prominent in the banking world and successful beyond his dreams. Meeting the brother of his old roast beef friend he offered to back him to the extent of as many thousand dollars as he might need, providing there was a reasonable chance of success in the venture.

The proposed lease of the two theaters appealed to the banker and he advanced the money necessary to seal the bargain. Talk about casting bread upon the waters. What about roast beef?

Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Even Hens Feel the Pangs.

Hens, as a rule, have always been considered as being unemotional in their feelings, but I had a pet Leghorn that was extremely jealous. Whenever I would try to pet or speak to any of the other hens she would start a battle with that hen and then prance in front of me, seemingly glorifying in her victory. C. E. D.

Easily Aroused.

The most jealous person I know is a girl who, at one time, was a friend of mine. One day I wrote a note to a boy in school and she saw me give it to him. She was so jealous she told me I either had to quit writing notes to him or give up her friendship.

Some time later another girl was out riding with this young man and she told this girl that she was not one of her friends any more and that she was not to speak to her again. This is what I call real jealousy. I. W.

Narrow Minded.

About a year ago I moved into a new neighborhood. I only knew one boy in this neighborhood. He, knowing I was lonesome, came to see me often. We were good friends, but only friends. One of my neighbors happened to be a girl my age. I thought I would like her and often tried to get acquainted with her, but whenever I would see her she would turn her head the other way. So I asked her why she acted so toward me. She answered, "How do you suppose I could like you when you came here and took my boy friend away from me?"

I tried to explain that he meant nothing to me, but she wouldn't listen. I realized then how terrible jealousy is because she never became my friend nor would she ever go with this boy again. M. S.

Over a Pair of Slippers.

The most jealous person I know is a young woman who is my friend. One day last summer we went to town together to buy a pair of slippers and a dress. While we both were undecided what style of slippers we were going to purchase, she said, "Here is a nice pair for you."

I looked at her quite embarrassed and said, "Why don't you buy them?"

They had very pointed toes and were out of style. I bought a pair of different cut. She was so jealous she tried to make fun of them all she could.

She is not my friend any more.

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

THIS is the final week of "Katja": the Garrick, by present plans, will be shuttered, with "Gay Paree" expected as a reason for opening about mid-May, although it is held unlikely that that show will succeed in the Four Cohans. . . . The La Salle is closed for the season; and the Messrs. Shubert are not to renew their tenancy of the little house, for which they have been paying an annual rental of four times the sum for which it was held from 1910 to 1920 on lease to Harry Askin. . . . The Garrick will be dark between next Saturday and May 8, when, it is hoped, "Tenth Avenue" will be ready. . . . It is improbable that the Studebaker will be lighted again until the Theater Guild of New-York sends a company here in September: shows are scarce. . . . Nothing is announced to follow "Cradle-Snatchers" in the Harris; and it is likely that that house, also, will be shuttered for a brief time, with "The Spider," acted by a cast put together for Chicago, as the next offering.

The Chicago offices of the Messrs. Shubert have been moved from the fifth floor of the Garrick, after twenty-three years, to the second floor of the Four Cohans. . . . The Messrs. Shubert's arrangement with Mr. Cohan makes them partners in the office-building as well as in the theater.

Although convicted of giving indecent exhibitions in New-York, the owners of the piece named "Sex" are said to be contemplating a Chicago venture with it. The idea is to use a formaldehyde or cops-in-front version for two or three nights or until after the reporters have had their say in print, and then to put back the rough stuff as bait for the boobs.

Mischa Levitzki, one of the eminent pianists of the concert-halls, is to get, 'tis told, $5,000 weekly for three weeks in one of the New-York movie-houses; and the same management is said to be in negotiation with Fritz Kreisler. As to the latter, I have no doubt that his personal share is frequently $5,000 for a single recital.

When "Twelve Miles Out" ended its run in the Cort, the players were taken back to New-York by their union. . . . The play was a failure in London, where it was put on last winter.

* *

New in Manhattan.

These are the new things listed for the week in the New-York theaters:

"The Circus Princess," composed by Emmerich Kalman, with Miss Desiree Tabor, George Hassell, Guy Robertson, Miss Gloria Foy, George Bickel, James C. Morton, and Poodles Hanneford. . . . This is said to be one of the most successful operettas staged in recent years on the Continent; and the Messrs. Shubert, its importers, are credited with having put the piece on with grandeur. Its New-York refuge is the huge Winter Garden.

"Hit the Deck!": postponed from last week. . . . It has been explained that this is the song-and-dance version of "Shore-Leave," in which Miss Frances Starr appeared here with James Rennie in 1923, in Powers', and that Miss Louise Groody and Charles King are of the cast. The tunes are by Vincent Youmans, composer of "No! No, Nanette!"

"Mixed Doubles," by Frank Stayton, with Miss Margaret Lawrence, Miss Marion Coakley, Thurston Hall, and Eric Blore. . . . Mr. Stayton wrote a comedy, "The Inferior Sex," wherein Miss Maxine Elliott appeared in 1911 in the Great Northern.

"Enchantment," by J. Jefferson Farjeon: cast not announced.

Shifting Playbills

This afternoon:

The Théâtre Habima of Moscow in the Princess.—The management Friday night gave to THE TRIBUNE this rearrangement of the répertoire for the week: This afternoon and tonight, "The Dybbuk"; tomorrow night, "The Golem"; Tuesday and Wednesday nights, "The Dybbuk"; Thursday, Friday, and Saturday (with matinee Saturday), "Jacob's Dream."

Tonight:

"The Barker," with Richard Bennett, in the Blackstone.—A play by Kenyon Nicholson about life, license, and love in the minor tent-shows. It is a success in New-York, where Walter Huston has the part of Nifty Miller, to be acted here by Mr. Bennett. Miss Marjorie Wood has the principal feminine rôle.

Sunday, May 8:

"Tenth Avenue" in the Adelphi.—A play by Colonel Lloyd Griscom and Jack McGowan that has not yet been acted. Louis Calhern, Miss Edna Hibbard, and William Boyd are well-knowns listed for the cast.

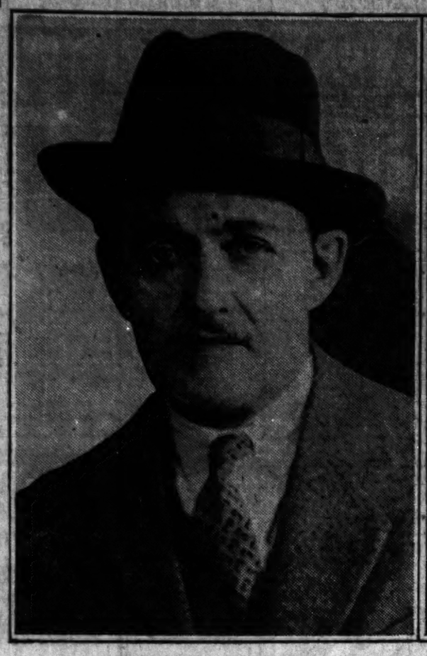
SOMEBODIES OF THE NEW STAGE-WEEK



RICHARD BENNETT

MISS LENORE ULRIC

HE returns tonight in the title-part of "The Barker," a play counted among the successes of the season in New-York, where it is on view with Walter Huston in the part to be acted here by Mr. Bennett. The present incumbent of The Tribune's drama-desk has more than once expressed his belief that Mr. Bennett is one of the two or three most competent actors in the English language. He was in Chicago last year in "They Knew What They Wanted."

Miss Ulric, not here in the three years since "Kiki" was entertainment in Powers' Theater, comes back this afternoon for a week in the Palace, where she will be seen in a sketch of Willard Mack's named "The Wolf's Cub." Since last here, Miss Ulric has acted for Mr. Belasco in "The Harem," parted from him, made up with him, and been through a New-York run of more than a year in "Lulu Belle."

Sousa Offers to Lead for Schoolboys

WHEN, next week, John Philip Sousa brings his famed band to the Chicago Theater, he will give to the ambitious youngsters who have organized bands in the public schools an opportunity to take something from an old master—that something being a lesson in the whys and the hows of conducting. It has ever been his gospel that there is no better way to spread a love of music than by spreading a knowledge of it. Chicago well remembers how he put his gospel into effect in the World War. He turned his back on his business just ten years ago next month, and, going out to Great Lakes, enlisted in the navy "for duration."

The immediate purpose of Lieutenant Sousa's reënlisting was, as THE TRIBUNE reported at the time, to "organize a band among the recruits at Great Lakes." The piteous need of the boys for music appealed to all who visited the vast naval-training station in the first weeks following our entrance into the war; and the coming of the First Bandmaster was in answer to that need when it had been called to his attention.

The far-flung results of Sousa's enlistment at Great Lakes hardly call for retelling now. A demand arose from other naval-training stations and from the camps for military training for music—organized music under the direction of an expert; and the government was compelled to heed the demand. As for Sousa, he speedily built up what he called his Battalion Band, of 612 men, and designed it so well that he was able to break it up into units of twenty-five, of fifty, of an hundred, or of two hundred, each unit comprising a balanced organization for the performance of parade-music. Sousa stuck until the finish: November 10, 1918, the day preceding the signing of the Armistice, found him conducting a Great Lakes unit in Toronto, Canada!

JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

And it is the same doughty Sousa, still enthusiastic to spread knowledge of music, who is not only willing but actually eager to give time and a hand to the young bandsmen of the Chicago schools. When in Boston on his present tour of important movie-houses, the March-King reviewed and conducted a number of schoolboys' bands. And it is just as well to keep in mind, as illustrating how far his enthusiasm carries him at the age of seventy-two, that his engagement in the Chicago Theater calls for him to appear there four times a day!

Voice of the Fan

A Tribute for Greta Garbo.

Dear Mae Tinée: Last evening I saw "Flesh and the Devil" with the exquisite, adorable, divinely beautiful Greta Garbo. What I want to ask is this: Why, O why, do they always take the rarely, lovely flowerlike beauty of Greta Garbo and use it as a force to pull men down and damn their souls and even go so far as to say the devil made this lovely creature? Why can't some one arise with the true understanding of life and joy and beauty to create a fit play and setting for one so lovely and spiritual?

Let us see Greta in a play that shows the power of beauty and love to uplift a man and give this power to God instead of the devil. As for Miss Garbo—words fail me. Never has such an artist been shown before—so adorably sweet—so divinely lovely.

MARY R.

Editor's note: Now I think Miss Garbo should certainly write and thank you, Mary R., for your beautiful tribute!

Critic Reviews Concert Season

By Edward Moore

different times, once in Beethoven's triple concerto, with Alfred Wallenstein and Alfred Gordon; the second time in Ernest Schelling's new violin concerto and one by Mozart; the third time with Joseph Brinkman in Chausson's Concerto for violin and piano, which, by the way, was one of the most ingratiating new pieces of the season. Mr. Wallenstein, also of the Beethoven triple work, had his solo chance in a new cello concerto by Ibert—repeated in the Tuesday series—and the Haydn Concerto in D. Mr. Brinkman, as recorded above, appeared in the popular series as well as here.

Two organists were soloists in their own compositions, Louis Vierne of Paris in his "Symphonic Piece" and an improvisation on a given theme, and Mr. Sowerby of Chicago in his "Medieval Poem." Carl McKinley conducted his own "Masquerade," Mr. Eichheim did the same service for his "Burma," and Howard Hanson for his "Pan and the Priest." These three should probably be added to the list of soloists, making the total twenty-six.

So with this record of a big job well done, the Orchestra hall patrons can bid farewell to Mr. Stock and the orchestra until next October. For the future, as far as soloists are concerned, there may be a change of policy, indicated to some degree this season. Mr. Stock is desirous of engaging soloists less for their own sake than for the sake of taking part in the music that he wants to present. Soloists seeking engagements here will have to be ready with additions to their own répertoire. He believes the time has gone by when orchestral audiences are flamingly interested in the old war horses of solo music, the Bruch G minor violin concerto, the Liszt piano concertos, the—whatever it is that singers are most interested in.

No Beethoven Next Year.

He is absolutely right. The Chicago Symphony orchestra, through the efforts of its conductor, is a progressive organization, constantly seeking new works with which to add to its répertoire. Soloists, if they wish to keep in line, must do a little seeking on their own behalf.

For a further look into the future there will be no Beethoven at all next season. Mr. Stock says firmly that all the symphonies and all the concertos will be left on the shelf and, though he did not specifically mention the overtures and other works of less length, there can be no particular use of including them if the others are omitted.

Finishing Off the Season.

From now until the Evanston music festival, the last week of May, and from then until the opening of Ravinia, the last week of June, musical events are due to be sparse in numbers, whatever they may turn out to be in quality. For today one of the last throbs of activity will introduce John McCormack at the Auditorium; the annual festival of the Civic Music association at Orchestra hall; the Dayton Westminster choir at the Studebaker; and Dorothy Gordon, soprano, in a "young people's concert hour" at the Playhouse. Tomorrow night Charles Rousseau, baritone, will give a recital at Lyon & Healy hall; Tuesday night there will be a program of the compositions of Franz Liszt at Kimball hall; Thursday night Frances Stodola, soprano, and Margaret Dean, harpist, will combine talents in the Young American Artists' series at Fine Arts Recital hall.

The morality play, "Everyman," with a musical setting by William Lester, will be presented at the New First Congregational church tonight, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday nights. It was awarded the David Bispham memorial medal in 1926. In these performances George L. Tenney will direct, the United Choirs will sing the choral sections, and the soloists will be Rollin Pease, Leon Jones, Ira Pratt, Margaret Lester, Walter Boydston, Lucy Hartman, Mrs. George L. Tenney, Isabel Richardson Molter, and many others. The composer will be at the organ.

HELPING OUT IN OPERETTA

MISS EILEEN VAN BIENE

SHE'S in "The Nightingale," wherein her chore is to be the girl whose heart is broken when the man she loves shows a preference for another girl. . . . Miss Van Biene is the daughter of the late August Van Biene, a Dutch 'cello-player who for years toured Great Britain in a bad play named "The Broken Melody." He tried it here, but without getting a rise from the public. She was here for a time as Kathie in "The Student-Prince," and has been seen in the two-a-day, also.

Film Players Show They're Financiers

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Some little time ago a Leaky official who knew of Pola Negri's lavish expenditures, asked in a bantering tone: "Pola, what are you going to do when the hair gets gray?"

Pola answered: "I have known poverty before and if I meet it again we will be old comrades together."

Not all the stars in Hollywood feel just the same, however. Some who are carefree in every other particular are most canny in the matter of the pocketbook.

Mabel Normand, whose generosity and free handedness are a proverb about town, amazed her friends when she struck her spell of idleness by disclosing that she had been living on a carefully arranged budget since her early days, with a generous slice invested for her by experts. She now is independently wealthy.

Ruth Roland, heroine of the old thrillers, has made millions in real estate. She bought acres of property that was sandy prairie and oil sump holes in direct line of the city's growth along Wilshire boulevard. Ruth never need worry where her next winter's ermine is coming from.

Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford and Charles Chaplin have been heavy investors in Los Angeles real estate during the years of the city's greatest growth. The bulk of their fortunes has not been from pictures.

Apartments Bring in Money.

Priscilla Dean is part owner of the Gaylord, a large and luxurious apartment hotel in Wilshire.

The Talmadge sisters have similar holdings. Norma owns the apartment hotel near the Ambassador called the Talmadge; Joseph Schenck and Buster Keaton with his wife, Natalie Talmadge, and the rest of the family own a huge subdivision outside of San Diego called Talmadge park.

Harrey Carey, western star, owns a huge ranch at Saugus, which, in addition to an Indian "trading post" where Indian trinkets and rugs are sold, serves as permanent home for scores of Indians who are used as help on the ranch and often work in pictures as well. Bill Hart and Noah Beery are other ranch owners.

Jack Holt has a large stock farm near Fresno on which cattle and sheep are raised. It started as a hobby and turned into a money maker. Bill Hart also owns considerable stock in the Bimini baths, a natural spring bath resort in the Vermont avenue section of Los Angeles.

Ronald Colman, George K. Arthur, and Lew Cody own a swanky barber shop for femmes and men both. The opening was quite a sensation with Cody and Arthur giving autographed shaves the first day. Arthur sold a neighborhood grocery store, which had been quite profitable, to go into the latter emporium. Cody frequently finances other actors in independent productions.

Raymond McKee, Sennett comedian operates the "Zulu Hut," a chicken dinner restaurant. It evidently pays well; it has been held up three times.

Tom Gallery and Red Grange, both athletic and movie celebrities are joint owners of an ice skating hall and professional hockey franchise.

Bebe Builds 'Em and Sells 'Em.

Robert Gordon, who has done little since "The Rosary," and "Main Street," owns a string of orange juice stands which are fruitful in returns.

Bebe Daniels is among the real estate sharks; she builds unique homes and sells them completely furnished.

Alice Calhoun owns and operates a string of neighborhood picture houses. Kathleen Clifford and Robert Agnew both own florist shops. Some of Kathleen's florist shops are very ritzy; they are located in the lobbies of expensive hotels. Huntley Gordon owns a woman's silk stocking shop. Estelle Taylor has stock in a chain drug store venture.

SO COMELY!

MISS DOROTHY MARTIN

She's in "Twinkle! Twinkle!" wherein she is even prettier than the pretty picture indicates. Her part is small, but permits her to do some neat dancing; and you'd never guess, so demure she seems, that Miss Martin has provided first-page copy more than once for the daily newspapers.

PRIZE WINNING SOPRANO TO BE HEARD ON W-G-N

Kathryn Witwer to Give Program Thursday.

KATHRYN WITWER. [De Guidre Photo.]

Kathryn Witwer, 23 year old Chicago girl, who won first prize in the National Federation of Music Clubs' search for a new soprano, and tied for first honors in the National Opera club's contest for sopranos, will be heard over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Thursday at 7:30 o'clock. This will be her first radio appearance since she captured these high honors and the $1,500 in prize money at the contest auditions last week.

Miss Witwer's half hour recital on W-G-N will include her prize winning song, the rendition of which won the contest for her in one instance and enabled her to tie for first place in the other.

Operas Make Offer.

Offers for concert tours and operatic performances are already reaching the young Chicago miss. The Metropolitan opera of New York, the San Carlos Opera company, the Rochester English Opera company, have made offers and following the customary audition, Miss Witwer is expected to make her professional début with the Chicago Civic opera.

Richard De Young, the Chicago vocal teacher, has been responsible for all of Miss Witwer's instruction thus far. He predicts a brilliant operatic and concert future for his young protégé, and promises the W-G-N audience that they will hear a remarkable performance next Thursday night.

Another feature of interest to W-G-N listeners is the announcement that William Leavitt was the first prize winner in the National Federation of Music Clubs' contest for outstanding violinists. Mr. Leavitt, who, like Miss Witwer, is only 23 years old, has been violinist for the last four years with the Blackstone String quintet, the musical organization heard each day over W-G-N.

Corado Again on Air.

Sascha Corado, who appeared on W-G-N last week, will be heard in another half-hour song recital on Tuesday. Mr. Corado is the baritone of the Berlin Civic opera, now appearing in concert in America, and his voice proved one of the most beautiful heard on the radio in a long time. His program for Tuesday includes Robert Schumann's "The Two Grenadiers," which Mr. Corado will sing in German; the "Song of the Volga Boatmen," the famous Russian folk song, and other offerings in German, French, and English. Mme. Elizabeth Moritz again will be his accompanist.

Preceding Mr. Corado's recital the Selinger String quartet is to offer a half-hour program from 9 to 9:30 o'clock. Selections from the standard répertoire of string quartets will make up this thirty minutes of music.

RADIO SALESMEN SAY 1927 WILL BE BANNER YEAR

A greater increase in the sale of radio receiving sets than has marked any previous year's growth was the forecast made from all parts of the country for the 1927 season by radio sales representatives who met recently in New York.

Indications in each section of the United States, it was reported, were that federal regulation of broadcasting, coupled with the improvement in the quality of reproduction brought out by laboratory research during the last winter, would create an unprecedented demand for sets this year.

Pioneer Radio Performer to Be on WMAQ Tonight

Miss Dai Buell of Boston, internationally known concert pianist, will be heard in a forty-five minute recital over WMAQ tonight from 9:30 to 10:15. This talented musician is famous in radio history in spite of her comparative youth. In November, 1921, she gave the world's first complete recital by radio from an obscure little station at Medford Hills, outside of Boston.

DR. ROBERT FREEMAN. [Williams Photo.]

Dr Robert Freeman, friend and winter pastor for many prominent Chicagoans who spend their vacations in Pasadena, Cal., where he preaches in the Presbyterian church, is to be the speaker at the Sunday Evening club tonight. The program will be broadcast by WMAQ from Orchestra hall. One of the most popular clergymen in the country, he packs his church every Sunday, and is considered a sort of Harry Foedick of the Pacific coast.

He is a combination "Bobby Burns, Bobby Jones and Bobby Burke" according to Clifford W. Barnes, president of the club, last Sunday, who explained that he succeeded in "capturing" him as a speaker for the club, after several years stalking.

Dr. Ozora S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological seminary, will give the informal Bible talk at 7, at which Rose Gannon will be soloist. Stanley Martin, organist, will play Roger's entire "Sonata in B Flat" at 7:40, and, beginning at 8, the choir of 100 will open the main meeting with "Blessed Be Thou."

CONTROL RADIO'S DESTINIES

WLIB PROGRAM

AN Indian baby christening will be broadcast this afternoon by WLIB, the Liberty Weekly station on the Drake hotel. The event will take place as soon as the broadcast of the ball game is finished and will be unique in radio history. Fifteen members of various Indian tribes will gather before the microphone to take part in the ceremony in which Little Fawn, three months old daughter of Chief Frank White Eagle and Princess Starlight of the Iroquois tribe, will be the figure of principal interest.

Among those to be present this afternoon will be Chief Dark Cloud [Chippewa], godfather; Princess Dark Cloud [Chippewa], godmother; Chief White Owl [Winnebago], chant singer; Chief Sitting Bull [Sioux], Chief Lone Eagle [Sioux], Chief Howling Wolf [Mission Indian, California], Chief Little Hawk [Chippewa], Chief Good Eagle [Ute], Princess Laughing Woman [Winnebago], Princess Whirling Thunder [Winnebago], Princess Eagle Feather [Winnebago].

Chief White Eagle and Princess Starlight were married at a radio ceremony. They are great radio fans, and they intend that the christening this afternoon shall be accompanied by all those features belonging to the poetic traditions of their people. Listeners will first be given an explanation of the ceremony. This will be followed by a chant in the Winnebago tongue. There will be a squaw dance in honor of the baby, and a dance of rejoicing. Princess Starlight will sing "Hiawatha," and a popular number. Chief Good Eagle, at the piano, will play "An Indian Love Song of the Utes." A final number will be harmony singing by Princess Starlight and a group of Iroquois girls, closing with the All American Pow Wow.

Herbert Johnson, pianist, and Tommy Coates, baritone, will be heard in a recital between 5:30 and 6 o'clock.

"MIKE," AT FIFTY, GETS HIS JUST DUES AT LAST

German Invented Device on April 14, 1877.

The fiftieth anniversary of the birth of the microphone, the invention that made possible radio broadcasting, finds "Mike," as it is now familiarly called, at last given popular recognition as one of the really great inventions contributing to human happiness.

For more than forty years, while recognized by scientists as the essential factor in telephone transmission, the public at large knew nothing about the microphone and cared less. But today more than 20,000,000 radio fans know that it is the microphone that transmits to them their daily dozen from the air. For without "Mike" there is no broadcasting.

Invented in 1877.

Just fifty years ago, on April 14, 1877, Emile Berliner, a young German immigrant, unable to speak pure English, filed his application for a patent on the microphone. His first crude instrument, constructed from a small toy drum, a steel dress button, and a needle, had actually talked. The microphone of today, as used both in the telephone transmitter and in radio broadcasting, is merely a refinement of the loose contact principle applied by Berliner with his toy drum, dress stud, and needle.

While the use of his microphone by telephone companies made Berliner rich—and multiplied conversation in the United States many fold—it is in its application to radio broadcasting that the inventor finds his greatest pride. Particularly is he proud of the fact that the microphone is making America a nation of music lovers.

Great Future for Mike.

"Music," he declares, "is one of the finest of mental and spiritual foods. If the mind is pleasurably exercised by the harmonious vibrations of songs, dance, rhythms, stirring marches, and inspiring overtures, freer circulation, better health, greater activity, and more smiles will be the result in our daily lives. "That this is being brought about through broadcasting of musical masterpieces by great artists there can be no doubt. Radio is not merely giving pleasure to the millions who listen in; it is giving inspiration, morale, and a better attitude toward life generally."

Although Berliner also is the father of the disc talking machine, it is his oldest child, "Mike," that is his chief pride. And Berliner, at 75, believes that "Mike," although now 50 years old, is just in his adolescence. The next century, he believes, will see "Mike's" usefulness extended into other fields now no more foreseen than radio broadcasting was half a century ago.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

ABOUT once a semester we are minded to glance over the radio programs of the eastern stations in the New York papers. And they generally leave us limp. Here are some items plucked at random from the prospectuses of various stations for one week:

WGCP, Newark. 4:00—Joy, Happiness and Cheer hour.

WBBC, Brooklyn. 10:00—Banquet, dinner, program to be announced.

WAAM, Newark. 10:30—Happy hour. Also 11:30—Happy hour.

WBNY, New York. 7:45—"Forty Thousands Germs in a Kiss," by Joseph R. Kraus.

WFI, Philadelphia. 3:00—Club women's hour. Talk, "The Work of the Federation," by Mrs. Richard J. Hamilton; vocal solos by Mrs. Arthur Staples; whistling solos by Mrs. W. S. Horner.

WLWL, New York. 10:00—"Modern Long Span Bridges."

WGL, New York. 9:00—"Work of the Fish Messenger at the New York Aquarium."

WAAT, Jersey City. 3:30—Staten Island Carpet Cleaning program.

WAAM, Newark. 10:30—Carroll and Murray, "The Original Radio Boys."

THERE HAVE BEEN many weddings on the radio, with the two principals being hitched in the studio. The next step, we suppose, will be weddings by radio, with the principals a couple of hundred miles apart. Then, if the bride or bridegroom should immediately regret the marriage, he or she can declare that the set wasn't working at the time the fatal words were broadcast.

DID YOU EVER stop to wonder what you used to do with so many hours before radio came in? The professors may estimate some time that the average citizen spends an average of two hours daily listening to the radio, when he might be doing something more useful.

In one week, for instance, you squander on your radio precious hours which might be devoted as follows:

Sleeping	7 hours
Carving tiny ships to go inside whiskey bottles	2 hours
"Authors" or "Lotto"	1 hour
Croquet	1 hour
Eating	1½ hours
Eating again	1 hour

STATION WLS celebrated its third birthday last week with a gala entertainment. How radio times flies. On the night that WLS opened, on April 12, 1924, the station was on the air continuously from 6 o'clock in the evening until 6 the following morning. Do you recall that long and splendid program? Ford Rush and the writer were the announcers, alternating through the night, and the stars who appeared on that bill were as many as the stars are manifold.

The first three hours were broadcast by wire from New York, and they included H. B. Warner, "Bugs" Baer, George McManus, and such luminaries of the theatrical and newspaper world. Then, at 9 o'clock, in the Chicago studio—Secretary of Agriculture Meredith, William S. Hart, Ethel Barrymore, Ernest Truex, the Duncan Sisters, Mlle. Mistinguet, Lew Fields, and as many more.

From midnight until 'way late the announcers and artists of all the other Chicago stations were presented, and then a continuous stream of other entertainers from all the cafées until dawn. It was a great night!

That was about a month before George D. Hay, "The Solemn Old Judge," came to WLS from Memphis, and it was also before Ford Rush and Glenn Rowell paired up for their now famous harmony work.

Station WLS, says its publicity department, has been on the air about ten thousand hours in its three years of life and has cost nearly a half million dollars to operate in that time.

A GENTLEMAN in North Dakota writes to Sam 'n' Henry and claims that he enjoys them very much, adding the high powered information that he has a home made set with 169 tubes. All he needs now is a twenty mule team and he'll be able to get any station.

Admiral Bullard to Be Heard on W-G-N Saturday

Rear Admiral William H. C. Bullard, chairman of the new federal radio commission, will be heard in a talk over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Saturday night between 9 and 10 o'clock. Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover will introduce him. The talk will also be broadcast by other members of the WEAF and WJZ networks.

PAUL ALTHOUSE AND QUARTET ON W-G-N TONIGHT

Program from New York of Exceptional Merit.

Paul Althouse, for ten years leading tenor with the Metropolitan opera, will share honors tonight in the Atwater Kent hour, with "The American Singers," a male quartet composed of well known concert artists.

This quartet was added to meet the demand of the listening public, as shown in a census just completed which showed that the male quartet is the most popular form of radio entertainment.

In ascertaining the preferences of thousands of listeners it was found that nine out of every ten preferred the musical program, and in their choice of vocal music, four out of ten said they preferred the male quartet, two out of every ten expressing a preference for the tenor voice.

This male quartet, the first to broadcast in this series, includes the following artists: Charles Harrison, first tenor; Redfern Hollingshead, second tenor; Vernon Archibald, baritone, and Frank Croxton, basso.

Mr. Althouse made his debut with the Metropolitan opera when but twenty-one years old, and was the first American to appear at this greatest of artistic institutions without having had European or foreign training of any kind.

Born at Reading, Pa., where he obtained his early academic and musical training, he went to New York for serious study when still in his teens, and received his additional training for concert, oratorio and operatic work from the most famous of New York teachers. He has sung in all the larger American cities, and in Mexico, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

Austria Charges 25c an Hour to Listen on Trains

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 23.—Austria has provided radio service on its trains, and any one who finds the time of his journey dragging can while it away by listening in for the equivalent of 25 cents an hour. The arrangement has been made by the Austrian railway companies, and the sets that they provide are powerful enough to get practically any European station.

The Aristocrat of Radios

The product of a great institution—a leader in the telephone industry since 1897.

Indeed—the Kellogg could be no less than "the aristocrat of radios" and be worthy of the fine traditions of quality that have been handed down for 30 years within the Kellogg organization. In all those years this great organization has been developing and perfecting that modern miracle, the telephone of today—and Kellogg Radio—the "younger son,"—must measure up to the standard of its "elder brother."

Flowers and Modes Proclaim Spring

By Mme. X.

The warm spell which started on Easter Sunday so encouraged our trees and shrubs that they began putting on their green coats as fast as possible, with the result that the suburbant countryside looks more like the middle of May were at hand than capricious and coy April. This month of the year is generally characterized by anything but the suave and benign. As a former Chicagoite used to express it: "Spring is upon us in all its usual ferocity." Not so this year. The gentle crocus was in full bloom weeks ago. Already jonquils have not only fully up, but some are on the wane in nearby gardens.

Out where the X. family has its summer abode the frogs are warbling in ecstasy, and big and fertile flies are buzzing about their plans to populate the earth and air with their fell offspring. Smash 'em, friends, wherever you find 'em, and by so doing slay instead millions of their kind.

With the advent of spring come the new fashions. That super-resplendent Easter parade last Sunday on the Lake Shore drive showed certain tendencies in the modes of the moment. First and foremost was the fact that skirts are not as yet abandoning their present fourteen or more inches from the ground. The bend of the knee is still their low line. With skirts at their present altitude, it is not probable that the extra large hats in milliners' windows will be very popular. The knee high frock and the wide hat do not harmonize. The close fitting ensemble will stay in style as long as the present mode in costumes remains, and it is such a chic fashion in headwear and so convenient that it is to be hoped it will long endure with its mate, the short skirt.

A Parisian Effort.

In Paris since early spring the dressmakers have been trying to make gray the fashionable color. It is to be seen there at restaurants, at the races, in the parks, and on the boulevards. But that doesn't mean that American women will adopt it. If they don't like their new ideas, if they think they are not becoming, they will refuse to follow the demands of the Parisian dressmakers. More and more are the daughters of Uncle Sam using their own judgment as to the extent to which they adopt the edicts of the Paris couturiers. They are developing a confidence in their own judgment and, perhaps unconsciously, are creating a style of their own which soon is recognized by the sapient anywhere. It is that of Paris with an added quality of an indefinable something which makes for an effect both rich and simple. Those masters of the high art of costume, the great Parisian dressmakers, recognize this and are quick to accept it. Year after year they put out tentative styles which are swiftly and silently withdrawn if their American customers do not take to them.

They have in recent seasons tried the longer skirt, the fuller one, the round toed shoe, the unbobbed heads, the cubistically adorned material, and various other modifications of popular modes, but as yet with no radical changes accepted by their clients. Having got hold of a mode both striking and convenient, women are loath to give it up for anything that might lead them back to their old time slavery of tight, long, stifling frocks, elaborate coiffures, and hat pinned headgear.

Chicago to Lose the Sturms.

The coming departure of the Justin Sturms from this part of the world is a real loss to Chicago's oncoming youth. They are a fine and typical young American couple. Mrs. Sturm is a daughter of Mrs. Alexander McCormick, her father, the late Alexander McCormick, having been in his time here one of our best, most energetic, and vivid citizens. For many years he devoted himself to public service, during which he served in our city council, where he was one of the outstanding personalities. He married Miss Maude Warner, a daughter of the late Ezra J. Warner, and sister of the present bearer of the name; so Mrs. Sturm is a third generation Chicagoan and her going is all the more to be deplored. To be a successful city Chicago must become more than a temporary abode for the families that help build it.

Justin Sturm is making a name for himself as a writer of fiction. He is at present busy turning out short stories. He has several coming out in current magazines. The Sturms say they are going east to be nearer the publishing world and the folk who buy fiction. Nowadays authors do not peddle their wares themselves. They have agents. Nor do publishing houses have direct contact with writers. They, too, deal with these agents. If they want a particular kind of contribution—fiction, prose, essay, or poem—they set these brokers after it. The latter charge the authors whose works they place ten per cent and are experienced judges of the quality and type of literature that will find a market.

So the Sturms are going to settle down in Darien, a little retreat on Long Island sound, near Stamford, Conn., and within easy reach of New York. There they will bring up their young family and make new friends and Chicago will become but a fading memory to them. It's too bad, say I. Very probably Mrs. Sturm's mother, Mrs. McCormick, will follow them so as to be near her daughter and grandchildren.

An Interesting Experience.

Have you seen that remarkable and bewildering band of actors, the Moscow theater, Habima, now presenting Russian-Jewish plays in the Russian-Jewish language at the Princess theater? Probably not, unless you are either a Russian Jew or are a genuinely and rather super-exquisitely cultivated mortal, who seeks realities in the line of human genius. Let me hasten to say that I am neither a Russian Jew nor am I such a rare and choice individual. I was taken there, somewhat reluctantly on my part, I must confess, by a much more understanding and enterprising person than myself. It was an unforgettable experience. Both plays and players take one far off to an unknown region, where one is given glimpses of strange racial roots, of a dramatic genius far beyond anything vouchsafed to Anglo-Saxons, of almost miasmatic emotions and passions.

The play that was on the boards the evening this ignoramus was on hand was "Golem," a curious rendering of that old theme, a manufactured creature, shaped like a monstrous man, but without a soul. This rôle, which was played by one A. Meskin, was an extraordinary piece of acting, subtle, violent, utterly convincing. The baptismal names of all the performers are merely indicated by initials, as, for instance, B. Tchmerinski, A. Prudkin, T. Yudelevitch, and so on, so the student of the program doesn't know whether the actor is a man or a woman. The portrayal of the Messiah in "Golem" is said to be done by a woman, A. Rovina, but this is not perceptible to the spectator. The story of the play is given in the program in both English and Yiddish, the latter in the Jewish script. To the uninitiated this looks like a letter in "Alice Through the Looking Glass," and one is tempted to try to read it by holding it up to a mirror.

I am not sure that I advise any but the truly inquiring, extra intelligent, really cultivated non-Semitic to attend these wonderful performances. Any others might feel as much out of the picture as did this scribe. It is like watching for a whole evening strange flames of indescribable colors and radiance through and around which dance a fantastic throng of utterly unhappy people in wild and drear attire.

A Real Occasion.

This band of Moscow stars is in fantastic contrast to the all star troupe that presented "Trelawny of the Wells" last week at the Blackstone theater. Such a company of normal, charming, gifted old friends we may never see again, unless they do us the great favor of stopping here once more on their way back from the west coast to their eastern habitats. The luncheon given them by the Drama league last Tuesday at the Drake was one of the most successful affairs of the kind that was ever pulled off here. Mrs. Howard Willett, the league's president, made a most delightful hostess and toastmistress. The special guests rose to the occasion with an ease and wit that sent the ball lightly and deftly from hand to hand.

MISS KATHRYN LOUISE STEIN.

MR. AND MRS. OTTO J. STEIN of 522 Hawthorne place announce the engagement of their daughter, Kathryn Louise, to Eugene Thomas McQuade of New York City. The wedding is to take place on May 14.

The two "professionals" who represented their fellow actors as toasters—O. P. Heggie and Wilton Lackaye—filled these rôles with as much adroitness as any stage part they ever undertook. The members of the company present responded when called upon with both gayety and style. Among them were Miss Henrietta Crossman, Miss Effie Shannon, Miss Peggie Wood, Miss Frieda Inescort, John Drew, John Kellard, and Eric Dressler. It was a real occasion.

The most important social event of the coming week is the large dinner which Mr. and Mrs. William A. Nitse are giving at the Casino on Wednesday in honor of his excellency, the German ambassador, and Baroness Maltsan. This coming visit recalls the pre-war days, when Count von Bernstoff was a frequent and much entertained visitor in Chicago society. He was often to be met in gay Lake Forest circles as the house guest of Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor and his first wife, the lovely Mrs. Rose Chatfield-Taylor.

Your Help Is Needed.

Just shut your eyes tight for a moment or two, and try to imagine yourself in that fearful darkness permanently; think what each step would be, a foot poised over an abyss; fancy your hands stretched out, quivering in anticipation of what kind of surface they might be about to touch; and then open your blessed optics and remember those who are in that state of bondage every waking moment. To them day and night are alike. They never know sunrise or sunset.

Is there anything we can do that would be too much to make up for the affliction which makes them, through the medium of that fine institution, The Lighthouse, ask for our help and support? Next Friday there will be a cabaret supper dance at the Drake given by the Lighthouse volunteer aids, to help raise money to be a part of the $20,000 a year needed to run this wonderful charity. Be sure to go and take your best girl with you.

At the Lighthouse thirty sightless people at a time are given training that will make them independent and able to earn their own livelihoods. The finishing touches are just being put on a fine new structure at 3323 West 22d street, which will be ready by the first of July to shelter this excellent enterprise, which has been in operation for a decade or two.

The movement to carry on this excellent work was given a great impetus just after the world war when that remarkable man, Sir Arthur Pearson, the blind millionaire publisher, came here and gave a talk at Orchestra hall on the work then being done at St. Dunstans' hospital, near London, where at that time there was a great increase in patients because of the war. There they taught those unfortunates "how to be blind." His account of the work done at St. Dunstans' aroused renewed interest in the handling of this problem here.

Frederick H. Rawson accepted the treasurership of the Lighthouse funds and since that time thirty students at a time receive instruction there that will fit them for employment outside. Mrs. Sidney McCallin of London, formerly Miss Helen Robbins of Chicago, has been of great assistance in establishing this enterprise here. Mrs. B. Botsford Young is another who is an active worker for it. A feature of the new Lighthouse is the ramp that leads from floor to floor instead of the customary staircase, so often a pitfall to the sightless. Among the possible occupations and trades for the blind are assembling telephone plates and wrapping electric coils for motors.

At the Stork.

Have you the habit of getting your downtown luncheon at The Stork, at 209 South Wabash avenue? It is a good habit and one that insures you an extra appetizing luncheon at a moderate price and amid surroundings

MISS LUCILLE LILLIAN LESTINA.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lucille Lillian Lestina, daughter of Mrs. Mae Lestina of Austin, to William J. Whigam, son of Mrs. William M. Whigam, of Oak Park.

both diverting and picturesque. You'd better make the most of it, as its proposed six weeks of existence is half over. The idea of it came to Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, president of the Woman's board of the Lying-In hospital, who planned it as much as a publicity stunt for the drive now on to raise $1,250,000, for the hospital, as a means of raising money for this fund. It has already proved more profitable than even the most sanguine had hoped, having taken in on a single day as much as $530.74. As the food is all practically donated to The Stork and as the service, except that of the cooks, is given, there is no cost of upkeep to which many donors take exception in matters charitable.

Mrs. William R. Odell is chairman of the special dish committee and everyday some unusual delicacy is provided for the customers by one or the other of these famous Chicago hostesses; the Mesdames Rockefeller McCormick, Waller Borden, John Spoor, J. M. Patterson, Joseph G. Coleman, Clarence Norton Goodwin, Kellogg Fairbank, Philip Swift, Carl Meyer, and Eugene Sax.

Unique Decorations.

The walls are covered with most diverting designs in black, white, and crimson, drawn by Mrs. Walter Paepcke and Mrs. Philip Maher, and laid on by Mr. Pausback. These deal with subjects germane to the object of the hospital. Some of the elders of the community profess themselves to be a little scandalized by the freedom of the scenes depicted, but they're out of tune with this candid and outspoken age, and belong to the era when the foolish and futile evasions of our female ancestors were so unsuccessful in their intent to throw dust in the observant eyes of youth.

Among the devoted workers at The Stork, besides those already mentioned, are Mrs. Joseph M. Harris, in charge of running The Stork, and Mrs. Mark Willing, its treasurer, who are there every day. Mrs. Huntington Henry, Mrs. Eugene Sax, Princess Michael Cantacusene, Mrs. Mary Dale Owen, Mrs. William G. Swartchild, and Mrs. John H. Winterbotham. These six women take a day each when they guarantee to have twenty helpers to wait on the guests. These helpers bring cakes and pastry for the lunch counter which stretches, an appetizing array along one side of the restaurant donated by William Collins, president of the Henrici company.

Albert Pick Jr. provided gratis all the equipment needed for the restaurant; L. J. Corboy connected the plumbing without charge; John Gilchrist donated $100 towards heating the place; the hospital painters and carpenters for three weeks when they were off

Bridge Party to Aid De Paul Day Nursery

By Kate Webber

MORE than 2,000 little children who are cared for annually at the De Paul Settlement and Day nursery at 2145 North Halsted street will receive the proceeds from the annual bridge party sponsored by the board of directors. The party will be held at the Drake next Sunday afternoon, with Mrs. Simms McGuire as general chairman.

The nursery has under its wing children of twenty-two nationalities, and twelve religious denominations are represented in the group which comes each day to be cared for by the Sisters of Charity, who are in charge of the settlement.

Many Kept Without Charge.

In many cases fathers bring their children each morning, when there is no mother at home to take care of them. Working mothers are aided in securing positions as well. Almost half of the children who are cared for at the nursery are kept without charge, when it is impossible for the parents to pay a nominal sum for their being kept during the day.

A kindergarten in the house takes care of the little tots, and the older children attend the elementary schools in the neighborhood. Many infants are kept in the sunshine nursery on the top floor, and those suffering from wrong diet are nursed back to health, and are in the fresh air and sunshine for most of the day.

Playground on the Roof.

On the roof is a playground, the only one of its kind in the city, where the children can play safely until they are called for at 6 o'clock.

The directors have purchased a lot adjoining the present quarters, and plan to enlarge the nursery within the next year or so.

Assisting Mrs. McGuire is a large committee, including Mrs. James R. Bonner, Mrs. Bernard P. Barasa, Mrs. John F. O'Connell, Mrs. Edmund J. Jarecki, Mrs. Menc S. Scymcjak, Mrs. Edward O. Brooks, Mrs. James V. Burke and Mrs. Oscar P. Caron.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE long time member and the new member were riding home together after the annual meeting of their club.

"The reports were very interesting," observed the new member.

"Many of them were," answered the long time member. "Some chairmen pick out the vital points of their year's work and present them with vigor, in the alloted time, while other chairmen will utterly ignore time limits, and still others will give reports that sound like a catalogue. You know the kind—375 letters written, 432 letters received, 516 stamps used, 345 telephone calls made, 72 visits to the sick, 66 committee meetings attended. Such a report doesn't mean anything except to the one who gives it."

"How different Mrs. Smith's was when she told about the little lame boy who was trying to support a sick mother by selling produce from his garden, and how the committee helped the family and put the little fellow back in school; and do you remember she ended up by saying that this was only one of twenty cases the committee had handled. I got an idea of her committee work in a way I can remember."

"I thought the president put it very gracefully when she said the club was getting public recognition for the value of its work to the community, for she had been asked many times to represent it on important civic committees. Rather nice, her putting it as a result of the club's work entirely when we know it was often due to her directly. Why, she started some of the movements, herself!"

"I have a report to give at the County Federation next week. I suppose the members will talk about it just as we've talked about the reports today. It makes me afraid."

"You needn't be. You know the kind of a report you enjoy. Give that kind."

The new member left the train muttering to herself, "Snappy, vigorous, vital, to the point, non-statistical, non-catalogish, within time limits."

Rogers Park Club Has Fine Record

NOT all of the good works being accomplished by women's organizations in Chicago are those heralded by the largest clubs, though their attainments are not to be disparaged. All this is by way of calling attention to the splendid record of one of the north side's younger and smaller organizations, the Woman's Neighborhood club of Rogers Park, which has just closed its fifteenth season.

Organized in 1912, the club's principal object was to provide for the women of its community the intellectual recreation and philanthropic contacts such a group would desire. The first season the memebrs secured a branch library for the Armstrong school, where the meetings were held. Members acted as librarians part of the time. Enlargement of the kindergarten facilities and in 1922 the establishment of a cafeteria in the same school are among the major features of the club's program.

Through management of the cafeteria the members started the nucleus of a building fund, and within the next few years hope to have their own club house. Their meetings had to be abandoned for a short while, owing to shortage of space at the Armstrong school, but were resumed upon the completion of the junior high school.

Recent additions to the club are the drama and choral departments and the junior auxiliary. It is affiliated with the Tenth district, state and national federations of women's clubs. Officers who have served during the last year are Mrs. James O'Shea, president; Mrs. A. R. White and Mrs. Emma Wassergordy, vice presidents; Mrs. A. J. Strahm, recording secretary; Mrs. Hugo Blunck, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Charles Fox, treasurer.

Japanese Prints on View at Institute

If I wagged my tail politely,
Do you think that I could, lightly
Filch a morsel of that cake?
Would they scold me if I took it?
Do you think I'd live to rue it?
Courage, Fido! Up and take!

Do you think they know how many Little cakes there are? If any
Should be missing, would they know?
I might make a full confession—
(Stealing's such a low profession,
I would get a spanking, though.)

Goodness me, those cakes look luscious.
I think they should taste delicious—
What, now, what now shall I do?
Just a step will bring me nearer,
Every minute makes it clearer—
Courage dares me sample two!

A PERFECTLY delightful exhibition of Japanese prints has been arranged in the farthest galleries of the print department, on the first floor of the Art institute. The prints are by two artists, Hokusai and Koryusai, and are part of the famous Clarence Buckingham collection. We are indebted to Koryusai for the amusing picture of the little black dog wistfully eyeing a platter full of entrancing, many-colored cakes. Whether or not his training will keep him from falling into the sin of theft is a doubt that looms large in his petulant brown eye.

We are indebted to Koryusai for an entrancing tumble of puppies, huddled under a narcissus for protection from a cottony snowstorm. Koryusai it is who has created the amusing comedy of two rabbits on the seashore; the tragedy, still uncompleted, of the "Fishing Excursion" wherein a pompous cat lazily conducts the exercise to the detriment of the leisure of the plump goldfish circling their bowl.

Koryusai is a marvelous creator of episodes in the lives of beasts. He catches his subjects at the critical moment. He touches the lute and the animals dance. He is Pan, and the wild creatures do his will. There is a stunning falcon that sits in majestic contemplation among the glories of chrysanthemums and banana plants. There are monkeys, one large beast and a smaller clinging like a baby to her, getting into mischief with a pair of subtle crabs. Other monkeys chatter and clown near a waterfall.

A pale, silvery luster lights the delicacy of "Herons Wading in a Stream," a commonplace enough occurrence one might imagine, but depicted by Koryusai as an event of magical beauty. Then there is the phoenix "flying over the sea at sunrise on New Year's day," the title is as rhythmic as the picture. And there is the excitement of stirred feeling in "Two Cocks Fighting."

Prints of Flowers.

Hokusai has all of one room and part of another for the showing of his prints of flowers. In nearly every print a bird or butterfly or bee, in one a green tree toad, takes an interested part. A particularly beautiful print is that of peonies and a butterfly blowing in the wind. It is as if a great hand had taken them and swung them in a long, slow, leisurely stroke. They float in a delicious current of air. The butterfly is like a fairy courtier, his wings like the skirts of a coat, blown around him.

There are "Weeping Cherry and Bullfinch," "Morning Glories and Tree Toad," "Chinese Bell Flower and Dragon Fly," "Chrysanthemum and Bee" and "Hydrangea and Swallow." To run through the names is much like scanning a gardener's manual, flowers and shrubs and trees, all beautiful and all suggestive. In each print the blossoms are enchanting and the saucy bird or bee points their beauty.

In the little entrance hall at the rear of the galleries are hanging three eighteenth century French color prints. Perhaps the lightest in humor is "Le Tambourin," by Descourtes after Nicolas Tournay. It shows a gay out of doors circus in which a band of trained dogs and a monkey or two are entertaining a group of fashionables. The tiny lap dog, not quite understanding these brothers of his dressed in human costume, bristles at them in a miniature frenzy.

Soft Spots in the Apple.

Echoes of the talk roused by the Walt Kuhn paintings exhibited in the Arts club gallery at the Art institute, an exhibit which closed last Sunday, were heard in the "Voice of the People" column of April 18. A. L. M. considers the lack of brains in the "Rider" justifiable on the ground that intelligence is not necessary to success. Does any one agree? He sympathizes with the version of the "City," a harlot with no redeeming feature. Has such been your experience of New York or Chicago? He considers "Maternity," the picture of a thin brown dog, cowering and submissive and starved, a wise interpretation of motherhood. A. L. M.'s contention here is that the poor beast suggests the pathos of suffering and sacrifice. Utter and absolute tommyrot. Do you know any mother of healthy, happy children whom you could liken to a thin, brown dog?

And so on and so on. The arguments against those paintings are so obvious that it seems a waste of paper to print them. If the public is looking for soft spots in the apple, they may accept such pictures as these. If one does not care for dry rot, one will go somewhere else to find representative contemporary American art.

Water Color Show to Open.

Next Thursday, April 28, will see the opening in the east wing galleries of the Art institute of the seventh annual international exhibition of water colors, to continue until May 29. Rutherford Boyd of Leonia, N. J.; Henry G. Keller of Cleveland, and Salcia Bahnc of Chicago made up the jury which selected the pictures to be hung. In addition to the water colors there will be found pastels, miniatures and drawings.

Prizes were awarded last Wednesday but the awards will not be announced until later. The three large prizes are the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan first prize of $600 and second prize of $300, and the William H. Tuthill prize of $100. Each Logan prize bears with it a medal.

Notes of Arts and Artists..

A new addition to the Art institute lunchroom has just been opened, arranged especially for table service. The Art institute restaurant is open every day from 11 o'clock to 5 o'clock and on Sundays from 12 o'clock to 7:30 o'clock. It is available to all visitors to the museum, to members and students, and at any time special teas or luncheons or dinners may be arranged for.

Joseph Birren and Mrs. Birren are at present in Santa Fé, where they plan to stay for two months and then go on to California. An exhibition of Mr. Birren's paintings served as a pleasant introduction to the Santa Fé Art colony, the colony which has so many Chicago members. From Santa Fé the exhibition will go to Pasadena.

An exhibit of paintings, etchings and sculpture, under the auspices of the Illinois Academy of Fine Arts, will be held at the Hotel Pere Marquette in Peoria from April 24 to May 20.

A Mr. Pushman has at present a painting by the Russian artist, John Aivazovsky, entitled "Jesus Upon the Sea Calling Peter." The painting is valued at $50,000. Mr. Pushman is exhibiting it here.

Helen Wallace gave a pleasant showing of her portrait drawings last Friday afternoon at Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick's, 209 Lake Shore drive.

Last Tuesday there opened an exhibit of work by Jewish artists in the Hadassah club rooms, arranged by the Lillien Art club. The exhibit is at 8 South Dearborn street. The intention is to arouse the interest of the Jewish art students in Chicago in Jewish art and to stimulate them to create along these lines in the future. The Lillien Art club is being sponsored by Todros Geller, whose work is known to us.

A particularly interesting exhibition of paintings, drawings, and sculpture will be seen here from May 7, to run through some four weeks, at the Celotex cottage, 643 North Michigan avenue. Work by six or seven New York artists whose names are familiar in New York shows but whose work has not yet been shown here will make up the exhibit. Among those who have accepted are Emil Ganso, Charles Sheeler, Kuniyoshi, Alex Brook, and Henry Matson. The exhibition will be opened with a tea, and Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick will head the list of patronesses. A Chicago sculptor, very clever, Tennessee M. Anderson, is active in obtaining this exhibit for us.

An exhibition of posters is to be seen in the lobby of the waiting room on the third floor of Marshall Field's, as a base for the annual subscription drive for the Arden Shore camp. Eighty-five posters were submitted by the students of the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, each illustrating some phase of the reconstruction work of the summer camp for children at Lake Bluff. Prizes went to Gaston LeBoutet, Miss A. L. Chambers, and Herman E. Burns.

The Chicago Galleries association announces its general semi-annual exhibition of work by professional members, opening May 1 and concluding June 1.

Midsummer Days Visit East Florida

MIAMI, Fla. — [Special Correspondence.]—The last of the winter social legions who have taken part in what probably has been the most important season along the Florida east coast since fashionable and wealthy society of America indicated a preference for American playgrounds over those of Europe have been saying their adieus this week and finishing preparations for the journey northward. The Chicago colony has dispersed, with a few exceptions, and those who remain are comporting themselves quietly and without participation in gatherings of formal nature.

It has become exceedingly warm, and even the sun baked veterans of the beaches are unable to resist painful burnings which result from morning sprawls upon the sands. Nearly all, in the last few days of the Florida sojourn, try to add a few extra coatings of deepening brown to take back north, thereby awakening envy among the pale faced communities, bleached by a long cold winter. It has been found, however, that the late April sun will bake and blister even those who proudly have been undergoing a hardening process all through the winter.

In Cocoanut Grove, Miami Beach and Palm Beach, the winter homes are following the example of the great winter hotels and exhibiting tightly boarded doors and windows, closed garages and a general atmosphere of vacancy. The yacht basins are emptied of the numerous fleets of northern owned craft, while airplane and sea sled transit has ceased altogether.

Among Those Who Remain.

Here and there are some individuals who flourish in the midsummer temperatures of Florida's April. The George A. McKinlocks of Chicago and Palm Beach entertain such a sincere notion of the treachery of spring promises about Chicago that they will remain for some time yet, with a few house guests from time to time. Miss Muriel McCormick has been with Mrs. McKinlock during the latter part of the winter and up to this week was frequently upon the golf courses and tennis courts.

Mrs. Henry Riggs Rathbone of Chicago is to remain for some time at Palm Beach, for she is regarded as both a prudent and expert nautical devotee. Senator I. M. Hamilton of Chicago is also to be at Palm Beach for some time. He is recovering from a rather serious illness and has decided it would be unwise to return north before settled weather prevails.

Wisconsin Colony Breaks Up.

Of the Wisconsin colony, the Phil Sawyers with Edgar Sawyer are remaining for a time, the latter's health requiring the Florida type of spring. Mrs. Henry Barkhausen of Green Bay announced she would leave for her home with the younger members of her family in a few days.

With the return to their northern schools of the young folks who have been spending their Easter holidays with their parents and friends at Miami and Palm Beach, the season definitely has closed as far as social activity is concerned. The number of northerners throughout Florida to remain, even through part of the summer, is noticeably less than during the active boom days, when selling enthusiasm by amateur and professional proponents inclined many to believe that the summer season on the peninsula was quite equal to that of the winter. Homes in various parts of the state, which were kept open in the last two summers, are now deserted and the occupants have departed.

PRESIDING.

[Monier Photo.]

The third district, I. F. W. C., of which Mrs. George S. Steele is president, will hold its annual meeting and election of officers on Tuesday at the Calvary Methodist church. The music department will have charge, with Mrs. Frederick K. White as chairman.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Weddings Throng Post-Lenten Days

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—New York has not yet recovered from the blow delivered by an unkind weather man last Sunday. Cold, chill winds and lowering skies kept the annual Easter parade to very slim proportions. It was bad enough that the ranks of society have been thinned by wholesale desertions to Europe; the additional bad weather not only prevented any display of Easter finery, but discouraged many notables from putting in an appearance on the avenue.

However, St. Thomas', St. Bartholomew's, and St. Patrick's were more than adequately filled, many hundreds of would-be worshipers being turned away from the doors of the fashionable edifices. After the church services there was a parade of sorts, but nothing to compare with those of former years.

A much noted couple on the avenue were T. Suffern Taller and his pretty little daughter, Betty, who is to be one of the most important debutantes next season. Mr. Taller, bundled in a fur lined overcoat, stalked along as if bent on his usual morning constitutional, while Betty, in a leopard skin coat, hung upon his arm and led her Pekingese on a green leather leash.

Many Engaged Couples.

Engaged couples were many. Georgette Yeomans and her fiancé, Dr. Lynch, attended St. Thomas', as did Elizabeth Bull and Dr. Beeckman J. Delatour.

Mrs. Hamilton McKown Twombly and her daughter, Ruth Vanderbilt Twombly, and Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, the former Muriel Vanderbilt, represented their clan on the avenue, Mrs. Church having come from Boston for the week-end.

Others upon the avenue were Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brokaw, with their daughter, Barbara, and Leonard Cushing, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Derby Rucker, Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Cox, Miss Julia Brokaw and her fiancé, James Russell Lowell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Anderson Goman, John D. Rockefeller Jr., who was accompanied by two of his children, and, as usual, refused to permit the horde of photographers to take pictures of the youngsters, Dorothy Kibbe, Miss Julia Berwind, Mrs. Robert Walton Goelet, Carolyn Frances McCoon, John W. Snowden III., Mr. and Mrs. Esmond P. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, and the Misses Constance and Genevieve Fox and the Marquis and Marchioness of Queensberry.

A Brilliant Wedding.

Easter week, of course, was thronged with weddings. Monday saw a half dozen, though all were small, and the succeeding days had quotas of from half a dozen to almost a score.

One of the largest of the Easter weddings was that of Elizabeth Lanman Bull, daughter of Mrs. William Lanman Bull of 68 West 55th street, to Dr. Beeckman J. Delatour at Grace church on Tuesday.

The wedding was the culmination of as large a series of teas, luncheons, dinners, and dances as has ever fallen to a bride's lot. Even the wedding eve had its festivity in the form of a dinner-dance at Mayfair house, given by Elizabeth Stout, one of the bridesmaids.

The Rev. Dr. W. Russell Bowie, rector of Old Grace, performed the ceremoney in a setting of green shrubs and Easter lilies. He was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Asygell E. Carrington, rector of the Church of the Incarnation in Brooklyn. A large reception, with music, followed at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Henry Thomas Richardson II. was matron of honor and Dorothy Kibbe and Ada Barker were maids of honor. The bridesmaids included Elizabeth Stout, Cornelia Ruppert, Mary Kane, Phyllis Baker, Kathryn Jordan, and Sarah Worthington.

Dr. Delatour's best man was William Breed, and his ushers were Dr. Arthur Bliss Bayton, Julian Bishop, Dr. Paul C. Morton, Frank Warburton, Curt Reisinger, William Scarborough, William C. Breed Jr., Reuben Patey, Samuel Sloan, Richard Scandrett Jr., William B. Powell, and David R. Hawkins.

Dr. Delatour and his bride are honeymooning at Hot Springs, Va., and will take a house in town upon their return.

French Institute Affair.

Wednesday saw the entertainment and dance given under the auspices of the French institute in the large ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton. Many notable matrons and men turned out for the occasion, more, indeed, than one had any right to expect.

Among those present were Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Gordon Knox Bell, Mrs. John C. Agar, Mrs. John W. Alexander, Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., Mrs. Henry De Forest Baldwin, Mrs. Henry L. Cammann, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mrs. Richard W. Corbin, Mrs. William Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Charles De Rham Jr., Mrs. Charles D. Dickey, Mrs. Clarence Dillon, Mrs. William Fahnestock, Mrs. William D. Guthrie and Mrs. Morgan Hamilton.

Also Mrs. William L. Harkness, Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer, Mrs. Adrian Iselin, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Adrian H. Larkin, Mrs. John W. Mackay, Anne Morgan, Mrs. William G. Rockefeller, Mrs. Rutherford Stuyvesant, Mrs. Henry M. Tilford, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Mrs. Stanford White, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wooley, Mr. and Mrs. Lorillard Spencer and Clarence H. Mackay.

Iris Ada Takes the Air.

With the christening of Earl E. T. Smith's youn gdaughter set for next week, much interest is being displayed in the coming ceremony, which will be performed by Father Murphy, late of St. Patrick's. For the first time since the birth of the child, which will be named Iris Ada, the doors of the Smith house in East 64th street opened on Monday to permit her to be taken out to view the park.

Tuesday was also the day of the annual Butterfly ball, which, as usual, was held in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton in aid to the Inwood House of Rest for Consumptives.

Starting late, the ball continued until the wee hours of the morning, every one being charmed by the first really delightful weather of the year.

The debutante committee, headed by Cordelia Gurnee, sold programs, favors and balloons. Included in the young group were May Swords, Kathleen Howell, Adele Kelley, Grace Tingue, Mary McKesson, Margaret Lee Haggin and Emily Wheeler.

Among those present were Mrs. Alfonso P. Villa, Mrs. James Lenoc Banks, Mrs. Gustavus Kirby, Mrs. Dunlevy Milbank, Mrs. Edward R. Manville, Mrs. Andrew C. Zabriskie, Mrs. Samuel Sloan, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Samuel Sloan Walker, Mrs. Amos Schermerhorn, Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. Charles S. Darlington, Mrs. John S. Tonnele, Mrs. T. J. Johnston Malia, Mrs. Lewis Gouverneur Morris, and Mrs. Bernon S. Prentice.

Racing Season Opens.

Thursday saw the opening of the racing season with the spring meeting of the United Hunts Racing association at Belmont Park Terminal.

Inasmuch as the Turf and Field clubhouse is undergoing alterations, luncheon was served in tents set upon the wide lawns.

On both Thursday and Friday, the second day of the meet, society turned out in great numbers, being brilliant in new spring clothes that indicated the great hold the suit and silver fox scarfs have taken upon the feminine mode.

Among the many notables present were Mr. and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan J. O'Brien, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Manville, Mrs. James Colby Colgate, Mr. and Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, T. Suffern Taller, Mrs. Warner D. Orvis, Mrs. Henry C. Quimby, and Mrs. Gilbert Darlington.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

An all day conference on week day church schools under the auspices of the Chicago Council of Religious Education, a department of the Chicago Church federation, will be held tomorrow. The first session will be the union ministers' meeting, held at 10:30 a. m. at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 South La Salle street. The noon luncheon at 12:30 and the afternoon session at 2:30 will be held at the Hotel La Salle.

Dr. George Albert Coe, formerly professor at Northwestern university, more recently of Columbia university and the Union Theological seminary, New York City, will speak at the union ministers' meeting on the subject, "The Genius of the Week Day Movement in Religious Education." At the luncheon Prof. Coe will speak on "Facing the Educational Task of the Church." Another speaker at the morning meeting will be W. J. Hamilton, superintendent of the public schools of Oak Park, whose subject will be "What the Week Day School Is Doing for the Boys and Girls of the Public Schools."

THE REV. ARTHUR FREDERICK EWERT.

The Rev. Arthur Frederick Ewert, pastor of the Central Presbyterian church, Sacramento boulevard and Warren avenue, received word last week of his appointment as chaplain at division headquarters of the Illinois state American Legion, with the rank of lieutenant colonel. He has already served as state chaplain. He joined the 27th New York division in the world war and served in the Argonne, where he was gassed, and at base hospitals 31 and 58.

Dr. Ewert is serving his seventh year as pastor of Central church. On Easter he led in the dedication of a new $52,000 community house. At the same time another $10,000 was added in the redecoration of the church, in providing new lighting fixtures and a new lighting system. A Tiffany glass memorial window was also recently dedicated with special ceremonies. The church has decided to spend the last of May in a week of celebration in recognition of the improvements and of the advance of the church in membership and financial achievements. Dr. Ewert is a graduate of Illinois college B. A. and M. A and of Boston university school of theology, B. D.

Twenty-four young priests were ordained yesterday by his eminence Cardinal Mundelein at St. Mary's by the Lake seminary at Mundelein, Ill. With eleven others who were ordained earlier in the year they constitute the first class graduating from the seminary. All of the twenty-four will sing their first mass today in some of the Catholic churches of the diocese. The class will undoubtedly be counted historic, especially in after years when the seminary has multiplied its graduates and its fame has become world wide, as it is already rapidly becoming.

The Rev. John L. O'Donnell, pastor of St. Ethelreda's Catholic church, has been appointed chaplain with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Illinois National Guard. With the appointment he becomes chief of chaplains, headquarters, 33d division. Father O'Donnell served as chaplin overseas with the 33d division, receiving the distinguished service medal. His appointment was announced last week in connection with the appointment of the Rev. Frederick F. Ewert, whose picture appears today in this column.

Dr. John A. Lapp, president of the national conference of social workers and director of the national Catholic welfare conference, will be honored tomorrow evening with a banquet at the Auditorium hotel. Prominent social workers, including Jane Addams, Julia Lathrop and Wilfred S. Reynolds will be among the speakers.

The Pacific Congregational church at 3518 Cortland street announces a program for a Sunday Evening club begining this evening and continuing Sundays until June 13. The speaker at the opening service this evening at 8 o'clock will be Dr. Preston Bradley of the People's church of the Uptown temple. The pastor is the Rev. Walter A. Briggs.

Dr. C. Copeland Smith, pastor of Grace Methodist Episcopal church, 870 North La Salle street, began last Sunday to broadcast the entire morning service over station WCFL, wave length 492. Every afternoon at 3 he spoke over the radio. His subjects were: "St. Francis of Assisi, the man who loved everybody"; "Savonarola, the preacher who shook Florence"; "Luther, the monk who shook the world"; "Wesley, the clergyman who saved England"; and "Livingstone, the rock man with a fountain in his heart." The church is open from 3 to 4 for any who desire to come in and hear the organ, the soloist and lecture, as Dr. Smith broadcasts direct from the pulpit. The hour can be made one of rest, enjoyment and profit.

The Chicago Fundamental Ministers' union will meet tomorrow at the First Congregational church of Cicero, 52d avenue and 24th street. The praise service begins at 3:15, supper at 6 and an address by Dr. James M. Gray, president of the Moody Bible institute, at 8:15.

The Rev. Robert Freeman, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Pasadena, Cal., will speak on the subject, "An Irregular Disciple," at the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall this evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Freeman is one of the most attractive and forcible ministers in the Presbyterian denomination, as the writer knows after having heard him on several occasions. Dr. Osora S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological seminary, will speak at 7 o'clock.

The first anniversary of the dedication of the $600,000 St. James Methodist Episcopal church, Ellis avenue and 46th street, will be observed on May 1-11. Bishop Edwin H. Hughes will preach the anniversary sermon the morning of May 1. Dr. Merton S. Rice will lecture on the life of Bishop Quayle, entitled, "The Skylark of Methodism," on May 6. On May 8 Dr. King D. Beach, the pastor, will preach an anniversary sermon and on May 11 Cole chapel will be dedicated.

Today at 4 o'clock there will begin a series of concerts on the new carillon at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, 1424 Dearborn parkway. Concerts will be given also Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Anton Brees will be the carilloneur.

The Rev. Alfred Newbery, the new rector of the Episcopal Church of the Atonement, Kenmore and Ardmore avenues, will be in charge of the services today for the first time since his appointment. Sir Henry Lunn will make the address at 11 o'clock.

For doing a Whole Day's Dishes

Compare this schedule with your own

10 —minutes to clear the table
—minutes to stack the dishes
—minutes to wash and rinse

DOES it not take you from an hour to an hour and a half to clear the table, sort the dishes, wash, rinse and wipe them all by hand, after three separate meals?

With a Conover Electric Dishwasher you do all the washing and rinsing once a day. After luncheon and dinner you stack the soiled dishes out of sight in the machine and wash them the next morning all at once.

You have no greasy dishwater to soil and redden your hands. You merely pour some hot water into the Conover with a tablespoonful of soap flakes and turn on the switch. In five minutes the dishes are washed. Then you rinse with clear water in the same way, but for a much shorter time. While the dishes are drying, glassware and silverware are given a touch of the towel for a sparkling finish.

When once you get used to the Conover, you never go back to washing dishes by hand. It is not merely the time you save; it is the drudgery of standing up to a messy dish pan three times a day.

The "After-Easter" Season
Surpasses Every Precedent at Chicago's
Morrison Hotel

THE CAMEO ROOM, MORRISON HOTEL

THE close of Lent has been followed by a more brilliant list of social affairs at the Morrison than in any previous year.

The Cameo Room

All the Morrison's picturesque reception rooms are in heavy demand—from the smaller dining rooms for intimate parties to the wonderful Cameo Room that seats 2,000, without a single pillar to obstruct the view.

The Terrace Garden

—the famous dance-and-dine restaurant—presents a livelier spectacle than ever before, both by day and night, especially on Saturday, when it is open to 2 a. m.

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

1,944 Rooms with Bath, $2.50 Up

Every room in this 46-story hotel—the tallest in the world—is outside, with bath, running ice water, Servidor and bed-head reading lamp. Every floor has its own housekeeper, and all guests have the privilege of garage service. Yet travelers can rent rooms for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel; the store subleases pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

Truly A Masterpiece

IN SPRING—the brush that could paint the picture, as far as the eye can see, from the world-famous BOARDWALK, would be producing a "masterpiece."

The sparkling sands, the glittering sea, beautiful skies, the piers and the BOARDWALK, with its sun-made shadows of happy promenaders and roller chair riders, is a seven-mile picture no artist can paint.

This unique and fascinating ensemble is all the more enjoyable in a glorious Spring climate. It breeds contentment and a desire to participate in the numerous outdoor and indoor sports and entertainments that abound.

A FAIR QUESTION.
What kind of Subdivision property is easier to sell this year? Properties improved with sewer, water, gas, elec-tricity, sidewalks, paveing, trees, shrubs, etc., or vacant properties without any improvements and miles away from nowhere?
A salesman is in much the same position as the buyer of real estate. If he engages in selling the best the market offers he will have nothing to regret thereafter.
Promises made with luring and paint-ed words have not earned a dollar in commissions to any salesmen.
We have just recently opened a new piece of property, with all improve-ments included in the purchase price, ready to build at once.
Why not investigate before you will, just as you expect your prospect to investigate before he buys?
We need real, red blooded, two fisted men, who can and will sell. To them we plunge our weight of support and co-operation. Drifters, loafers, and advance artists we do not want in our organization. Come in and see me before 3 p. m. without fail.

HEAR THAT WHISTLE?
It's the first "heave finest" starting from St. Louis up the Mississippi and Illinois River to the Sanitary Canal docks in SOUTHWEST CHICAGO. Don't scream, WILL, hear the whistle from the 1000 factory men in this area. This statement is officially made by the 1000 men themselves. What does this mean, you ask?
The commerce of America will be revolutionized and SOUTHWEST CHICAGO will be the greatest beneficiary of the greatest industrial center of America—hence this ad.
Catch the idea? A BOOM is also coming in SOUTHWEST CHICAGO.
We are sitting "in the heart" of its best commercial and apartment house district, on a beautiful boulevard. Look at the whistle above. See what they mean "Before the whistle blows."

THE RATES ARE LOW.

Yes, the rates are lower than the public of Chicago had ever expected second mortgage rates to be on homes up to three flat buildings.

We charge 6% accruing interest—nobody charges less than that.

Our commissions have already been reduced. At the present time these commissions are 4% for one year, 7% for two years, and 10% for three years.

That means if you take a $1,000 loan for a year the commission is $40; if it is made for two years, the commission is $70; if the loan extends for three years, you pay $100.

You will agree that these commissions compare favorably with some of the commissions which we hear are charged on first mortgage loans.

TERMS ARE CONVENIENT.

Loans are made for a period of from one to three years, and, of course, we know that the average home mortgage is completed with the manner in which his loan is to be paid back.

On every loan made under our plan at least 2% of the principal sum is paid back monthly. You may pay more per month if you choose.

That means that on a thousand dollar loan you would be oblieved to pay $20 a month plus the interest, which would be $5 a month, and this is reduced each month as the principal is applied against the principal.

The Morris Plan Bank, having made about 170,000 loans, for over $40,000,000, has seen miracles worked through the steady, persistent regularity of the installment method of payment.

ATTENTION to CUSTOMERS

The Chicago Morris Plan Bank acts as agent for a fund advanced by Mr. Julius Rosenwald. Obviously the only reason Mr. Rosenwald would be concerned in this project is in order to help the home owner save money in his home financing charges.

The bank has set up a Real Estate Loan Department, headed by a most capable real estate manager and supported by trained real estate operators. In addition to the departmental setup, every customer has the value of the suggestions of an outstanding Board of Directors, most of whom have intimate knowledge of Chicago real estate, its values and trends.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN—Here is a beautiful, powerful 7 pass. Big Six, formerly owned by a prominent Chicago family. It was chauffeur driven, and today it looks and runs like a new car. Equipped with 5 extra disc wheels and tires along the sides, snubbers, Bijlex bumpers, heater, spotlight, trunk, etc. Mohair upholstery is attractive. Marked down from $1050 to $795.

DODGE SEDAN—It's a late model, and the splendid mechanical shape and handsome appearance are evidence of the careful attention previously given. Balloon tires have little mileage. Extras include Pine's winter front, bumpers, spare tire, step plates, etc. Reduced from $835 to $645.

OVERLAND COACH—Current model, six cyl. The finish is bright and shiny and the upholstery shows no wear. Will satisfy the most discriminating purchaser as to excellent running condition and good looks. CHRYSLER SEDAN—The famous "58" model, and we maintain your neighbors would take this for a new car. Mechanically A-1. There's not a mar or scratch on the finish. NASH COACH—Just refinished an attractive color, and now it looks as though it's direct from the factory. You'll find the finish, upholstery and general coach work look brand new. The motor is in splendid shape. Extras are heater, spotlight, etc. Unusual Nash bargain for $745.

HUDSON SEDAN—We invite your investigation of this handsome Hudson. The finish is a royal blue and every detail of the interior appears unused. Equipment includes shutter front, bumpers, step plates, spotlight, etc. Marked down from $745 to $585.

BICKENBACKER SEDAN—Here is an exceptional opportunity to obtain a fine performing, attractive Bickenbacker in unusually good condition. Equipped with 4 wheel brakes, snubbers, spare tire, spotlight, etc. Today $545.

YOU WIN
Contractor Loses
If You Buy These Cars Before We Move

Our lease has expired and we were to have been located in our new and larger home by this time. Due to slip up, the contractors have not completed the remodeling, decorating, and general renovating in accordance with their guaranteed contract.

Therefore we must drastically cut and reduce the price on each and every car on our floor, to be sold at once, for we have no place to store them.

If you act now—today—you will make a savings here big enough to be well worth your while. You make money, we lose no money. It's the contractor's loss.

Investigate this legitimate forced sale and cash in today. Liberal terms; your present car on trade.

Over 200 cars in all to choose from. Here are just a few of them:

HERE are 6 expressions from satisfied users of Business Chance Want Ads in The Chicago Tribune. All of these six people describe their successful Want Ad experiences in practically the same words used by the thousands of other buyers of Tribune Business Chance Want Ads whose testimonials are now in The Tribune's files.

These excellent results from Tribune Want Ads prove that the Business Chance columns of The Tribune Want Ad Section are read eagerly every day by a host of alert, ready-to-buy men and women anxious to get into business for themselves.

When YOU find yourself with surplus store fixtures, an extra cash register, a used delivery truck, a store to rent or a business to sell, can you afford to overlook this excellent method of reaching interested buyers? For the quickest sale at the lowest cost, you'll find Tribune Business Chance Want Ads are most productive.

Telephone your Want Ad to Superior 0100. There's a corps of courteous Adtakers waiting to serve you and help you write your ad if you need their aid.

"The More You Tell the Quicker You Sell"

WANT ADS that fail to produce do so not through lack of pulling power on the part of The Tribune (because by far the greater number of Want Ads do produce), but because they are carelessly worded. Want advertisers must stimulate action in order to turn prospects into sales. Adopting The Tribune slogan, "The More You Tell, the Quicker You Sell," will make your Want Ads more productive.

Garage

"Because of poor health I was compelled to sell my garage business. I had tried every known method without results until I finally ran an ad in The Chicago Tribune. Then I sold it the next day and had four prospects."

F. V. PIER,
1217 North Brookfield, South Bend, Indiana.

Restaurant

"My husband bought a restaurant in a small town, entirely against the wishes of the family. After we had been there a short time he was also dissatisfied with his bargain, but could not find a buyer. Then a $7.00 ad in The Tribune one Sunday in March brought a number of inquiries. The restaurant was sold and we were able to return to our old home."

MRS. S. A. MADDEN,
209 East Fairchild St., Danville, Illinois.

Confectionery Stores

"Some time ago I was working for a man who owned two confectionery stores two hundred miles from Chicago. One was paying, the other was losing, so he tried in various ways to sell the poor one. I suggested a Tribune ad and, although I had no previous experience, he had me write an ad for him. Inquiries came by mail, and a prospect came in person. Then he made the sale. The proprietor received $800 more than he expected. It was simple, it was easy. What one man didn't want, another did, and The Tribune brought them together."

CARL SAFADAY,
411 West Milwaukee St., Janesville, Wis.

Grocery Store

"I had a grocery store which I wanted to sell. I called up a Tribune Ad-taker and had her insert an ad in the Business Chances column of The Tribune Want Ad Section. The first customer came before I had time to read my own ad. I had quite a few prospects to choose from. Did I pick the right one? You'll say I did when you see the beautiful apartment building I now own as a result of that ad."

PAUL KADERMAN,
1043 N. Christiana Ave. Chicago.

Pool Room and Barber Shop

"We owned a pool room and barber shop in Donovan, Illinois, which we tried to sell locally without success. Then we tried an ad in The Sunday Tribune and in two days we had several replies and one man from Evanston made an appointment to come down the next Sunday. He bought our place and my husband made another deal through that same ad by selling a shop in Manhattan, Illinois, to one of the other prospects who answered."

MRS. M. R. PRUETT,
11209 Vernon Ave., Chicago.

Millinery

"Owing to an accident to a near relative I found a millinery store on my hands, and I had never had experience in that line. After worrying over it for a week I turned it over to The Tribune Want Ads and, to my immediate relief, came three prompt replies. Needless to say I lost no time in getting in touch with the nearest prospect and made a good cash deal."

C. E. CORNELL,
Goshen, Indiana.

Much depends on how you word your Want Ad. The Tribune's booklet, "Wording a Want Ad to Make it Pay," gives you the best information on how to write a Want Ad that pulls. The booklet is free. Just mail the coupon.

More British Beauties

DAUGHTER OF LONDON'S TRANSIT KING is the Hon. Marian Stanley. When her father was a boy, as plain Albert Stanley, he worked on the Detroit street railways. Now he is Lord Ashfield, director of subway, bus, and street car systems in the British capital.

A GUEST OF CHICAGO a few years ago was Lady Louis Mountbatten. Here she is with her young daughter.

A PEERESS IN HER OWN RIGHT is Baroness Beaumont, who succeeded to her father's title upon his death in 1894. She is the wife of Lord Howard of Glossop and is mother of three sons and two daughters.

ANOTHER DAUGHTER OF LORD ASHFIELD, the transit wizard, is the Hon. Grace Stanley. Marian, in the upper picture, is the elder of the sisters.

LADY VICTOR WARRENDER is the wife of Sir Victor Warrender, the 28-year-old Baronet of Lochen. They were married in 1920 and have two sons.

Dr. Phil collects a bill and Sally washes the collection

"It's priceless, Sally," said Bee Westbrooke. "Where did you get it? I'm simply green with envy!"

"Phil has just brought an old antique-dealer through a long siege of pneumonia. The poor dear was so grateful that he gave Phil this old painting — the Museum people say it's a genuine early Bouguereau. It was so dingy we could hardly see the colors until I'd washed it."

"Washed such a precious old thing! With soap and water?"

"Well, not with ordinary soap. I used Ivory, just as I do for my face. I've since learned that this is what most picture dealers use, too."

By 6 P.M. the beauty of your skin is smothering!

ALL day long, soot and grime from dust-filled city air rains down upon unprotected, sensitive complexions. When evening comes, every tiny pore is choked with dust and dirt, mixed with the natural oils of the skin.

And skin-beauty is soon smothered, robbed of its life and glowing charm—unless the face is perfectly cleansed, every night, of the day's accumulation of grime and soil.

Not every woman knows what perfect skin cleansing is. Some attempt to remove dirt from an oily skin with an oily "cleansing cream." Others daub their faces with mysterious lotions, notable chiefly for their perfume and extravagant price.

But, a vast and ever-increasing number of women know that perfect-skin-cleansing means washing with warm water and pure soap. And most of them choose Ivory as the purest soap they know.

Ivory has but one purpose—to cleanse safely. No soap, at any price, can do more than that for your skin. Daily washing with Ivory and warm water, followed by a cold rinse, and a touch of pure cold cream, if you like, offers your skin the most perfect cleansing that you can find.

And, of course, a really healthy skin is always a clean skin and usually a beautiful skin.

Ivory Flakes meets this important safety test:

Before you trust your costly fine fabrics to any soap in any form, a doubt naturally comes up in your mind.

"Is this soap really safe?"

Ask yourself: "Would I be willing to use this soap on my face?"

A soap which is too strong for your face is naturally too strong for your delicate and costly garments.

Ivory Flakes is simply Ivory Soap in flake form. Of course it fully meets this important safety test. For Ivory Soap, pure, mild, gentle, white—has protected the faces and hands of millions of women since 1879.

Ivory Flakes offers you a real margin of safety for cleansing the very finest garments you own. Many women wash all their clothes and dishes with Ivory or Ivory Flakes, thus saving their hands and preventing redness and roughness.

Hunting the Wild Turkey

SPRING IS THE TIME to hunt the wild turkey in the swampy lowlands of the south. Here is Charles W. Evans of Columbus, Miss., trying to locate a wild gobbler by calling with a wooden caller. At the left is Ack, his colored boy, carrying a tame gobbler decoy on his back. Time, shortly after daylight. The white is sand.

A BIG LOG SERVES AS BLIND —As soon as a wild gobbler answers the hunter's call, the hunter hides behind a big log and "talks back" to the gobbler in the woods to get the latter to come on. Mr. Evans here is shown calling anew to the wild gobbler.

THE DECOY—As soon as the wild gobblers answer and start toward the caller, a tame gobbler is put out in front whose challenges to fight bring the wild birds to the hunter, hidden behind the log. In this photo the decoy gobbler is strutting and gobbling, while a wild bird hurries through the forest to fight him.

AFTER THE SHOOTING—Ack holds up a 16½ pound wild turkey gobbler for the inspection of "Marse Charley" Evans, his boss, who has just shot this magnificent bird.

THE FAKER—The dead wild gobbler is placed within reach of the tame decoy, which struts, gobbles, and "fights" its wild rival, apparently believing that he has had a real part in whipping the bird of the woods. This picture shows the tame decoy strutting beside a gobbler just killed.

NOW ROAST TURKEY FOR DINNER!—Capt. Robert Hardy of Columbus, Miss., weighs one of the three wild turkeys shot by Charles W. Evans of Columbus and Bob Becker of The Tribune during a successful hunt on Mr. Evans' private shooting preserve along the Tombigbee river.

(Above) "BRUSH UP and down, not sidewise," says Dr. O'Really. To his toothbrush drills each day come thousands of public school students to form the right habits in tooth care that will mean better teeth, prettier smiles in years to come. He urges the film-removing dentifrice, Pepsodent.

(Above) "THE AMERICAN COLLEGE GIRL," says Consuelo Flowerton, "has come to realize that on glorious health, beauty depends." And on healthy, film-free teeth, as gained by Pepsodent, rests the radiance of one's smile.

Those Smiles You Envy

Come when "off-color" film on teeth is removed—new way dentists widely advise

THAT many of the commoner tooth and gum troubles, and most cases of so-called "off-color" teeth, are due to a film that forms on teeth which ordinary brushing does not successfully combat, is today's dental opinion.

Send for 10-day Free Tube

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film—a slippery sort of coating. Film absorbs discolorations and thus makes teeth look dull and dingy. It breeds germs and bacteria and invites tartar, decay and pyorrhea. It is a menace to tooth and gum health.

Thus dental authorities now seriously urge that film be removed at least twice every day—in the morning and at bedtime. To do so, obtain Pepsodent—a special, film-removing dentifrice most dentists favor. It curdles the film, then removes it and polishes the teeth to high lustre in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay. It acts, too, to firm and harden the gums; thus meeting the requirements of modern findings.

Old-time dentifrices did not adequately fight film. That is why this modern protective way, as a twice a day habit, and at least twice a year calls on your dentist, are being so widely advised.

Accept this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage Pepsodent into the gums to firm and harden them.

SMILES ARE DAZZLING WHITE when film is gone. Teeth sparkle like polished jewels. Gums firm to healthy coral tint. Thus this new scientific way of dental care becomes one of the greatest beauty treatments of the day, and, with its unique therapeutic and prophylactic qualities, a great aid in oral hygiene.

Safe Instant Relief

CORNS

Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads end pain in one minute. Once the corn is gone it can't come back. If new shoes start irritation again, Zino-pads stop it instantly.

No other method does this. Paring corns gives only temporary relief. Caustics, or liquids, also dangerous, don't do anything to prevent corns from growing again. Dr. Scholl's Zino-pads remove the cause—rubbing and pressing of shoes.

They are thin, medicated, antiseptic, protective, healing, absolutely safe and sure. At all druggist's or shoe dealer's—35c.

NESTLE Circuline
Permanent Wave

Wins the Four Highest Awards for BEAUTY SPEED SAFETY

At the Annual Permanent Waving Contest, held recently under the auspices of the American Master Hairdressers Association, at Hotel Commodore, New York City.

This is Important!

Be sure that your hairdresser uses authentic Circulines. You will recognize them as she immerses one for each curl in clear, fresh water. Each Circuline comes individually wrapped, with the name "Nestle Circuline" stamped on the glassine wrapper. Only when you see them—when your hairdresser uses them—are you sure of a Circuline wave.

The greatest event in the Beauty Industry here or in Europe has always been the Annual Permanent Wave Competition of the American Master Hairdressers' Association.

The contesting hairdresser who wins the first prize becomes a celebrity—her future is assured. She must work gently, quickly, the wave must be most beautiful and—most important—without injuring the texture of a single hair.

At the recent competition most contestants placed their faith in the Nestle*Circuline Process as the one most likely to win for them the coveted cup and gold medal. Out of a total of nine prizes seven, including the cup and the first four awards, went to Circuline users. Why

Because by the Nestle Circuline Method the hair is tested in advance. Each head is treated individually. No ammonia, borax or other harmful chemicals are used.

Circuline is the result of twenty years practical research at the Nestle Laboratory [original inventors of permanent waving—1905]. In gentleness and adaptiveness it outdistances any imitation method. There are ten different Circulines—one for each class of hair.

Write today for the Circuline booklet and the names of the Circuline hairdressers nearest you.

DOROTHY MACKAILL seems putting on a bit of weight, and it's most becoming. She's wearing a dress of gold tissue, and her coat is orchid and gold brocade. You'll see her soon in "The Road to Romance," in which she is co-featured with Jack Mulhall.

NORMA TALMADGE has a new leading man for "Camille." His name is Gilbert Roland. Here they both are. Y'wekkum.

POLA NEGRI looks enticing here, doesn't she? She will next be seen in "Barbed Wire," adapted from Hall Caine's story, "The Woman of Knockaloe."

ISN'T THIS A CHARMING THREESOME? They are Colleen Moore and her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Morrison.

LITTLE BOY BLUE and his family. Or, not being so funny, here's Monte Blue with Mrs. Blue and Barbara Ann. This was snapped while Mama and Barbara were paying a visit to the husband and father, who was working on location in "The Brute."

Somehow the evening never seems complete without this fine old ginger ale

TO THINK of entertaining is to think instinctively of "Canada Dry." For there is something about this fine old ginger ale which adds a bit of distinction to every occasion and makes your home, indeed, a pleasant place to be.

The very sparkle of this famous and honored drink brings memories of some well-remembered visit to a great hotel or exclusive club. Just to pour it forth into the long-stemmed glasses is to give new charm to napery and silver and add a cheery, joyous note to the bridge game, the dinner, or the dance.

So it has been said that the evening never seems complete without this Champagne of Ginger Ales. It accentuates a welcome . . . lingers in a farewell. "I've had a lovely time" is no idle, empty phrase when recollections of truly pleasant hours warm the parting handclasp.

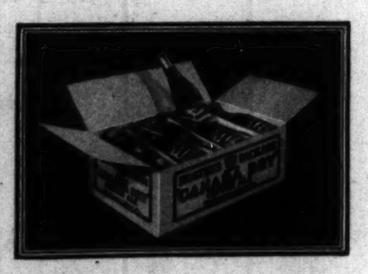
Here are two especially new and delightful ways to serve "Canada Dry" at dinner or when good friends call—

Moonlight Punch

Squeeze and strain the juice of four lemons; add one cup of sugar. Slice two lemons and one large orange; then add to the sweetened lemon juice. Just before serving pour in four bottles of "Canada Dry" over a block of ice. Crushed mint may be added if desired.

Hawaiian Nectar

Combine one cup of fresh pineapple juice, the juice of one-half lemon, and the juice of one lime. Add one teaspoon of powdered sugar. Chill and place in a tall glass. Fill with "Canada Dry."



You will always have enough for the unexpected guest if you order "Canada Dry" in this convenient Hostess Package.

"GOOD LUCK" to a Guesser needs it!

[NOTES FROM A GUESSER'S DIARY]

April 10—Tried to negotiate the McHenry-Richmond road last nite . . . unmarked road and raining . . . ditched halfway through by a curve . . . stayed there all night singing the blues.

April 15—Talk about fog! Waukegan to Kenosha was smothered in it. Full headlights didn't help a bit. Nearly ran head-on into a Ford. A hundred dollars would have been cheap for a driving light.

April 19—This diary almost stopped last nite—for good. Straining my eyes for a cross street . . . when a street cleaner's chariot loomed up out of nowhere . . . something's got to be done!

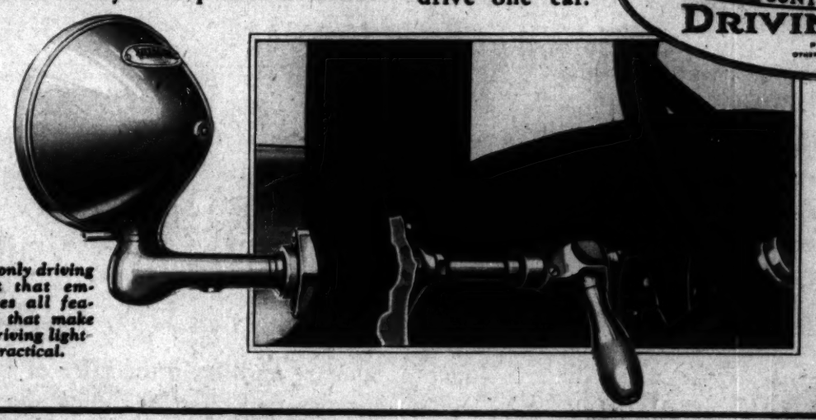
FATE may not deal harshly with every guesser, but the chances are not in his favor. Well may you wish him "Good Luck!" Indeed he will need it. For night driving is a racking test of wits unless your car is equipped with the driving light that's controllable.

For the basic features that make a driving light practical belong exclusively to Lorraine. A range of illumination as great as that of your own eyes . . . literally! A mechanical construction and finish as finely executed as a piece of jewelry. A piercing, compact beam of clear white light, devoid of glare, that can be whipped around to any point in your range of vision. A beam of light that won't bounce or jiggle out of position no matter how rough the road.

Withal, the fineness, precision, smoothness of a watch in every moving part. There are seven lights offered to you frankly as ornamental. There are more than a dozen spotlights with which a careless motorist can compromise a conscience that demands this convenience and protection for night driving. There is one driving light built for performance as clean cut as a diamond.

That light is Lorraine . . . the driving light that leading motor car dealers everywhere use and recommend to discriminating motorists . . . the driving light chosen by more prominent motorists than any other in the world. Merely the number of Lorraine owners signifies its world leadership. But vastly more interesting are the type of people whose cars are Lorraine equipped . . . and their frank enthusiasm. We urge you to chat a moment with the next one you see.

There is nothing about this ardor for Lorraine that cannot be simply explained. The light itself is a clean-cut, honest, genuine, perfected piece of merchandise. It can be quickly installed by your local motor car dealer. Lorraine installations have come to be famous throughout the automobile world . . . famous for being deft, workmanlike, satisfactory. Installations that give this remarkable light a chance to perform its best for many more years than you will drive one car.



The only driving light that embodies all features that make a driving light practical.

Lorraine CONTROLLABLE DRIVING LIGHT PATENTED OTHER PATENTS PENDING

Guessing at roads, sidestreets, ditches, house numbers, garage doors, is as inconvenient as it is dangerous . . . as dangerous as it is inexcusable.

Notice cars driven by expert drivers . . . chauffeured cars parked at clubs and better hotels . . . usually they're Lorraine equipped. The best drivers take night driving most seriously!

See your motor car dealer immediately.

Save your good luck for better uses than avoiding trouble from night driving. And a guesser can't feel confident!

CHICAGO'S BIG EASTER PARADE, BENEATH A SUMMER SUN, drew record crowds to the boulevards for the first perfect promenade the day has afforded in years. Along Lake Shore drive traffic was jammed at noon as throngs lined the sidewalks to see brilliantly costumed society churchgoers walk to their homes on the gold coast. As for the ubiquitous photographer, he found that it was not enough even to be ubiquitous. A few results of his labors, however, are here reproduced.

Is this a partial portrait of you?

WHEN you look at this fellow dawdling while the work waits maybe you'll see in him something you wouldn't admit in yourself—laziness.

Yet it's a curious fact that most of us (whisper it, maybe all of us) are lazy about some things.

For instance, men:

Do you always get your suits pressed the minute they look baggy? Do you ever make a shirt "do another day" because you are too lazy to get out a clean one?

How about your housework, women? Do you always do it when you should? Shampoo your hair when it needs it?

If you are like most of us, you put off these, and similar matters as long as you can.

Tooth brushing for example. Of all the little tasks people are lazy about, this one heads the list. In the morning we are in a hurry. At night we are tired. And always we lose sight of the pleasant after effects in contemplating the task itself.

Realizing the truth of this, the makers of Listerine set out deliberately to formulate a dentifrice that would furnish the easiest, quickest way to clean teeth. In short, a tooth paste efficient even in the hands of lazy people—for in tooth brushing, at least, the word lazy applies to so many of us.

Listerine Tooth Paste is really very easy to use. It works fast. With just a minimum of brushing your teeth feel clean—and actually are clean.

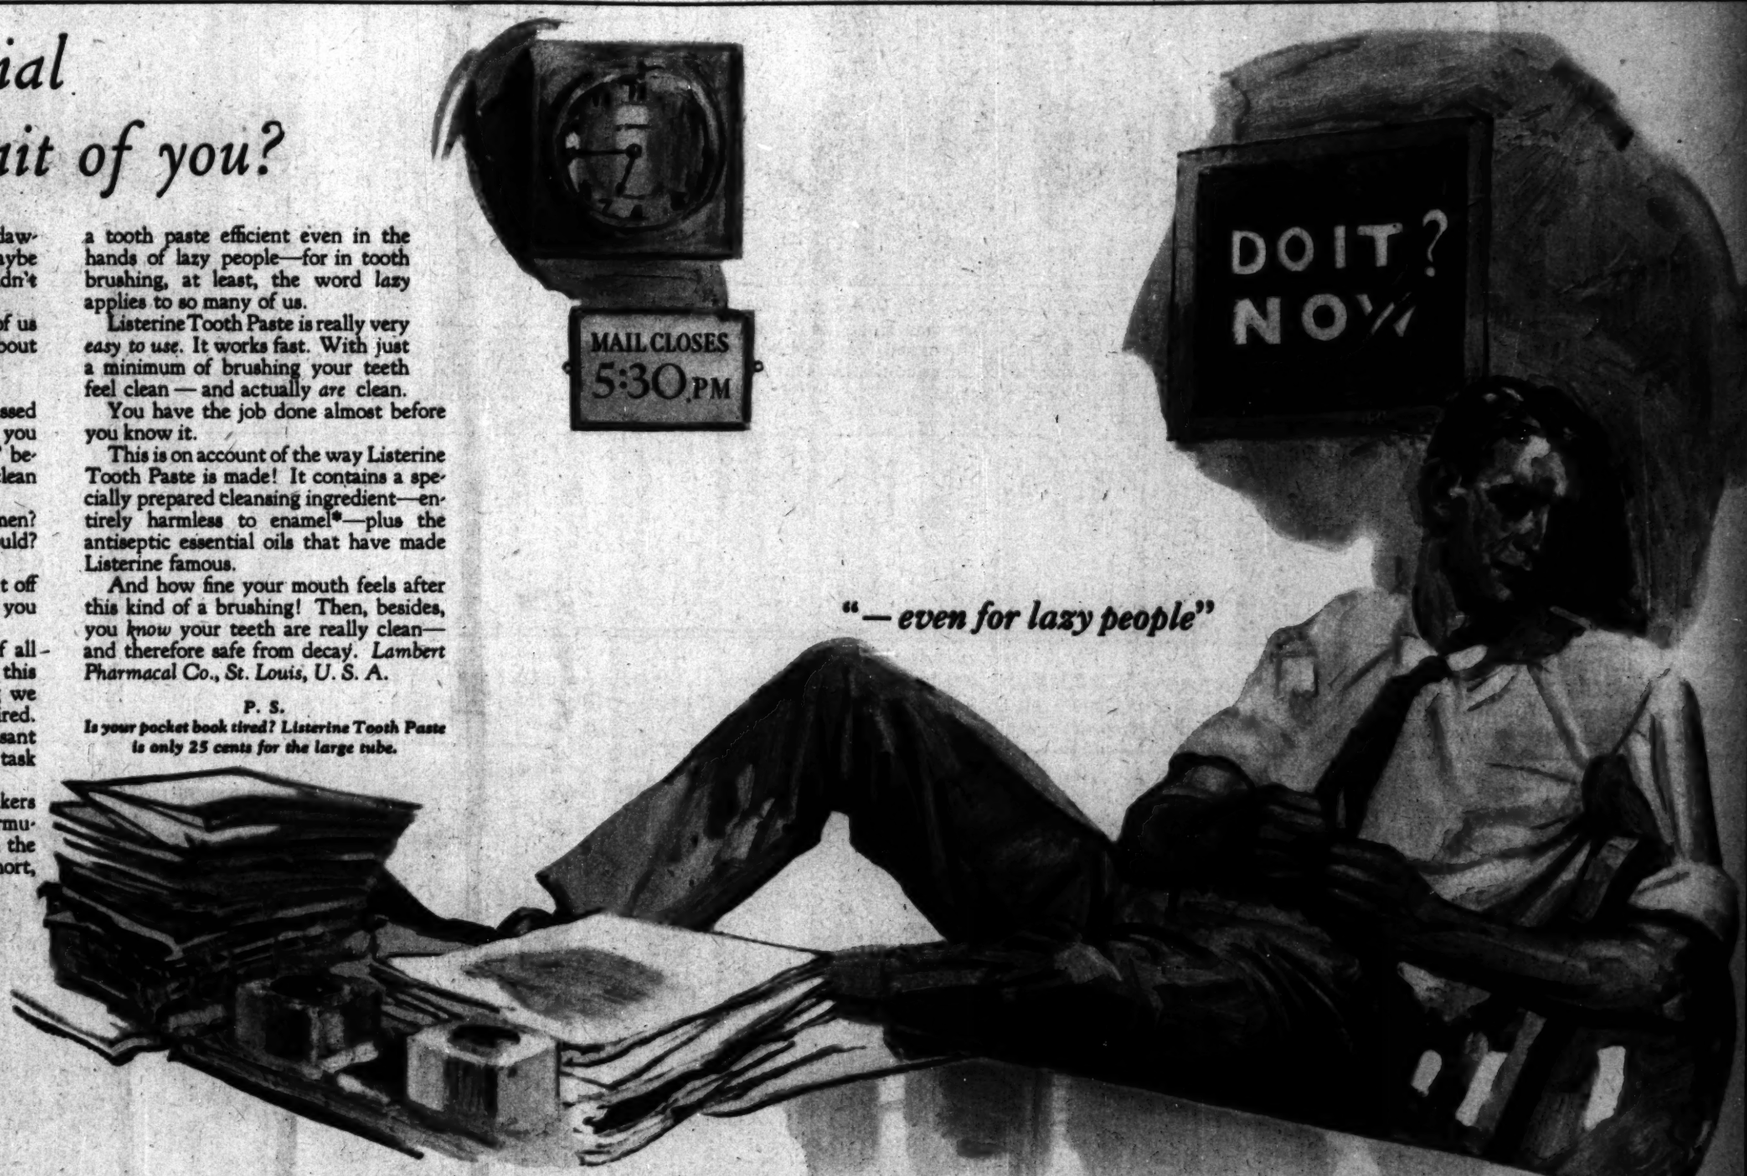
You have the job done almost before you know it.

This is on account of the way Listerine Tooth Paste is made! It contains a specially prepared cleansing ingredient—entirely harmless to enamel*—plus the antiseptic essential oils that have made Listerine famous.

And how fine your mouth feels after this kind of a brushing! Then, besides, you know your teeth are really clean—and therefore safe from decay. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

P. S.
Is your pocket book tired? Listerine Tooth Paste is only 25 cents for the large tube.



"—even for lazy people"

*This specially prepared cleansing medium (according to tests based upon the scale of hardness scientists employ in studying mineral substances) is much softer than tooth enamel. Therefore, it cannot scratch or injure the enamel.

At the same time it is harder than the tartar which accumulates and starts tooth decay.

MELBA AIDS TO CHARM

It is not enough to cleanse the surface!

MORE women are enjoying the beauty and charm which are rightly theirs, since they have learned the Melba Technique. It is so simple, so easy to practice, and yields such amazing rewards! Then massage gently with Melba Tissue Cream—to send the pink of youth into your skin, erasing wrinkles!

THE MELBA TECHNIQUE
Use warm water to open the pores; pat MELBA SKIN CLEANSER thoroughly over the face and neck. Remove with soft tissue, using an upward, outward motion. Now, massage gently with MELBA TISSUE CREAM. This awakens circulation, restores youthful contours.

Can you do more for your teeth than keep them

CLEAN?

What is the utmost you think can be done to make your teeth healthy, beautiful, bright?

If you ask your dentist this question, his answer will surely be, "Keep them completely clean!"

Designed only to clean, Colgate's cleans so evidently you quickly taste, feel, see the healthy cleanness it brings.

Why Colgate's cleans better

The moment Colgate's is brushed on your teeth, two things happen:

1. It expands into a sparkling foam. In this foam is calcium carbonate to scrub off all bits of food, and polish each tooth to dazzling cleanness.

2. Then, in a detergent-washing wave, this foam sweeps through the entire mouth, washing away impurities, leaving teeth and mouth clean.

If you think you need more than cleanness, if you fear disease of teeth or gums, better go straight to a dentist for treatment. Rely on a dentist to cure. Rely on Colgate's to clean your teeth.

DO NOT BARGAIN
WITH THE PRICELESS BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

The careful woman does not shop for the cheapest permanent wave. In so important a matter as the priceless beauty of her hair, the finest permanent wave that money can buy is the only conceivable choice.

There are two general methods of permanent waving . . . . . One, is to wet the hair with various strong solutions and then to bake it dry.

The other, is to wind the hair dry and to impart beautifully flowing, natural waves with tiny pressure-jets of clean, white steam.

This is the Eugène way, the steam way of permanent waving . . . . . with the patented Eugèneol Sachet—the sachet with the impervious back and perforated front, as illustrated. The gentle Eugène Method is unfailingly safe, completely controlled and unerringly natural.

It is significant that, despite its slightly higher cost, the finest shops of England, the Continent and America use the Eugène Method exclusively.

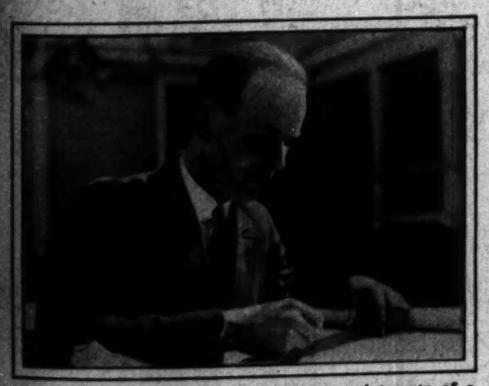
"I AM A STUDENT. I always had good health—until recently when, as mother said, I seemed to be constantly complaining. I had frequent headaches, felt listless and ached all over. I was losing out in my studies, too, and in addition a fine eruption appeared on my face. Mother, having had an experience where Fleischmann's Yeast worked wonders for her, started me at once on three cakes a day, on crackers. In five weeks my skin had cleared. My other troubles seemed to vanish, too. Now, when I do not feel well, I go on my Yeast diet."
Adela P. Schlich, Jersey City, N. J.

Mr. W. F. Bouton and a little friend in the park, Oakland, Calif.

"AT TIMES I could hardly drag myself around, I felt so weak and miserable. For years I had suffered from the worst kind of indigestion—my stomach was in a terrible condition. I tried just about everything, but didn't seem to get any better . . . One day a friend of mine told me I ought to try Fleischmann's Yeast. I shall never forget her. After eating three cakes of Yeast every day for four months I can honestly say that I am completely well. Fleischmann's Yeast cakes can never be too much praised."
Mrs. A. T. Rider, Jacksonville, Fla.



"DURING THE WAR I filled various appointments of a confidential nature and returned with an organism completely unstrung. I finally had to go to the Maine woods for a complete rest. One day by mistake, I ate a bowl of homemade Yeast which the guide had prepared for baking. The next day I felt fine—whether it was the Yeast or not I can't say. At any rate, it gave me the idea of eating Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate two cakes a day, and in three months was able to take up my old duties as a structural engineer. I never felt better. For three years now I have eaten Yeast. It has contributed to giving me the cool head and clear mind so much needed in building operations."
Raymond M. Hutchins, Methuen, Mass.

"I was slowly but surely drifting towards a breakdown"

"SOME MONTHS AGO I had an experience that I simply can't keep to myself.

"After every meal I was troubled with that heavy, overfed feeling, and nausea. No matter how carefully I chose my food I was positively unable to assimilate it properly.

"Coincident with these disturbances constipation set in—that insidious modern enemy of health. My nerves became frayed, I began to lose weight—I found I was slowly drifting towards a general breakdown.

"This was my plight when a friend recommended Yeast to me. He persuaded me to give it a fair trial, claiming it had rid him of constipation.

"Today I am a different man! My health is good. My constipation is a thing of the past. My complexion has cleared—all due to my perseverance in eating Fleischmann's Yeast."

Wilson F. Bouton, Oakland, Calif.

DAY by day Fleischmann's Yeast removes the causes of constipation—corrects indigestion—clears the skin—fills the whole body with new life and energy. That is because Fleischmann's Yeast does two things. It keeps the system internally clean. And it keeps it healthily active.

Yeast is not a medicine. It is a fresh corrective food—a living plant, rich in the health-giving nutrients that abound in the malt and grain in which it is grown. The countless tiny yeast plants in every cake have the peculiar power when passing through the digestive tract, to cleanse it and to help prevent the absorption of poisons by the body. They also stimulate and strengthen the intestinal muscles, aiding the processes of elimination.

Start today: make Fleischmann's Yeast a part of your regular diet. Your digestion will become healthy, pimples and boils will disappear—before you know it you will be your old, vigorous self again!

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep in a cool, dry place. Write for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-787, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York City.

Health, Vigor, Happiness—you can easily make them yours

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one before each meal: just plain in small pieces, or on crackers, in fruit juice, milk or water. For constipation physicians say it is best to dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. (Be sure that a regular time for evacuation is made habitual.) Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary.

Thorough Cleaning

This Triple Action

Powerful Suction
Beating Brush Action
Sweeping Brush Action

The New Hamilton Beach with Motor Driven Brush has all three.

Ordinary cleaners get surface dirt but it takes Beating Action combined with powerful, super-suction to get imbedded dirt—the principal cause of rug wear.

In this New Hamilton Beach powerful suction raises the rug off the floor and to the wide nozzle. Motor driven beating brush gently beats and vibrates the rug, freeing all imbedded dirt. Sweeping brush action loosens threads, hair, etc. Powerful suction whisks everything (surface and imbedded dirt, hair, lint, etc.) into roomy bag.

Light in weight, low and perfectly balanced this cleaner is easy to handle. Its ball bearing motor requires no oiling—ever. Entire machine is "Built to Last a Lifetime"

You must try this new and different Vacuum Sweeper to appreciate what thorough cleaning means. Phone your dealer for demonstration.

DELICATESSEN LOVE

By MARGARET CULKIN BANNING

"You're looking very lovely tonight," he said, and was simultaneously sure it was a stupid remark.

ILLUSTRATED BY ANDREW BENSEN.

The Story of Plucky Peg O'Brien, Who Was Not Content with the Ready Made Things of Life, but Struggled to Create Originals

EVEN his name, Calhoun Hastings, which sounded like a battle or at least a state capital, gave the wrong impression of him. Certainly his looks did. He was handsome in a way which presupposes high romance, with the bearing that has oddly survived from days of armor to evenings of dinner coats. In repose his face fell into exalted lines, deeply virile and almost stern, as if he meditated on important things. But, as a matter of fact, he rarely meditated at all or found any reason for doing so. He was more apt to have an orderly trickle of little tamed thoughts going through his head, proceeding as much according to schedule as the hands around the face of a clock and with equivalent excitement.

Peg O'Brien had been completely taken in. She was probably not the first girl to whom that had happened because of Calhoun, but it happened to her with extra severity because she met the world head-on that any collision was apt to result in a smash. Her own name, with its implication of social descent and its abbreviated friendliness, described her as well as if she had picked it out herself. She had met Calhoun at one of the Lorangers' mingled Sunday night parties, some weeks after she had come back to live, and he had singled her out for the evening's close attention which he always gave to new girls. But she did not know that, and possibly it was only the contour of his face which set her listening for the telephone. There is no more humiliating experience than that, especially when a girl who does not ordinarily fail for men stays home two evenings so as to be on hand in case one of them calls up. No one had called, except two people testily seeking other numbers.

After waiting two days and carefully going over the things Calhoun had said, as well as the way he had looked when he said them, Peg began to check up.

"Who's Calhoun Hastings?" she asked Ethel Byrd, who knew every one by virtue of long residence and close application.

Ethel hit at the vital spot, and she had quite a knowledge of social anatomy.

"He's the Hastings flour mills," she said.

"Would have sworn he was human," sighed Peg, "but these machines nowadays do fool you!"

Ethel ignored that flippancy.

"He's one of the nicest men in town. Not a bit spoiled, in spite of being so popular."

"And what makes the jolly miller so popular?"

"Well," Ethel generalized, "if you're unattached and look the way he does, you're rather apt to be. He's not terribly rich, for it isn't a big concern. But he has plenty and every one likes him. He has just the same manner for every one."

"O," said Peg, "I wondered about that. It's such a cordial manner. How does he happen to be loose, anyway? Is he blighted or has he got a girl? To be exact, is he sitting up with any one now?"

Ethel shook her head.

"Not likely. If he sits up with any one it's probably at ten cents a point. He lives at the City club. No. He's been often shot at but never hit. He doesn't want to be married, but he gives girls an awfully good time. There are men like that, you know," finished Ethel, gathering him generously into the scheme of things.

"There are," Peg agreed meekly.

The meekness was foreign to her, a stray manner caught up hastily to cover a place in her mind that burned and smarted with humiliation. To think that she had been victimized by a man's regular line! To think that she had waited for that telephone to ring!

Ethel went on, explaining further. Peg's questions had been leading and she wanted to inform her fully that there was no use in wasting any time or thought on Calhoun Hastings. A good many things had to be explained to Peg since she had come back to live. For, although the O'Briens were newcomers, they dated back to the old days, too, when the city's hierarchies were in formation. Jeronimus O'Brien had left the city at that time to increase the fortune he had already founded. He was a man of big ideas and wandering impulses, which had led him in and out of riches several times since then.

Now, when there was little money left, after all his exploits, and his spirit was confused by grandiloquent memories and broken by failing health, he had insisted on coming back to the place from which he had started. Perhaps he thought he would still look big to it. Perhaps he had exaggerated the welcome he would find there, mindful of the early days when streets and buildings had been named after him. But though the O'Brien building still stood on the corner of Sixth and Mohawk, it was a shabby, run down affair, only an incubus on a valuable site.

The older residents remembered the family, of course, and casually did what they could to be pleasant, especially to Peg, who was young and had boiled down the family attractiveness in her sensitive, eager, violet eyed face. No one could do much for Jule, her older sister, who had been battered out of hope in some wretched marriage which had finally cast her upon her father's bounty again.

THE O'Briens had rented half a double house. It was not an attractive house, but it was cheap, and in their first weeks there a good many limousines, mostly belonging to people who had not left the city to seek wider fortune, drew up in front of it, while the owners called and sized up the O'Brien situation. The verdict always got down to two things: being sorry for old Jeronimus and nice to Peg. It was clear that the family burdens were falling on Peg. She was obviously the only one of them who could work, and after the house was settled she turned up at the biggest business college one morning, paid her tuition, and settled herself to learn shorthand and typing. Every one soon knew about that, but it romanticized her rather more than ever.

People like Ethel Byrd, recalling incidents which had been told of the way the O'Briens had formerly lived, found a good deal of dramatic contrast in the situation. Ethel herself, speaking from the vantage point of childhood friendship, hoped very much that Peg would marry soon, and well. But she could not see any immediate prospect among the eligible men she knew, no one who would be willing to take on the entire, rather pitiful O'Brien family, and marrying Peg might mean that.

"Men," continued Ethel, rapidly silhouetting Peg's situation in her mind, "are rather different from the way they used to be. I think it's these clubs. The men who live at them and get a little past their first youth are altogether too comfortable. They don't want to take on marriage, with a lot of responsibilities. And of course it is awfully convenient to have a few men detached for dinner parties and things."

"In other words," said Peg, "though you have a bird in the hand, you like to have a few in the bush—for dinner parties."

She gathered up her notebooks, for she had stopped on her way home from the business college.

"Stay for dinner," begged Ethel. "You always amuse Dick so!"

Peg shook a resolute head, but she looked about her a shade regretfully, for Ethel's house was growing very lovely as Ethel learned to condense and select, and her dinners were always good.

"No. I've got to go home and do a little clicking on the typewriter. There's one sentence about 'My aunt, who was a large lady of amiable temperament,' which never comes out right. That's the twenty-third lesson, you see. And I must have it by tomorrow. Also, I'm not too good in the speed tests."

Ethel looked at her with commiseration, and Peg grinned.

"Don't pity me! I like it. There's a hard boiled girl who sits beside me and is smart as a streak. And on the other side is a tender infant of about sixteen who is not yet boiled at all. In front of me is a young man with a neck like a solid cube. They all pity me because, between you and me, I'm not considered very bright down there, but I have lots of fun. Sometimes they have us type to music. It's positively martial then. Onward, Christian typists!"

She left Ethel on that unregenerate note, refusing her final offer of at least a ride home. It was less than a mile to walk, and she wanted to walk some things out of her. Peg was twenty-four, and not too inexperienced about men. She'd had her share and she thought she knew a stuffed shirt when she saw one. Apparently, she told herself, scornfully, she did not.

She put Calhoun Hastings out of her mind with a resentful shake, dropped the thought of him on the pavement, and walked over it all the way home. Peg had a flair for homes. Even in her chaotic life, so far, she had tried her hand at making several of them. One summer they had leased a heavenly place in Westchester which had been nearest to what she dreamed of, and of course there had been the Mayfair house in London for a year, the succession of New York apartments, grand and small, and the funny, bare house the year they had been in Butte on the trail of a gold mine. The half of a house they lived in now did not depress her. It had a rather pleasant porch, with a vine growing over it and a hammock beneath the vine.

Jule was in the hammock. She had a headache, she told her sister.

"You lie there and I'll get supper," said Peg.

"It's all ready. I went around to the delicatessen and got some things there."

"O, Jule! That stuff costs so much and it's so tiresome. I could have made an omelet and creamed some potatoes in no time."

"Why should you kill yourself?" objected Jule. "It's so much easier this way."

Peg said nothing more. She went out in the kitchen and looked at Jule's preparations for supper, the cold ham in its oiled paper, the little paper boat of potato salad, generously sprinkled with chopped pickle, the miniature jar of livid looking

New Model Florence with built-in oven and other striking improvements

The new model Florence Oil Range pictured below is an outstanding achievement in the history of oil ranges. Note the luxurious built-in oven. This type of oil range is the one most highly endorsed by domestic science experts. This feature on a range priced so low is unusual. Oven and mantel are made in one unit and permanently attached to the range, thus insuring better oven cookery and improving the lines and proportions. Examine also the new all-grid top, making the Florence one of the most spacious ranges ever sold. A third noteworthy feature is the single giant burner under the oven. This replaces two standard burners. It consumes less fuel and gives ideal heat control. This model comes only in the four-burner size. Standard Model with removable oven in 2-, 3- and 4-burner sizes.

FOCUSED HEAT

Florence Burner with outer jacket cut away to show how flame is focused on the cooking vessel. There is no wick, for the Florence operates on the most advanced principle of combustion engineering, mixing the vapor from kerosene with heated air. This assures complete combustion and intense heat. Now you see how focused heat saves your time and money.

Cut down your Kitchen hours Use this Quick-Cooking Focused Heat

HERE is an oil range that will bring you out of the kitchen sooner. It is the quick-cooking, wickless Florence, the range with Focused Heat. This is the kind of heat that goes straight from burner to cooking utensil. No waste heat. All the heat concentrates on the spot where it will do the most good.

Note in the pictures how close the burners are to the cooking—only 2½ inches below. But that's not all. Florence burners force air inside the flame, giving a quick and most intense, clean heat. They focus the heat on the bottom of the cooking vessel. Utensil and flame meet at the hottest point.

The flame is intensely hot, like the blistering glow of molten metal. It is produced by burners that are the last word in scientific design. They combine the vapor from kerosene with air, producing a gas which delivers more heat into the cooking in a given time from a gallon of kerosene than any other high power oil range. Quick-cooking heat, yet very economical.

Built-in oven—giant burner

Study carefully the new built-in oven construction and see how closely the Florence resembles the most up-to-date type of gas range. The oven and mantel are made in one piece and are permanently attached to the range. No danger of the oven getting out of the proper position for the most efficient baking. This built-in oven model is the kind most highly recommended by domestic science experts. No other oil range with all these quality features offers you this sturdy, permanent-oven construction at such a low price.

Another innovation is the single giant burner under the oven, replacing two standard burners on former models. Experiments prove that the single burner gives ideal heat control and uses less oil. Other notable features of this oven are the famous baker's arch and patented heat spreader.

New grid top gives more room

Note especially the new, improved all-grid top on this range. No gas range has a better one. Deep . . . long . . . level . . . sturdy. Plenty of room for dishes that are simmering or keeping warm. Plenty of room besides for dishes that are cooking over the burners. No danger of spilling or tipping when moving dishes about.

Truly the Florence is a beautiful range. Gray and black glossy enamel surfaces. So easy to keep clean. Economical to run. No wicks. Just strike a match and light the asbestos kindlers.

See the range with focused heat today. Florence Oil Ranges are sold by more than 25,000 hardware, furniture, and department stores. At the right is a partial list of dealers in Chicago and nearby towns. Visit the dealer nearest you and see the Florence in operation in his store. If there is no Florence dealer listed in your neighborhood, write or phone us.

New Florence Water Heater with Thermostatic Control. Pictured at the left is the new Florence Water Heater—the only oil-burning water heater ever marketed that is entirely automatic. All you have to do is light the pilot light and thereafter you have a continuous supply of hot water with no further trouble than renewing the fuel supply as needed. An ingenious thermostat increases the heat when the water cools off and lowers the flame to just the right temperature when the tank is full of hot water. This heater can also be operated by hand just like any ordinary water heater if desired.

DELICATESSEN LOVE

In her mind Peg had a picture of how baked beans should look, and it wasn't like that. These looked as if nobody cared much about them, or hadn't cared recently, at least. And Jule had forgotten butter, so Peg, in her turn, had to go to the delicatessen, the little corner shop that was tributary to the three or four big second rate apartment houses and the rooming houses and the lazy housekeepers who had homes but didn't work in them. She stood by the door, waiting her turn, for the place was always full of women, and men, too, at this time in the evening. Peg despised the women who bought there, some of them, doubtless, young married women with a chance to cook in their own kitchens and broil steaks and get regular dinners for no more than they paid for this ready cooked stuff.

SHE had bought her pound of butter and some rolls for breakfast and was crossing the street with them under arm when a low open car put its brakes on in her honor, and, looking up, she saw Calhoun Hastings at the wheel. There was a girl with him, some one whom Peg did not know, a pretty girl with an insolent mouth. They recognized each other, Calhoun and Peg, and he bowed, while she smiled in her most cordial and nonchalant manner, for her pride was scraped raw again. Not that she minded her packages. She would not have cared if he had seen her bent over the typewriter or hanging out a washing. But she was reminded of the slipshod way her family lived and of imaginings which she had indulged while she waited for that telephone to ring, imaginings based only upon a profile that looked romantic and impulsive, and the meaningless, pleasant remarks which Ethel said Calhoun Hastings made to every one. He was doubtless repeating them now. She hurried on home, back to the pink slices of ham and the livid baked beans and Jule's eternal headache.

Calhoun had, as a matter of fact, been making some of his usual remarks to the girl in the car. Not many of them, because she did not need much talking to. He did not have an elaborate repertoire, and when he found a remark was good and got results he did not throw it away after using it once or twice. But Ivy Lansing, who was with him tonight, was not critical. She liked rides in good cars and dinners at good hotels, and was used to being thoroughly kissed, as thoroughly kissed as a technically nice girl could be.

Calhoun was aware of her schedule. But for a few minutes after passing Peg he fell into a silence which he had not contemplated. He had not exactly forgotten Peg. She had been right in her diagnosis of his intention to call her up and see her again. But Calhoun had a simple rule for himself, which was not to handle inflammable material, and when he found that he was thinking a little too much about Peg, he diverted his mind elsewhere. Also, he had asked about her, and the whole O'Brien history had been reviewed for his benefit, including the stories of Jeronimus O'Brien's worthless mine and his scapegrace son, who had died, and Jule, who had married so unfortunately, and Peg, who was studying to be a stenographer. Had with all those things in mind, Calhoun had let the situation ride.

He knew that in the natural course of events he would meet Peg again, and it was, on the whole, better not to have the occasion of his own seeking or contriving. Better not to be involved. He had kept that simple, unprinted rule before him for years, in everything from business investments to social and emotional life. It had not made him rich and it had not yielded him any climaxes. But he knew just what to expect and he had no worries or responsibilities beyond those simple ones which were budgeted into his conservative business.

He liked girls and he liked women, and, as Ethel had said, he gave them a good time and enjoyed doing it. To choose in the manner of a connoisseur from what was available, an evening with some married woman whose husband was out of town and who appreciated the mild stimulant of his attentions, or some more highly colored diversion, a dance or drive with one of the more vivid girls on his list, was his privilege. Or, in certain moods, he could count on the well bred friendliness of taking out some unmarried girl who had kept her looks and her own amusing or skeptical. All very nice it was, to send out before him for him to select whatever struck his fancy. He could tell in advance just what he was getting, whereas, if a man married, he knew only too well that there was no possible chance of being sure of what might fasten itself on him. Sometimes the marriages at which he was a convivial attendant turned out excellently; sometimes they flivvered; and sometimes they became permanent worries and serious obligations and tangled up with births and even deaths. The married men who were not getting on in years or unhappy at home did not come too often to the club. That in itself showed how tied they were.

The club itself, excellent structure of early Georgian architecture, built to last a lifetime, and on property that appreciated every year, was exceedingly comfortable. It was, as an institution, something of a social mentor to the city. The country club, far out and suburban, was a recluse of a club so far as the general public was concerned, but the down town club, a little to the left of the heart of the city, in the proper position of a vital organ, was well known to the very laborers who rode by it on the street cars on their way to work at six o'clock in the morning. It was, at that time, in dignified repose.

At seven-thirty it began to stir mildly, as the boy sweeping its walks indicated, and at eight-thirty the smoking room was pleasantly full of the residents. They were all gentlemen of income who took their breakfasts seriously and ate with care, especially if they were doing gastronomic penance for any libations of the night before. They looked common and simple enough. Not a wrinkle, not a defect of eye or tooth had been spared them. The club denied no physical perfections along with its exclusive memberships. And yet, to passing shopgirls, there was something romantic about this men's club, about men living there richly, luxuriously, without women. That they were widowers or that they might be dyspeptic never occurred to the romanticists. Also, there were tales whispered around occasionally about some of the residents which, as such things go, did slip under the rope of romance.

Peg O'Brien passed the club every morning. She had to do it if she walked to school, and while Mr. O'Brien talked bombastically of the automobiles he meant to buy in the near future, as soon as he had his strength back, Peg was just as glad that street cars still ran. She disliked street cars, though she appreciated their necessity, not because of their noise or crowds but because of their eternal jerking to stops and jerking to starts. So she got up half an hour earlier and walked, which helped to account for the fact that she could eat four slices of bacon and a dish of cooked cereal before she started and yet have a chin with the sweetest of shadowed hollows and legs which were so firm and charming that fitters always urged her to have her skirts even shorter.

PEG was one of the few working girls who, passing the club, looked at it without either curiosity or especial interest. The pomposity of its entrance always amused her a little, and she had never found men very clever. Not clever enough to live by themselves without seeming a little absurd. Men were often dull, but particularly dull when they were thrown on each other's society. That was why they had so many games and why they enlivened their games by gambling, according to Peg's theory. She had long ago discovered, from seeing a good many of them, that men of wealth and high position differed hardly at all from other kinds of men, and so to see a gentleman emerge from the town club did not even make her look twice. That was why Calhoun Hastings caught up with her without her recognising him.

"This is luck," he said. "Can I walk along with you?"

She glanced quickly at him. Again he gave her an emotional start. That eager, personal look, that smile which seemed never to have been used before, must have taken any number of girls in, she thought, in secret anger. And, with that thought, she smiled, and all Peg's smiles were early morning ones, gay and delightful.

"Of course. But don't you limousine to your office?"

"No. I always walk"

"Just like me. But from so different a reason!" She looked at him again, closely. "There's some egg on your face."

He put up a quick hand, and rubbed his mouth, then pulled out a handkerchief. For a minute he didn't seem to know the answer. Possibly no one had ever remarked on traces of breakfast about him before.

"I guess I was wrong," said Peg, regarding his mouth intently. "No, it's not egg."

He was disconcerted, and kept rubbing.

"It's nothing," she encouraged him. "Don't bother. You look all right."

He tried to pick up the easy, gallant swing of his usual conversation, but found it hard. How could one talk to a girl who saw egg on a man's face?

"Where are you going so early?" he asked.

That was a blunder, for he must have known, and he brought some frank revelations about his head.

"I'm going to business college. I'm on the forty-third lesson. My speed tests are improving, too. I don't suppose you know of any jobs? I'm going to be through with my course in a week or so, and I want to go right to work."

"You want to be careful to get just what you want."

"I want a check," she said. "That's my simple and direct object. A recurrent check on a good bank. Otherwise, I'm not particular. Keep me in mind, will you?"

She spoke exactly as a girl should who wanted a job badly, and it embarrassed Calhoun. He appreciated her difficulties, but he expected her to do what most people did when talking of their financial worries to people in their own social groups, either minimize them or humorize them a little. Peg didn't.

"Things cost so much," she went on. "You wouldn't believe what we have to pay for rent for that house we live in. I have an idea that if one could afford it, it would be cheaper to buy the place and rent one side of it out. It's really quite a good house. The old Monroe house it is, you know."

"I imagine that must be a very well built house."

"Needs a new bathroom," sighed Peg. "It has a tin tub. They've enameled it, but it flakes on you. You know."

He didn't know. Bathtubs and showers at the town club did not flake. But he did know that at that moment Peg left him again with no answer. There was nothing in his repertoire that met a remark about a flaking bathtub. He kept silent, and walked along beside her while she talked on, every now and then lifting that vivid face under her black broad hat to him and then turning it away again. It was an old trick of Peg's own. She knew how eager a man could get if she delayed very long in lifting it. The things she talked about were curiously stark and vital. He remembered afterward that she told him that she had made waffles for breakfast and that they had been like leather, that her sister Jule had a coddled nervous state, that her father wasn't well or able to engage in further enterprise, and, incidentally, she happened to mention, comically and casually, something that had happened on the day she had been presented at the court of St. James. It was the first time that Calhoun had come into intimate touch with business college circles or court circles.

The night had brought a strange disturbance aboard . . . in the dim light of a lantern Cap'n Whelan and the mate gazed at the unaccustomed creature—an abandoned baby . . .

From gun running, the crew of the brig Hirondelle turned to child tending—and with the advent of this mysterious, helpless little person began a series of unusual happenings for rough sailors in the South Seas . . .

The SENTIMENTALISTS
by Dale Collins

is the new Sunday Tribune serial story. Start it in this section next Sunday!

At a corner they met another girl, who spoke to Peg with great friendliness, and Peg insisted on joining her, and, more than that, assumed that Calhoun would accompany them both. The girl was the one who sat next to Peg at business college, the hard boiled one with electric fingers. Peg kept talking on, and the yellow haired girl made a series of very obvious attacks on Calhoun's susceptibilities. By the time they reached the avenue which climbed the hill to the business college he was thoroughly ill at ease. Peg did not seem to notice it. She said good-by and that she was glad she had seen him, and turned with equal interest to the yellow haired girl, falling into absorbed dialogue with her.

CALHOUN went on to his office. The incident recurred to his mind all day at intervals. He hoped he wouldn't get caught that way again. Peg O'Brien had no sense of reserve whatsoever. Doubtless it was the curious, outlawed kind of life she had led. But he found that her face was printed on his memory with an annoying sharpness. When she lifted her head under that black hat her violet eyes showed strange, soft depths. She had a wonderful skin. Calhoun found himself wondering how many men had made love to her and why she had been such a fool as not to take one of the chances that must have come her way. A girl couldn't breeze around two continents wearing her looks and not pick up a number of excellent chances.

After lunch he not only wiped his mouth carefully but scrutinized it in a wall mirror at the restaurant where he ate. He wondered quite seriously if there had really been egg. He must have looked a fool.

"I suppose old O'Brien's out of the running," he said casually to Litterell, who was the masculine equivalent of Ethel Byrd and had his finger on the financial pulse of every one in turn.

"O, absolutely. The old fellow's done in. Too bad, in a way. He made a lot of money for people, you know, and had the most amazing things in his hands at one time. There was a time when he had options on every bit of mining land that now makes up the Iroquois range."

"Why didn't he hold it?"

"O, he was a kind of wanderer, you know. First here and then there. Went to London on that cable scheme and made a lot of money. Lost it in some Australian venture. Had mines in Butte that didn't pan out very well for him. But they cost him an awful lot before he found that out. He wasn't much of a saver, that was his trouble. He'd loan money to any one. Lord, they say that in 1893 he had the I. O. U.'s of every man in town who amounts to anything now, and a lot who don't. I tell you, Hastings, it's a pity to see an old fellow like that on his uppers after having had his fingers in such a lot of plum pies. And the children didn't turn out very well—and there you are. The oldest girl married that Englishman who wasn't anything but a drunken bum and the boy wasn't any good at all. I guess the war took him off just in time."

"There's a younger daughter," said Calhoun suggestively.

"Yep. She pays the price for the whole mixup. Too bad she isn't a boy. If she were and had some of old Jerry's brains she might get the family back on its feet. Pity they ever came back here, if you ask me. Do you know the girl?"

"I've met her."

"What's she doing?"

"She's taking up stenography."

"Tough," said Litterell.

It certainly should have been tough. But thinking of Peg's laughter and her interest in talk of the business college this morning, Calhoun felt awkward with his sympathy. He didn't quite know where to put it down, as it were.

The next morning he looked out of one of the long, mullioned windows of the club to make sure she was not coming down the street when he started for work. He didn't intend to meet her again. She was not coming. The next morning he went in high indifference, trusting to luck not to meet her. He did not. For three subsequent days, after giving his mouth a very careful wiping, he stood by the window to see if he could see her pass and, possibly, deep in the bottom of his careful mind, intended to join her. But he caught no glimps of her at all. A little later he decided to alter his customary route for no reason at all and tried the upper street. But there also he walked alone.

It was at Ethel Byrd's he saw her next. Ethel was having one of her rather careful dinner parties and Peg was included because, at the last minute, her hostess had looked over the list of guests and caught an anticipated rumble of conversation which might be too heavy and break up her party by sheer weight before a convivial hour. She did not want to add a mere young girl, because a gay young girl cast among even the youngest of the married sets is apt to show boredom and a dull young girl would have made things worse. So she fished around in her mind until she came to the thought of Peg, stopped there, and invited Calhoun Hastings to balance the table.

Calhoun and Peg were both supers at that dinner party, but the thought never occurred to either of them. Peg was in a mood to snatch at respite and had been glad to come. She wanted to forget the rebuffs she had been having from employers who wouldn't see her, or, worse still, employers who did see her and treated her with such casual hardness. Looking for a job was a great deal more difficult than adjusting herself to the racket and excitement of the business college. But the O'Brien family needed money and Peg could not bear to see the little her father had left melting away without any attempt to earn from any of them.

Only tonight she wanted to forget the whole thing, to pretend it away and get back the spirit of nonchalance which she had always had when she wore a favorite dress with a figure shadowed in its fabric. She put it on because she was superstitious about dresses. In some of them she had a good time and in some others she never had a good time. This dress, of some incalculably soft stuff, had never yet failed her. She had bought it once in Paris, and though it was old it had remained, like a grand lady, quite independent of fashions. Wearing it, Peg glowed. It was short and plain and yet so soft and deep of color that it made men's eyes quicken as they looked at Peg and women wonder covetously where she had found it. Among Ethel's well dressed friends Peg became sophisticated to the women and innocent to the men. It was a trick she had picked up somewhere which always amused her.

Seated at the length of a table from her, Calhoun found his eyes straying away from his dinner partner who was one of the acknowledged married beauties and had a small and innocuous permanent easement on his affections. There was nothing between them, people said. And were right. She was simply one of the women whom Calhoun looked well with and kept him around for possibly the same reason that he stayed. Tonight he found her tedious. The conversation at his end of the table was being carefully manufactured and put out in small packages. At the other end, where he could see Peg's round, white arms elbowed on the damask cloth, laughter rose in gusts, in shouts. People kept trying to get in on it.

"Peg O'Brien hasn't lost her spirit certainly," said the woman next Calhoun, "or else she puts up an awfully good front."

"It's not a front," said Calhoun; "she's like that."

"Do you know her so well?"

"Why, no. I don't know her very well. Only looking at her, I should imagine——"

"What can you tell about people by looking at them?"

It sent him chasing his thoughts. He was vaguely aware that all the little tamed thoughts in his head were being driven into a corner, crowded into one, and rather harassed there by a large and unfamiliar thought that wouldn't even show its face to him. He was conscious that it was a bad state of things and that he ought to do something about it. In a minute he would. But just now he had something more important on his mind, which was to get as close to Peg as the thoroughly married and much amused men around her would permit. When they left the table she was in the midst of those shared secrets which sometimes hang over from dinner table conversations. He caught something of it.

"Can I, Ethel?" asked Peg.

"Can you what?"

"They bet me ten dollars I couldn't turn a handspring."

"Collect your money. I'm with you," said Ethel, who saw that her party was going.

"I bet twenty dollars—not ten," called John McCurdy, who, thought Calhoun stiffly, should have known better.

THEY were all in the doorway of the drawing room watching Peg. She stood there for the briefest moment, calculating distance, and John McCurdy moved a chair so the long, thickly carpeted distance was clear. There was a swift little run and the most enchanting handspring in the world, one quick vision of perfectly poised legs, and a swing of the smartly cut skirt.

"Did you say twenty?" asked Peg calmly, shaking her hair into place.

It wasn't the incident in itself Calhoun minded. He knew it was harmless enough. But at the sight of John McCurdy handing over that twenty dollar bill, so casually taken out of a million dollar fortune, Calhoun found himself itching to make trouble. There was no reason why a hoydenish girl should be so upsetting, but he was strangely upset.

Then suddenly she wasn't a hoydenish girl. She was out in the little study off the drawing room with Charley Hood and a couple of other men. They were not doing anything, although a card table lay before them, only idling, talking with occasional lifts into laughter. Calhoun walked through the room twice and then three times, but was not urged to stay. Peg was not a hoyden now. She was a rather subtle woman, keeping three men deftly entertained by merely being with them. They did most of the talking. Calhoun finally was pressed into conversation in the other room and found his attention wandering from it. His form was decidedly bad.

Still, because groups break up and he had technique, he established himself beside her in the end. She was still just where she had begun in the latter part of the evening, in the little study. It gave him a feeling of success to be alone with her, and for a minute he lost his rounded periods and wondered where to begin. Peg said nothing. She just looked up at him, as if to ask what he had to offer.

"You're looking very lovely tonight," he said, and was simultaneously sure that it was a stupid remark and that dozens of men had probably said it to her before. She was lovely. He had not known that a woman could be so stirringly so. When she did not say anything he had to begin again.

"I've been thinking of you very often." That was awkward, but he hadn't meant to say it that way.

"Why?" asked Peg.

"I don't know exactly. I've known lots of girls, but I've never known any one who was like you before."

She was not helpful.

"I wish you'd let me see you some time. I wish you'd let me know you a little better," he went on.

Peg stood up. She looked as if there was something distasteful in front of her that she meant to brush away.

"Thank you," she said slowly, "but I'm not interested in delicatessen love."

"In what?"

"You can't add me to your list," said Peg. "I'll tell you why. Around the corner from where I live there's a delicatessen. A lot of cooked food spread out for people to buy. It's highly colored and decked out and flavored to suit a multitude and people come in and buy it. Lots of people do. It's easier. They don't have to go to any work to feed themselves if they buy their dinners there. They just go in and pick out what they want at the minute. The way you do with girls." She made a little dusting gesture with her hands. "I don't like it."

He had flushed, only vaguely following her, conscious that it was vicious rebuff, but not yet able to analyze it.

"I don't see what you imply."

"Nothing," Peg told him; "only I thought I might as well tell you right at the start that the men I'm interested in aren't those who set up light housekeeping with life and choose their love affairs at an emotional delicatessen. I hate delicatessens. I hate that way of living. I want things that are mine, prepared for me even if they cost more or turn out flat failures. Don't waste any time on me. I rather meant to let you, so that I could turn you down, but unfortunately I spilled it all out. You do get under my skin so!"

She walked past him, finally through with him, and joined Ethel. Calhoun looked after her, his eyes smoldering, more than ever handsome,

THE OTHER DAY

The Indian War on Rome

By Donald Ogden Stewart

"A MASQUERADE on board ship is a great deal more fun than a masquerade on dry land," said the doctor, reminiscently.

We were sitting in the smoking room, and, as is natural with travelers all over the globe, we fell to discussing masquerades.

"Two hearts," put in Mrs. Clark of Cincinnati.

I looked at my wife.

"Two no trump," she breathed.

Pennypacker was silent.

"Tell us, doctor," I urged, "of some of your experiences with masquerades."

"I pass," muttered Pennypacker.

"Will you please bid?" asked my wife.

I looked at my cards. The ship gave a slight lurch, and I shifted my position.

"Pass," I announced.

"It's about time," commented my wife.

At that moment Mr. Arnold arrived. He was smiling, as usual, and full of pep, as usual, and unwelcome, as usual—but there was about him, this time, something different. He was dressed in a sheet.

"Guess what I am, folks," he cried jovially, tossing the top part of the costume over his shoulder.

We looked up from our cards.

"A man in a sheet," I guessed.

Mr. Arnold shook his head.

"A ghost?"

"Nope," he replied.

My wife took a guess.

"A night in the morgue," was her suggestion.

That was wrong, too.

"I'm a Roman," announced Mr. Arnold. "How do you like it?"

"Fine," we replied.

"Say, listen, folks," added the Roman, "aren't you going to get dressed for the masquerade?"

"After this rubber," we replied.

Pennypacker led the eight of hearts. I laid down my hand within reach of my wife, and lighted a cigaret.

"What are you going to dress up as?" I asked the doctor.

"Well, I don't know," he replied. "I don't think I'll go."

"You ought to go," asserted Mr. Arnold.

The doctor smiled, amiably.

"There's no rule about it, is there?" he asked.

Arnold did not reply. He was waving to some people across the smoking room.

"I'm Julius Cæsar," he called. "Pretty classy."

We did not hear the response.

"Yes, sir," he said, looking over my wife's shoulder at her hand, "Julius Cæsar."

"I might go as Brutus," suggested the doctor.

"Sure," agreed Arnold, and then he added, "you should have played your ten."

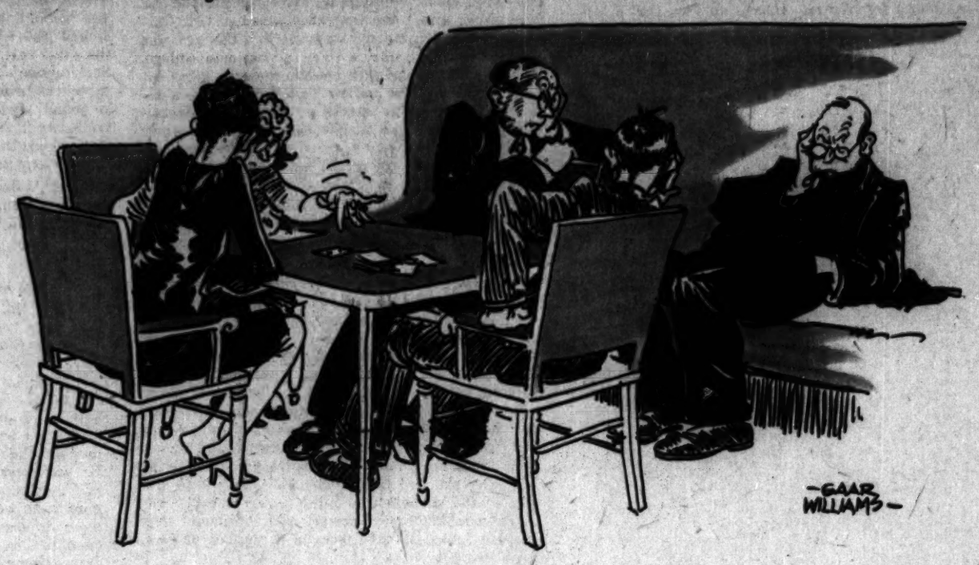
My wife did not reply. Mrs. Clark took the trick.

"See?" said Arnold, moving around back of Pennypacker. "Now let's look at what you've got, boy."

"Wouldn't you like to take my place?" suggested Pennypacker. The tone was not cordial.

"No—go right ahead," said Arnold. "Whoa—wait a minute—lead the spade."

The game went on.



The doctor seemed to be thinking.

Suddenly into the smoking room, with an ear splitting yell, burst an Indian—or, rather, a small boy dressed as an Indian. He was followed by another—and then eight more. They ran across the floor, circled a table, and then followed their leader out the opposite door.

"Great boys, those," said Arnold.

The Indians returned, louder than ever.

"Hello, boys," called Arnold. "Hello, there, Indians!"

The war dance stopped.

"Hello, yourself," replied the leader.

"Come on over here," invited Arnold.

The boy shook his head.

"Come on, kid," urged Arnold.

"Say, mister, what are you doing with that sheet?" asked another of the Indians, who happened to be a girl.

"Come here, little girl," said Arnold, smiling invitingly.

"Who are you?" she demanded.

"I'm a Roman," replied Arnold.

"A what?" asked the little girl.

"A Roman."

The little girl looked uncomprehendingly at the other Indians. One or two snickered nervously. Then, as a relief to their feelings, they burst into wild yells of laughter, and ran out the door. We could hear them as they raced around the deck outside.

"Cute kids," said Arnold.

The door at the other side opened, and several people entered. They were dressed in various costumes—pirates, Turks, Spaniards. Arnold's face lighted up.

"There's my gang," he announced. "Hello, J. B.!" he cried.

"J. B.," who was just sitting down at one of the corner tables, waved a not too cordial greeting.

"That's J. B. Satterthwaite," explained Arnold. "One of the biggest real estate men in southern California."

There was no comment on that.

"Would you excuse me a minute?" said Arnold.

"Yes," replied my wife, Mrs. Clark, the doctor, Pennypacker, and myself. We watched Arnold go over and make himself at home.

"Only three days more," muttered my wife.

Mrs. Clark was adding up the bridge score. The doctor seemed to be thinking. All at once the Indians came back. They were breathing hard and noisily from their run, and they stopped and sat down on the stairs.

"O, little girl," called the doctor, softly.

The little girl looked up, panting.

"What?" she replied.

"Wouldn't you like a drink of lemonade?" asked the doctor. "All of you?"

I looked at the doctor in amazement. He seemed to be in earnest.

"Sure," replied the girl, and in eighteen seconds we were surrounded by children. There was no escape.

"So you're Indians," mused the doctor.

"Sure," they replied.

"Would you like to hear a story about Indians?" he asked.

"Do we get the lemonade?" asked the little girl.

The doctor rang for the steward.

"All right," agreed the little girl, "shoot."

"AS you all know," began the doctor, "Indians hate Romans."

The little girl's eyes widened. So did ours.

"Guys in sheets?" asked the girl.

The doctor nodded.

"To any Indian who was at all brave," continued the doctor, "the name 'Roman' was always synonymous——"

"Was always what?" asked the girl.

"Always meant 'enemy,'" replied the doctor. "And that was why the Romans and the Indians were always fighting. In fact," continued the doctor, "no Indian was ever allowed into the tribe until he had had a fight with a Roman and won."

"What did they fight with?" asked the girl.

"Well," replied the doctor, "they generally fought with tomahawks."

"O," said the little girl.

"But almost anything would do, wouldn't it?" I put in hastily.

"Yes," agreed the doctor, "almost anything would do."

"And if you socked a Roman, then you were a real Indian?" asked the girl.

The doctor nodded.

The lemonade arrived, and the children drank. Then, just as they were about to ask for another, the dinner gong sounded, and they rushed away. I looked at the doctor.

"I wish you'd let me pay for those lemonades," I offered.

"Me, too," put in Pennypacker, eagerly.

The doctor smilingly refused.

"Come on, dear," said my wife. "If we're going to dress——"

We dressed as pirates—or, rather, I dressed as a pirate and my wife dressed as sort of a combination of a pirate and a white elephant sale—and we sallied forth. The dining room was quite gay, with at least half the passengers in costume. We noticed that Arnold's seat was vacant.

"He's usually the first one there," commented my wife, hopefully.

Soup passed, as did celery and olives. Fish, and after that a breast of chicken—and still no Arnold. We became slightly nervous—almost giggly.

"Your hand is trembling, dear," said my wife.

With salad came a howl—the howl of a little girl. Down the stairs outside—closer—and then it passed.

"Some one was dragging her," whispered my wife. "It sounded like her father."

In a minute there were other howls.

"Those are boys," said my wife.

After that, silence. Then came the dessert. And, with the dessert, Pennypacker—dressed as Apache. He sat down, wearily. We

"They got the wrong one," he said, at last.

My wife and I sighed.

"There was another Roman?" I guessed.

He nodded.

"A man named Littlefield," he replied. "A fine fellow—from New Jersey."

We sat in silence. After a while Arnold came. He was very jovial. We finished our dessert, and went upstairs to the ballroom. Only a few people were dancing, so we went gloomily aft to the smoking room, where we found the doctor. He, too, was quite depressed, and we four sat down together and ordered coffee and liqueurs. After a while we began to feel a little better, and when we went upstairs and looked forward to the ballroom the scene was quite gay. And the gayest person there was Mr. Arnold.

"He has a tremendous amount of vitality, hasn't he?" remarked the doctor.

"Yes," we replied. "Shall we go back to the smoking room?"

DELICATESSEN LOVE

with his face in stern and angry lines, as if he was thinking of something risky and violent. He was not. He thought of nothing except that the only girl who had ever set his thoughts running around like a merry-go-round despised him, for some obscure and metaphorical reason, and that she did not intend to have anything to do with him. He stood there so long that he became conspicuous and some one came along and drew him back with the crowd.

"If any one hears of a job," Peg was remarking blithely, "let me know. I'm wearing out my last pair of shoes doing the job hunter's polka."

Calhoun heard himself saying it. He was subconsciously sure he had not meant to.

"I'll give you a job. There's one vacant in my office right now."

She swung around and met his eyes. He looked dangerously angry.

"If you're in earnest," he said, "it's a good job for a beginner."

"I'm quite in earnest," answered Peg.

"Then drop in and see me."

"There's your chance," said some one, laughing, for the talk was growing a little heavy for the place and hour.

"I'll take it," said Peg, raising her chin a bit. "I'll be around in the morning."

He nodded abruptly, wondering in a quick panic what he had said that for. He didn't want her in his office, of all places.

Yet there she was, after four weeks, still disturbing him. She was at the outer edge of the room where the clerks sat, and she never took his dictation. She wasn't good enough for that. She did form letters and invoices and such things in the most inconspicuous fashion. But when he entered the room in the morning he knew she was there. He knew the way her hair rounded over her ears, the very bend of her shoulders at her typewriter. It was more than troubling. This sort of thing could get to be an obsession, he told himself. There was no reason why he should wonder where she got her lunch or whether she ate enough, no reason why he should feel like a fool getting into his car because she probably took a street car home. That was her lookout.

She'd said she didn't want anything to do with him, for some incoherent reason; she'd laid him out. But Calhoun's thoughts no longer went neatly around his head. On top of his plans for dinner an absolutely foolish notion would be found lying, some ridiculous thing about a dinner with Peg opposite him in a house to which he had the key. Preposterous ideas.

He lived his orderly club life, as usual, going through it from setting up exercises to bridge, but always with the new faint sense of mockery clinging to it, as if he knew that it was faintly ludicrous to live so. Delicatessen love—light housekeeping with life. He couldn't even take a girl out, although he tried it, without remembering that. And yet, in spite of everything, there was a certain excitement about living, about even getting up in the morning that seemed to have come over him suddenly.

Ethel Byrd, meeting him on the street, called him to the window of her electric and told him he was looking splendid.

"You look so fit, Cal. How's everything?"

"Fine."

"Is poor Peg O'Brien still in your office?"

"Why poor? Yes."

"O, I don't know. I've just been hearing things. The poor girl tries so hard, but I don't see how she can keep that family going."

He frowned. Ethel's pity annoyed him. Who was she to be so superior?

"O, I guess she can look out for herself."

"She could. But that old man! And that whining Jule. They're simply fastened to her. I must go around and cheer her up."

HE changed the subject abruptly. But that afternoon he looked up the O'Brien address in the telephone book, and later in the evening went out for a walk past the house. It wasn't a bad house, for a double one. Probably she couldn't meet the rent. Surely she couldn't, if the old man's money was giving out. He looked up at the windows, wondering which were hers, and a rush of raw feeling came into his heart and embarrassed him. He turned away abruptly and went around the corner.

The little delicatessen shop was still open, for it was only nine o'clock, and its display under the front plate glass caught his eye. So this was the place she disliked so much. He looked at the thin brown chickens, their legs tied stiffly together, the cheeses, the salad with its figured beet root and pickle, the piled cans of mushrooms. Ready made cooking, ready made living. He caught himself wondering in a painful way what it would be like to take the raw material of life and see what he could do with it. It might be an awful mess.

There were still people in the store. There were probably always people in it. He was turning away when the door opened, and the light shone full on some one coming out. It was Peg, her arms full of bundles, and in the sharp white electric light she looked tired and older, less a girl than he had ever seen her.

She gave a queer, uncertain laugh.

"For all my talk," she said, going straight back to their only vital conversation as if it had been hanging in her mind, "for all my talk, you find me in the delicatessen buying cooked food. But I couldn't help it tonight. Jule's not well. They had to have something for lunch tomorrow, and I burned the beans I tried to bake." Again she tried to laugh.

"Don't laugh like that," he said. "You're tired."

"No, I'm not," she answered defiantly. "I'm not tired at all."

"I think you are."

"I'm tired of not putting things over, that's all. It's so hard to try to build up a home and be driven to the delicatessen, or what is probably coming next for us, a boarding house somewhere."

"Not that, surely."

She sighed. "You don't know."

"I do know," he said quite simply, and turned to look at her over the packages. "We'll have to stop that."

"We?" she asked. "Who? The city fathers?"

They rounded the corner and came to the porch of the O'Brien side of the double house before he answered. Then he put down the packages on the step, and faced her.

"I meant you and me, Peg."

"I don't know what you mean."

"Nothing very new. But, if you'll marry me, we could have a home together. I'm not very rich, but we might buy the house and make quite a place of it. Your father and sister could have one side, and you and I——"

He stopped there, rather shyly. She had drawn away from him, and he could see her face only dimly. But he could feel her eyes.

"You're like that!" she said, "and I abused you and called you everything I hated. But you did get under my skin. Because from that first night I fell so hard—and it hurt——"

It was then that, for the first time, Calhoun justified his romantic exterior. The night had never seen a finer lover.

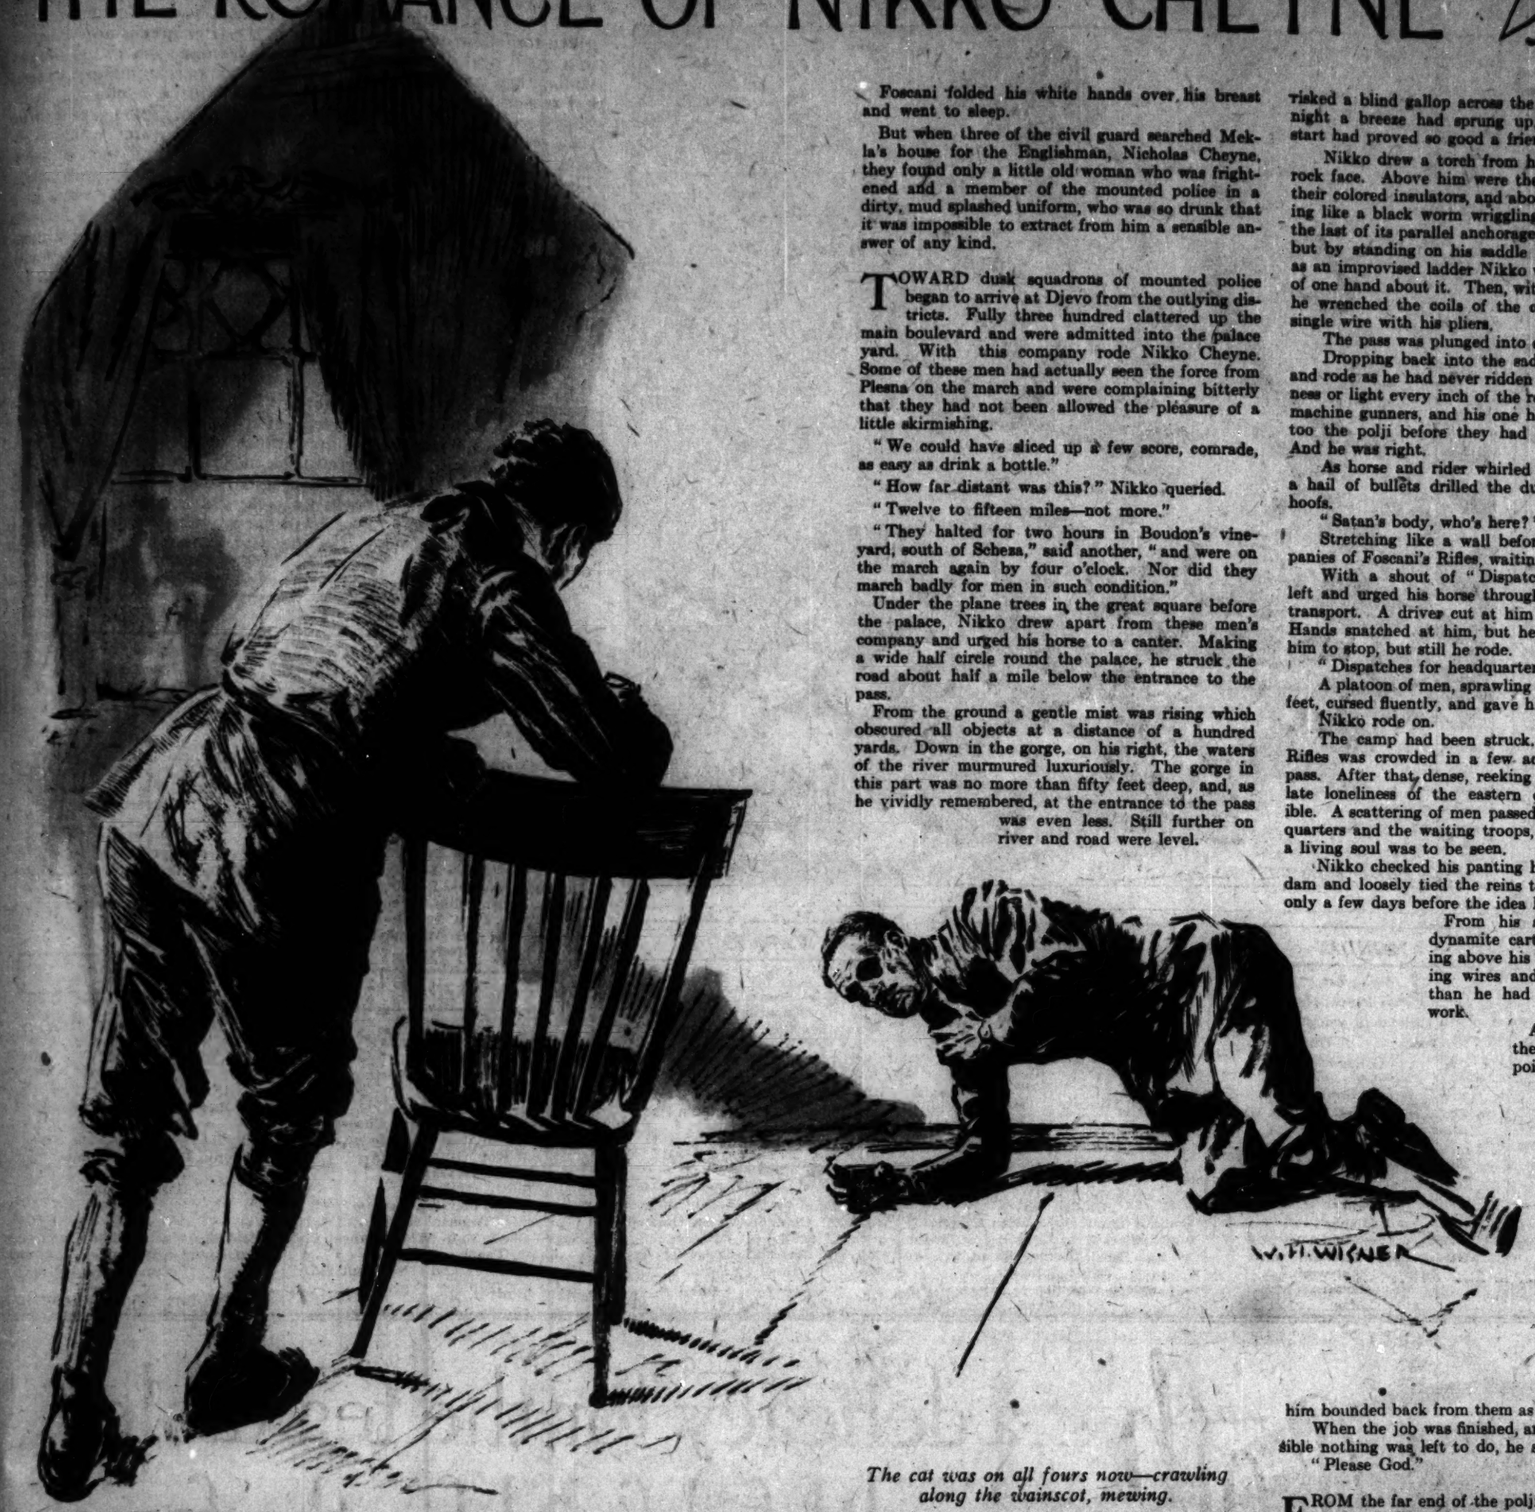
THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE By Roland Pertwee



The cat was on all fours now—crawling along the wainscot, mewing.

THE STORY RUNS THUS:

NIKKO CHEYNE, by succession Lord Cheyne of Querne, wins the heart of Princess Natalie, heir apparent to the throne of Sciriel. Natalie is the only child of Prince Carelon, brother of King Raymond of Scirjel. Baron Vilasto, chamberlain to the household of Prince Carelon, reminds the lovers of Natalie's royal destiny and persuades them to part. Nikko joins the Foreign Legion and spends seven years in the ranks. Nihilovists overthrow and slay the king of Scirjel and imprison Natalie. Nikko escapes from the Legion with the help of Veronica Howard, an American and a former schoolmate of the princess, and her English husband, Joris. Nikko hastens to the aid of Natalie. Posing as a journalist, he is given carte blanche to roam the country by the dictator, Foscani. With the aid of loyalists he effects the escape of Natalie, who joins the royalist camp in Plesna church. Nikko taps the power line that runs to the camp of the dictator's mercenaries beneath the great dam of Svorzova in the oasis of Issoi. His extension leads into the gardens of the palace at Djevo. The Duke of Svorzo, commanding the royalist forces, marches from Plesna against Djevo. Nikko asks Foscani's permission to revisit the oasis of Issoi.

INSTALLMENT XVI.

Annihilation.

THE telephone bell on Foscani's table whirred. He picked up the receiver and listened.

"I see," he said, then—"No. My orders are that there is to be no opposition—none. Yes, I will hold." While waiting he smiled at Nikko. "The duke has occupied the market town of Kutlib. The gentlemen have marched well. They are in a hurry."

The voice on the telephone wire had begun to speak again. Foscani's face underwent a swift change.

"Are you certain of this?"

He listened a moment, then rang off and sat chewing his lips and tapping the table top with a finger nail. At last he said aloud:

"It does not matter."

"Something has gone wrong?"

Foscani's answer was like a cat's spitting.

"Nothing. What should? The fools march, and the ace is at their head. Let them march. Let them collect confidence and followers en route. Let them march into the streets of Djevo and find their reward waiting for them—here. They shall not be disappointed. As the queen enters by the west gate my Rifles shall enter by the east. And then——"

Slowly Foscani's composure returned and his breathing became normal. Picking up a pencil, he made some rapid calculations on a scrap of paper. "Allowing for rests, they should be at the city gates by dawn tomorrow. From three a. m. the Rifles shall be standing by ready to move off."

He pressed a bell and Simon came in.

"Issue a circular call ordering the withdrawal of all district police posts between Kutlib and the capital. They will camp for the night in the palace yard. Repeat those instructions."

Simon repeated each word like a parrot and went to obey the order.

"When my Rifles have tasted blood they are apt to become unruly. It is as well on these occasions to have a few disciplined troops at hand."

Once again he touched the bell, and once again Simon came in.

"The ration train to Issoi tonight to be canceled. No transport or details of any kind to move up the pass. The road is to be kept clear for the movement of troops."

"I will see to that."

"Repeat the instructions."

Minutely the instructions were repeated, and Simon moved to the door.

"Wait. A cordon of mounted police to be drawn across the pass at this end with orders to shoot any one who approaches within fifty yards."

Nikko Cheyne bit his lip.

"—who approaches within fifty yards," Simon echoed.

"And now get me headquarters on this line."

Simon retired and Foscani waited in silence for the telephone to ring.

"And my pass to Issoi," said Nikko.

Foscani looked up with cold eyes.

"You heard my orders."

"Certainly, but——"

Foscani rose and made a gesture towards the door.

"You have occupied too much of my time already."

"You refuse to let me go?"

"To Issoi, yes, but from this room you have my full permission."

Nikko moved slowly to the door, then turned, and in his eyes a challenge was blazing.

"I thought," he said, "we understood one another."

"We may yet," said Foscani, with an odd emphasis.

And Nikko echoed:

"We may yet."

The door closed and Foscani stood looking at it through half shut eyes, in which a sudden intention had appeared.

"Simon," he cried, but there was no answer.

The telephone bell rang imperatively, and for the next ten minutes he volleyed orders into the mouthpiece. When he had finished he touched the bell push. Of Simon, who answered the summons, he asked:

"Has the Englishman Cheyne gone?"

"He passed through the anteroom the best part of a quarter of an hour ago."

"Did he, so! The next thing for you to do is to have him arrested, Simon."

"On what charge?"

"Suspicion."

"I will see to that," said Simon.

"And tell my man to bring me a basin of warm milk."

"— of warm milk," the rat-like Simon repeated.

Foscani folded his white hands over his breast and went to sleep.

But when three of the civil guard searched Mekla's house for the Englishman, Nicholas Cheyne, they found only a little old woman who was frightened and a member of the mounted police in a dirty, mud splashed uniform, who was so drunk that it was impossible to extract from him a sensible answer of any kind.

TOWARD dusk squadrons of mounted police began to arrive at Djevo from the outlying districts. Fully three hundred clattered up the main boulevard and were admitted into the palace yard. With this company rode Nikko Cheyne. Some of these men had actually seen the force from Plesna on the march and were complaining bitterly that they had not been allowed the pleasure of a little skirmishing.

"We could have sliced up a few score, comrade, as easy as drink a bottle."

"How far distant was this?" Nikko queried.

"Twelve to fifteen miles—not more."

"They halted for two hours in Boudon's vineyard, south of Schesa," said another, "and were on the march again by four o'clock. Nor did they march badly for men in such condition."

Under the plane trees in the great square before the palace, Nikko drew apart from these men's company and urged his horse to a canter. Making a wide half circle round the palace, he struck the road about half a mile below the entrance to the pass.

From the ground a gentle mist was rising which obscured all objects at a distance of a hundred yards. Down in the gorge, on his right, the waters of the river murmured luxuriously. The gorge in this part was no more than fifty feet deep, and, as he vividly remembered, at the entrance to the pass was even less. Still further on river and road were level.

Nikko continued to ride until, ahead of him, he heard the jingle of bits and the low growl of men's voices.

This was the police cordon, mounted by Foscani's orders to protect the road.

Hereabouts, so far as Nikko could remember, a ruined cottage stood, from the back of which a narrow, diagonal path—a mere sheep track—slanted to the water.

Nikko dismounted and walked his horse on a strip of grass at the roadside until the jagged outlines of the cottage loomed through the mist.

Viewed from above, the path to the river bed looked far from encouraging, and his horse, an intelligent beast, refused. Nikko whispered coaxingly, but to no avail.

"If you won't be led down, you'll be ridden down," said Nikko, and swung into the saddle.

The argument which followed was silent but determined, and ended in favor of the rider.

A lurch—a slither, the rattle and splash of falling stones, and a landing knee deep in a pool.

As a result of the prolonged drought there was little enough water, but the bed of the river was a wilderness of fissured rocks, slag, and great round stones. Once again Nikko dismounted and, with the care of a nurse, began to lead his horse over the perilous surface.

With his nerves taut, it seemed to Nikko that no matter how slowly and cautiously they proceeded the noise they made must be heard for miles. After a few minutes he saw the black jaws of the ravine rising upon either side of him at the spot where the cordon of police were posted.

The water clucked and chuckled derisively. His horse's hoofs clattered on the stones. From above came the sound of a laugh, and then—the agony of that moment was beyond expression—a match flared, was tossed in the air, and fell with a hiss at Nikko's feet.

In a flash his pistol was in his hand, and he checked breathlessly. A minute—two minutes—passed, but no challenge came from the darkness overhead. Some fool had lit a cigaret, that was all.

Nikko Cheyne wiped his forehead with the back of his hand.

"Come on," he whispered, and caressed the neck of his frightened horse.

Ten minutes later he was galloping up Djevo pass as though the devil were behind him.

Two miles farther on Nikko reined in. Here the road angled sharply to the left, and thence ran straight for the last three hundred yards to the entrance to the polji of Issoi. On the further side of this angle, three hundred feet up on the cliff face, the machine gunners and the searchlights had their being.

Nikko had no need to remind himself of their location, for the searchlights were at work, their fan shaped beams sweeping the road like a mighty broom.

Where he had halted his horse at the bend Nikko was outside their effective range, but twenty yards further on it would not be so. Twenty yards further on death swift and sure awaited him.

If there had been mist in the pass he might have risked a blind gallop across the open, but with the coming of night a breeze had sprung up, and the mist, which at the start had proved so good a friend, now had vanished.

Nikko drew a torch from his pocket and flashed it at the rock face. Above him were the lines of telephone wires with their colored insulators, and above them the power cable, looking like a black worm wriggling perpendicularly upward from the last of its parallel anchorages. The cable was out of reach, but by standing on his saddle and using the telephone wires as an improvised ladder Nikko was just able to get the fingers of one hand about it. Then, with his teeth and his other hand, he wrenched the coils of the cable apart and cut through a single wire with his pliers.

The pass was plunged into darkness.

Dropping back into the saddle, Nikko drove in his spurs and rode as he had never ridden before. He knew that in darkness or light every inch of the road would be registered by the machine gunners, and his one hope was to make the entrance to the polji before they had recovered from their surprise. And he was right.

As horse and rider whirled through the gut of the polji, a hail of bullets drilled the dust cloud raised by the flying hoofs.

"Satan's body, who's here?" cried a voice.

Stretching like a wall before him were the massed companies of Foscani's Rifles, waiting for the signal to march.

With a shout of "Dispatches!" Nikko wheeled to the left and urged his horse through a park of field artillery and transport. A driver cut at him with a whip, but he rode on. Hands snatched at him, but he rode on. Men yelled to bid him to stop, but still he rode.

"Dispatches for headquarters!"

A platoon of men, sprawling in the dust, scrambled to their feet, cursed fluently, and gave him the right of way.

Nikko rode on.

The camp had been struck. The entire personnel of the Rifles was crowded in a few acres before the mouth of the pass. After that dense, reeking wedge of humanity the desolate loneliness of the eastern end of the polji was incredible. A scattering of men passed between the farmhouse headquarters and the waiting troops, but beyond headquarters not a living soul was to be seen.

Nikko checked his panting horse under the shadow of the dam and loosely tied the reins to the telegraph pole at which only a few days before the idea had first come to him.

From his saddle pockets he took the dynamite cartridges and fuses, then, reaching above his head, he caught the two trailing wires and with an excitement greater than he had ever know before began to work.

And so for three hours beneath the shadow of that great mass of poised water, alone and undisturbed, and yet for all his anxiety as careful as a watchmaker, Nikko worked at and completed his task. That there should be no mistake, he examined and re-examined every detail of the work—running his fingers over the wires, testing the contacts, and driving the tampings so tightly home that the broomstick he had brought with him bounded back from them as from a paving stone.

When the job was finished, and so far as was humanly possible nothing was left to do, he said a prayer:

"Please God."

FROM the far end of the polji a bugle blared—another and another. The silence was split with savage cheers.

Bugles—words of command and cheering. The signal to march. Nikko stared at his watch. It was two a. m. An hour sooner than the earliest moment at which the signal was expected. Already that savage horde of murderers would be pouring into the pass.

What hope, what chance, had he to reach Djevo before them? Was he to fail Bettany for the second and the last time?

Once again Nikko was in the saddle, galloping across the sun baked arena with even greater fury than before.

Foscani's army was on its feet, wedging forward towards the gap. Nikko skirted the outer fringe, crushing men to one side as he rode. That he succeeded in reaching the mouth of the pass was a matter of luck rather than of determination.

Orders were booming to stand away and let the guns go through. A brigade of light field artillery rattled through the gap.

"Stand back for the guns!"

Voices screamed.

"Kiyah! Let the knives go through."

Nikko urged his horse into a solid block of cursing humanity. A bayonet was jabbed into his horse's flank. The enraged beast spun around, lashing out with heels and backing. The hoofs drummed against soft flesh and brittle bone, kicking an avenue towards the gap.

Screams, shrieks, and a pistol shot.

Nikko dragged his legs clear of the press, stood for an instant on the saddle, and jumped over men's heads. He landed fair and square on a limber, swung clear, and raced on foot down the pass beside steaming horse and clanking artillery. The road before him was a solid mass of marching men for a hundred yards or more. To pass them Nikko slithered down to the river bed and leaped from rock to rock. Then came another battery of guns—six guns with limbers. Before them rode an officer, and before him was the empty road.

At a long, loping run Nikko passed the guns one by one until only the officer was ahead.

The road curved sharply, and the officer was lost to view. Nikko rounded the curve like a shadow

A sharp exclamation of surprise, a thud—a stifled cry—the officer's body fell with a splash into the river, and Nikko was in the saddle.

As the first gun came around the bend Nikko fired at point blank range.

The near side leader threw up his head and took the bullet intended for the driver between the eyes.

The poor brute reared and fell, those behind trying to bolt, stumbling and floundering over its body. Utter confusion followed. The off side wheel of the gun struck a projecting rock and the whole mass heeled over sideways.

A tangle of traces, metal, spinning wheels, and kicking horses.

The pass of Djevo was blocked.

Encouraged by a few wild shots, Nikko Cheyne rode on alone. At the mouth of the pass the police cordon drew aside to let the rider go through.

As he flashed by a coarse jest was cracked, and one cried, "Here's eagerness for killing."

Without slackening speed, Nikko rode through the eastern gate of Djevo, which gaped wide for the coming of the Rifles. Over his shoulder he shouted:

"They are at my heels, comrade."

"And not a minute too soon," was answered. "The devils from Plesna are not a mile distant."

But Nikko did not pause to listen; he wheeled his horse to the left, and, stopping beside the palace wall, once more stood upon the saddle, gripped the spikes, and swung himself over into the garden. The riderless horse stretched out his long neck and began to graze peacefully.

IT was not fear that caused Nikko's heart to hammer so fiercely against his side, but joy—the certainty of triumph. In five minutes—in ten—the balance of power would be in the queen's favor. In his hands was the power to dictate terms. Dodging from tree to tree, crawling across open spaces on hands and knees, he reached the summer house. Here were the railings that fringed the gorge and there the iron stanchion to which his coil of wire had been attached. As his fingers closed round it Nikko breathed a prayer of thankfulness. Slipping the coil over his left arm and keeping the two naked ends of wire in his right hand along with his pistol, he crept towards the lighted window of Foscani's room. Like a black silhouette stood the sentry on duty.

Screened by a bed of roses, Nikko hesitated, indecisive whether to shoot now or make certain of the business by gaining a few yards. And while he hesitated, borne clear as a bell on the quiet air, came the sound of men's voices singing:

"We fight to live, yet do not fear to die, Natalie, O Natalie."

The marching song of the boy poet of Plesna.

It rose, swelled, and died away, to be answered by a crackle of musketry from the civil guard at the city gate.

Then came another sound. The angry stutter of a machine gun.

"Tat-tat-tat-tat, tat-tat-tat."

Nikko threw up his head to listen.

"What is that? There are no machine guns in Djevo!" The voice was Foscani's. "Go and see."

"Yes, master."

The black silhouette at the window shouldered a rifle and came across the grass to where Nikko was crouching.

That he would be seen was inevitable, but Nikko waited until the last second before springing to his feet and striking. He had shifted the naked wires to his left hand and, using the trigger guard of the pistol as a knuckle duster, he struck with every ounce of strength at the man's jaw.

With only a breath of a sigh the sentry settled like melting wax to the grass and lay still.

Nikko picked up the rifle and walked across the lawn to the lighted room. As his foot rasped on the stone steps came the question:

"What was it, Ivan?"

Nikko leaned the rifle against the wall, dropped the pistol into his pocket, and, holding a naked end of the wire in either hand, entered the room.

Foscani's back was to the window; he was in the act of taking the telephone receiver from its rest when Nikko spoke.

"Machine guns, Foscani. Machine guns of her gracious majesty Queen Natalie of Scirjel."

"Cheyne!"

Foscani put down the receiver, turned his head, and stared.

"You—I gave orders for you to be arrested," he said.

"I didn't wait for them to be carried

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK by Jane Eddington

GREENS FOR GODS AND MEN

GREEN LEAVES are the food of the god of the rainbow, says a legend of the Antilles. May we not gayly presume, then, that green leaves are, in perfection, suited to rarefying, clarifying, and divinely illuminating and coloring the spirit of a creature?

Green leaves, says the latest food science from its laboratories, are physiologically indispensable substances. And science says that green leaves make good the dietary deficiencies of certain foods which we eat the most of because we must. They are those which are our main energy reliance. We must have energy for the day whether we have continuous health or not, mostly not.

Green leaves, we may say, then, illuminate a whole block of cloud (solid foods) with their R O Y G B I V. But the letter the scientists use is B, vitamine B, or water soluble B, and they go so far as to say that upon the getting of this water soluble B into the diet of a creature may depend the preservation of a species—of bird, beast, or man.

When you see the rabbit nibbling his lettuce, or a donkey his nettles—whence nettles have been called donkey diet in derision—you can know how sensible those creatures are. They, indeed, have a godlike common sense. And the cattle on a thousand hills are eating green leaves of grass which are made over for us into one of the most highly protective of all foods. It is amazing that the great beasts can do so much on green leaves.

The intelligent country housewife knows her greens, and fairly loves them all—dandelion, dock, horseradish tops, mustard, and many others, even up to a score or two. Of all the relishes of the year there is not one to her quite like that offered by greens. And there is great relish, too, in just knowing them and in picking or digging them.

"I love the dandelion, the prettiest thing that grows on the earth in the glad days of spring," said the Sunday school scholar on Flower Sunday fifty years ago. And the housewife of that day thought the dandelion the best of all—green, as it is, when rightly treated—the most gratifyingly and delicately bitter and savory. Its blanched heart has a flavor of the best shell fish—your true vegetable lobster. It was her spring tonic, her good bitter tasting stuff, her salad.

There can be no optimum nutrition without greens, the greens of our salads, our spinach, and all the wonderful wild greens, a whole gamut of them. They bring us a whole inimitable and appetizing set of flavors. They are as protective as a parent.

Dandelion Greens and Dressings.

Always clean greens when dry to save work. It is good for one's health to dig dandelions and clean them out of doors in the sunshine. If you dig them in the parks step on the hole made, so as to press back the earth, and so be welcome. In cleaning them, examine and pick off dry leaves, give each plant a good shake or two to remove dead grass and sand or earth. Trim the root. Wash in many waters, but always lift the greens out rather than pour off the water. For a final cleaning, drop them into boiling water and rinse in cold before cooking them as gently as possible in a little water.

The dressings for greens are: A little salt or none, butter alone, butter with cream, melted butter and lemon juice, bacon fat plain or seasoned with sugar and vinegar, an oil or French dressing, a meat gravy, a Hollandaise sauce or something similar, like a remoulade.

COOKING GREENS

GREENS can be so cooked as to destroy their health [illegible] principles as well as their green color. Both can be kept with right and gentle treatment. Too much heat will change a grass green to yellow or bronze in a second. After greens are blanched in a good deal of water to finish the cleaning, and rinsed in cold water, they can be cooked in no more water than clings to them, but reason answers instantly that this would be insufficient if the heat were one which caused rapid evaporation. Some greens, after they are blanched, will fairly melt in their own water, which averages 95 per cent of their makeup, as it heats to a dissolving point. The cook who does not want to try such careful cooking or cannot manage an efficient low heat can cook the blanched greens in a double boiler. This takes longer, but just as it is a perfect way to cook blanched asparagus, so it is best for certain of the greens. On no account use soda in cooking greens, any more than with beans. Those who can speak with authority on this subject, because of months doing feeding experiments, tell us that the soda destroys the vitamines.

Finishing Greens

Soppy greens are not pretty, nor pleasant. The bit of water in the cooking can be cooked away, but, if it is not, press or drain the greens. If protected with butter, a little water can be rapidly cooked out. There is a difference of opinion about whether greens present the most attractive appearance or not when chopped exceedingly fine, while some greens are more attractive that way than others. When a little hot cream, salted and flavored with butter, is used as a dressing, or when a meat gravy replaces the cream, there should be such a blend—without any free wetness—that it is almost necessary to chop the greens. With plain butter this is not so necessary.

Both ...a delicacy for the tea table a healthful food for the family

BECAUSE of its wonderful deliciousness, Pabst-ett, the new and finer dairy product, has won the preference of hostesses for dainty teas and parties. It makes most delightful sandwiches and combines daintily with fruits and vegetables in salads. It lends distinctive newness to potatoes, rarebits and other dishes in which cheese was formerly used.

This same remarkable, new food is preferred also by thoughtful mothers who recognize the importance of balanced diet for their families.

Pabst-ett is as much a health-building food as it is a delicacy. It is made by a secret process which retains the nutritive value of rich, pure, whole milk—the milk sugar, milk proteins and body-building milk mineral elements lost in cheese making. It is as digestible as milk—a regulative food that children, elderly persons, even those in delicate health may enjoy to their hearts' content.

Though a new food product, Pabst-ett is already the great favorite for all uses—as a condiment, for macaroni and rarebits—Pabst-ett does not become lumpy or stringy with cooking—as a spread for bread and crackers. Chefs of leading hotels, dining cars, restaurants and cafeterias have recognized the superiority of Pabst-ett and include it on their menus.

Pabst-ett Not Successfully Imitated

The popularity and remarkable success of Pabst-ett will, no doubt, bring out imitations. But, Pabst-ett has not been duplicated and few manufacturers of cheese products have facilities to produce the new and finer food. You can get Pabst-ett quality and deliciousness only by insisting on the original, Pabst-ett, more than cheese. It is sold at leading stores everywhere.

HERE COMES THE BRIDE—PROBABLY IN TULLE!

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Short sleeves! Why, she's wearing short sleeves!"

No, these words were not actually whispered. They did not need to be. The electric current that passed through the feminine contingent of those guests invited to a pre-Lenten wedding here in New York was expressive enough. That this particular bride, member of a celebrated and fashionable family of Gotham, should have chosen short sleeves was, in fact, a radical departure from the custom of recent years.

Yet this bride was merely a forerunner of many post-Lenten heroines. For, although the long sleeved wedding gown still occupies its old vantage point, its authority is threatened by some of the new Paris creations with a mere cap or ruffle on the shoulder.

The short sleeved wedding gown is not, to my mind, to be whittled out carelessly from any kind of material. Indeed, if they would only entrust the bridal gown legislation to me, I should be strict in my code. I would say that only those models which choose such transparent and pliable fabrics as tulle, marquisette, and chiffon should be allowed to "trade in shorts." For, while the short sleeve does nothing to violate the traditions of the period gown in satin, taffeta, or other heavier material, it is not so eminently successful here as in the type of frock I have mentioned.

This reference to material brings me to another aspect of the mode in wedding gowns. For the last few seasons we have had some bridal gowns carried out in tulle. However, all former manifestations of such taste are dwarfed by the present day interest in this medium. Patou is one of the (wedding) ring-leaders in this group of designers who say, "For the young and slender bride, what more exquisite than a tulle gown," and he has presented for our approval a variety of such wedding toilettes—yes, one might call them wedding tulle-ettes.

Second from the left on our page we indicate the possibilities of white tulle in a graceful and youthful creation that takes as its two leading themes the short, ruffled sleeve and the ruffled skirt with a marked unevenness of hem line. Nothing could be simpler than this design. Yet how new and effective it is and how independent of any touch of trimming! The wide sash of the same white satin that forms the foundation of the frock and a voluminous veil of white tulle fitted closely about the head with a wreath of orange blossoms—these, together with the string of pearls about the throat, are thoroughly expressive of the new mode in wedding tulle.

It goes without saying that the bolero is often worn this spring to attend the wedding gown and before we leave this spacious text of tulle I want to speak of another creation in the same fabric which introduced this ubiquitous style feature in connection with a ruffled skirt. This creation, made up over silver cloth, distributed its bodice material into three overlapping and scalloped tiers terminating in a scalloped bolero that fell over a girdle of silver cloth. To continue this theme of the scallops, there was a wavy inset of silver cloth set on the skirt just below the hips and from this point downward ruffles of the tulle were set on with the same curving movement.

Now here is an interesting fact. Either this model or the one pictured second from the left may be developed in marquisette. For this is another material that has come into new and spectacular association with the wedding pageant and one may say in general that the two materials are practically interchangeable.

The design that looks well in tulle is bound to look well in marquisette.

Both of these two materials lend themselves admirably to the period gown, that beloved period frock to which so many seasons have pledged their allegiance. Today that combination of the fitted bodice and the long bouffante skirt is just as good as ever—if not a little better—and one can truthfully say that a wedding party where both bride and attendants choose the robe de style carried out in either marquisette or tulle must make poor old Mother Earth a little envious. Peeping at these flower beds of white and rose and blue and yellow, nature must mutter, "Now, why can't I make my jonquils and tulips look like that?"

Needless to say, the bride's partiality for tulle and marquisette is shared by her maids, and here is a practical illustration of how this community of interest works out. At one of our smart specialty shops I have just seen the wedding party demonstrated by mannequins and all of the attendants wore the same period frocks of marquisette elected by the bride. The latter was, of course, in white, and this was developed over silver cloth. The maids also wore white marquisette, but their gowns showed foundatins of different colors ranging from light blue to deep orchid.

Another idea for the marquisette wedding is presented by a second shop where a contrast to the bride's period gown of white is presented by maids in similar period gowns carried out in figured marquisette. Before passing from this subject of the diaphanous material, let it not be forgotten that the color difference between the bride and her attendants is frequently enunciated not only through the foundation but through the tulle or marquisette itself.

Now for the gown of heavier material. In this season, when satin is scoring such a success for general evening wear, it is not surprising to find white satin more esteemed than ever for this ceremonial occasion. At the left we sketch a model in this traditional fabric that shows you how closely the bridal attire keeps in touch with all style theories.

Here is a simple long sleeved model draped at the waist line and showing a proper regard for the variety of hem that is such a feature of the spring mode. All the edges are bound with self material, and the single touch of extraneous ornamentation is found in a V-shaped band on the bodice, which is of pearl and rhinestone embroidery. These same brilliants are introduced again to fasten back on a narrow border of silver cloth which the metallic lining of the court train turns back over its white satin top. And again pearls and rhinestones are employed for a caplike formation of the tulle veil with its deep lace edge.

I have always thought those beauties of the renaissance had an unfair advantage. Secretly I have believed that if my own collar hadn't been short-circuited, that if I could have just worn a piece of lace wired up about my face to present a becoming frame for that now unsheltered suite of features—well, my whole history might have been different. I think that the designer of the period wedding gown second from the right must have entertained exactly the same sentiments. At all events, he has made his period gown look absolutely individual by wiring straight upwards from the throat a collar of rose point lace that elsewhere defines a square neck line.

He repeats the lace in quaint cuffs and embroiders his skirt with an elaborate motif of pearls. As to the hem of this skirt, it follows the line of least style resistance by being scalloped and by dipping pronouncedly in the back. The final suggestion of other world charm possessed by this period gown is contributed by a veil brought down over the hair line and fastening at either side with orange blossoms.

Last, at the extreme right is another white satin gown eloquent of recent fashion developments. For one thing, it executes that important front upward movement of the skirt by means of a straight piece of self-material placed across the front and achieving two side trains. The tulle veil here is bound with lace and adjusted at the sides with orange blossoms.

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The tulle vogue launched so enthusiastically for the Easter bride is shown second from the left in a charming creation which is girdled in the white satin of its foundation and which benefits by that new note in bridal attire,—short sleeves.

Third from the left, the familiar period gown demonstrates its capacity for being a live wire. We mean that its stunning collar of rose point is wired stiffly in the back. For the rest, this model—of heavy white satin—is embroidered in pearls.

At the extreme left another white satin bound in self material is embroidered in rhinestones and pearls repeated on a court train lined with silver cloth and folding back an edge of this metallic tissue over the train.

Last, the fashionable curving upward movement of the skirt is followed in a stunning model of white satin with side trains.

out. I had much to do. But you will obey my orders now, Foscani."

"Where is the sentry?"

"Dead, I think—or nearly."

FOSCANI'S hand moved to the knob of a table drawer.

"Keep still." Nikko's voice was sharp as a pistol shot. "D'you think I'm such a fool as to come here without a better weapon than that?"

Foscani made an airy gesture.

"You must, I fear, have lost your reason, Cheyne, to come dressed up like a mountebank on a night like this. Go away. I am too busy to talk to you."

"There's nothing for you to say," Nikko replied. "I shall do the talking that's necessary. Pick up that telephone and issue instructions for the immediate withdrawal of your Rifles to the polji."

"But my Rifles are coming to Djevo, Cheyne. I am afraid they would never consent to turn back."

"There is still time to do what I ask, Foscani."

There was no doubt in Foscani's mind that he was in the presence of a lunatic—but lunatics are dangerous folks, and he meant to take no risks.

"But why ask such a favor?"

"Because I have it in my mind that Natalie and her followers shall enter this city with as little opposition as possible."

"We are agreed," was the answer. "Practically there will be no opposition until they have entered."

"Foscani," said Nikko in a low voice, "you see these two wires. I have only to make these points meet and the great dam of Sarsenova will split like a dropped glass."

The Liberator of Sciriel leaned forward and his eyes bulged.

"It's a lie," he said softly, "a lie."

"Shall I prove whether it is a lie?"

"But you—but no one has reached Issoi. It's a lie."

"Did you have a message tonight about the power lines to the searchlights being cut?"

Foscani started violently.

"You!"

Nikko nodded.

"Among other things."

"Tss!" the breath escaped from Foscani's lungs as from a punctured tire. With the finger nails of both hands he scratched his forehead, leaving a track of red weals. "Even so," he muttered, "even so." Then with sudden fierceness, "Why—why—what is this business to you?"

"Something more than life," was the answer.

Foscani grunted, stared, and understood.

"It was you who brought about the escape of the queen?"

"Yes—and supplied Plesna with enough rifles and machine guns to sweep the defenses of Djevo into the rubbish heap."

Foscani's head moved from side to side impotently. Time—he must have time—he must play for time. He began to move in short steps to and fro across the floor.

"I must think," he said. "I must think."

"No, you must decide, Foscani—at once. I left a jam in the pass that will take half an hour to clear—but even so."

Some one rapped at the panel of the door. Foscani looked up with a flash of hope.

"Say you are not to be disturbed."

"I am not to be disturbed," he repeated.

"They are pouring through the city gates from the west," a voice cried in agitation.

"Tell him you are not to be disturbed."

"I am not to be disturbed," was said again.

The rat-tat-tat of the machine guns, muffled by walls, sounded faintly in the room. The footsteps retreated.

"I give you one minute to make your choice."

And out of his box of tricks Foscani produced the unexpected. Wringing his hands in despair, he burst into a flood of tears like an angry child.

"I won't, I can't," he cried. "Don't ask me that—all I've striven for, fought for—I can't—O God, O God!"

Like a child he beat his head against the wall and struck at it with clenched fists.

"You rat!" said Nikko.

And in that instant Foscani played his last card. Snatching from the wall a long, thin knife, one of those trophies collected from the dead men who had tried to assassinate him, he flung it with all his force at Nikko. The aim was true, but in the second lost tearing the weapon from the cord Nikko sidestepped. A foot of glittering steel flashed like a beam of light between Nikko's raised arm and his side, severing the flexible wire where it lay along the floor as though it were a thread of silk. A flash—a crackle of sparks—a tiny blue arc.

Nikko Cheyne raised his head and looked into Foscani's eyes.

Neither man spoke—nor moved—nor breathed. The machine gun had stopped firing, and in the silence they listened—counting.

One—two—three—four—five—six.

And then a rumble—low at first, but gathering in volume to a deep throated roar that valleys and rocks, great precipices, and the sullen hills seized on and flung, reverberating, over miles of space.

Nikko drew a hand across his mouth. His voice cracked.

"Your rifles will be coming into Djevo, after all."

"In God's name, what is it?"

THE darkness was split with tongues of leaping flame, lighting for an instant packed thousands of frightened faces. The explosion was terrifying enough for men to drive fists into their ears and cower earthward like beaten curs—but it was as nothing compared to the roar of the water that followed after. Forty millions of tons of unchained water flung itself at the gap in the broken dam, tearing away section after section of the resisting concrete. Within less than a minute a gap of fifty feet was widened to a hundred yards. And still the tearing waters gnawed and gnawed, until the whole center of the dam bulged outward, tottered, and was swept away like a castle built of sand. With the world before it, the reservoir of Sarsenova sprawled its waters across the polji of Issoi.

A rush of icy air was the herald of its approach as, beneath a cloud of flying spray, the eager flood thundered down upon that huddled mass of humanity—and enveloped all.

Smothered, choking, sucked down or upflung, the cheerful assassins who but a few moments before had boasted so loudly of their willingness to kill were smashed like eggs against the jagged sides of the precipice.

Here, at this first check, the great wave licked up in a curve like the tongue of a monstrous animal. Up and up, to be hurled back and fall with the roar of an avalanche into the welter that swept in its wake. The polji of Issoi had become a sea lashed into creaming foam by the fury of winds—a mad nightmare sea, in which wave met wave and currents tore this way and that across the surface and frenzied whirlpools spun and sucked and gurgled.

At the entrance to the pass a pyramid of water, mountain high, hurled itself into the ravine, carrying men, horses, guns, limbers, and transport upon its gleaming crest. But the narrow gullet was as powerless to waste that gathering influx as an inch pipe to empty a pond. The baffled water, seeking other outlets, divided along the cliff face and poured in an irresistible stream toward the swallow hole of Issoi. Here the worst terrors of all were enacted. The right wing of Foscani's rifles, borne on a ride of death, was whirled in diminishing spirals around the sides of a vortex, to disappear into a black ghastliness, through hidden channels and galleries deep in the bowels of the earth, where the bodies were pulped and jellied into unrecognizable nothingness.

Thus, of the five thousand professional slayers who had set out so valiantly to the slaughter of an unarmed force, not a single man survived.

Foscani had spoken the truth in saying, "Years hence men will speak in whispers of how my rifles came to Djevo."

But he did not guess the manner of their coming—he did not guess how, under a pall of spray, they would be flung through the city gorge by a racing wave a hundred feet tall. He did not guess how their bodies would pop up thirty-five miles away on Plesna marsh, where the swallow hole of Issoi gave up its secret—or lie strewn over vineyards and pastures for crows to peck at in the low country beyond the capital.

He only knew their coming would be remembered.

With that rumble in his ears, telling more surely than words that his work was done, a cord snapped in Nikko's brain. Nothing mattered now. The importance had gone out of life. Nothing mattered. A delicious ease ran through his nerves and set his spirit free. Rocking to and fro upon his heels, with half closed eyes, he abandoned himself to a mental and physical relaxation as complete as sleep.

The crackle of musketry and machine gun fire, the shouts and cheers and cries of men were nearer, much nearer. But what did it matter? The fighting was in bursts—was spasmodic—and in lulls between the attacks he heard, vaguely, the gathering thunder of onrushing water driving through the gorge. He didn't care. Five thousand men had died or were dying that this peace of mind should be his. Five thousand men. A great number for one man to have destroyed—and that man himself. Some one had to save the country—and who had better reason? So simple it had been—so simple. Natalie would rule.

Like a pendulum, he rocked—like a pendulum—the pendulum of that dim clock on the mantel shelf. This way—that way. Why, they were swaying in rythym.

NIKKO CHEYNE fumbled for a chair back. Wouldn't do, he thought, to swing too far and topple over. The idea was funny and made him giggle.

Then a voice, the strangest voice, said, "Keep still, damn you—keep still! How can I shoot if you won't keep still?"

It looked like a cat.

Nikko said, "You look just like a cat."

Foscani was supporting himself against an open drawer of his writing table. In his right hand a pistol was waving this way and that.

"Keep still, damn you, keep still!"

Somewhere outside men's voices—terror-stricken—rifle shots, and rushing feet.

"Just like a cat," Nikko repeated.

A spurt of flame and the tinkle of glass. Foscani had fired—and missed.

He was spitting curses—cat curses. An odd thing that. And he couldn't keep the pistol steady. He was using both hands in an effort to control it.

Nikko wondered why the great cat came no nearer, and slowly realised it was because he had no knees—only soft jellies that trembled and collapsed beneath his weight.

Twice more the pistol cracked, and with the last shot something that felt like a red hot sledge hammer struck Nikko's shoulder. No, it didn't hurt—it didn't matter—only—only it started a gradual thought that his work was not finished—that there was still one duty left undone.

Nikko fumbled weakly for his pistol and found it. Over his brain mists had begun to swirl. Somewhere in the room was a cat with nine lives.

Like a clockwork figure Nikko began to [illegible] counting the shots aloud—one for each life.

The cat was on all fours now—crawling along the wainscot, mewing.

"Four—five."

Now it was down—flat.

"Six."

Then silence.

"Nine lives," said Nikko, and clicked the trigger three times more, but the magazine was empty.

The pistol fell from his hand.

"Have to do—have to do," he muttered, and wondered what all that singing and crashing of glass could mean, and that roar from the gorge—the deafening roar?

There was a pain in some part of him—his shoulder perhaps—he tried to find it, letting his tunic slip from his arms to the floor. But he only found blood, warm, easy blood that trickled into the palm of his hand.

"Wish they'd stop that noise," he muttered, as it drifted through the door into a great emptiness of halls and corridors.

The palace was deserted. The rats had gone. Nikko Cheyne stumbled on through the wide portals of the throne room. At one end, upon a dais, was the carved throne of the kings of [illegible] and stretched behind it to mask the armorial bearings of the family the black and crimson banner of the revolution.

Like a drunken man, Nikko reeled towards the dais and, gripping the bunting in both hands, with the last of his strength tore it down.

"The cat's dead," he said, laughed, swayed, and stumbled back on to the throne.

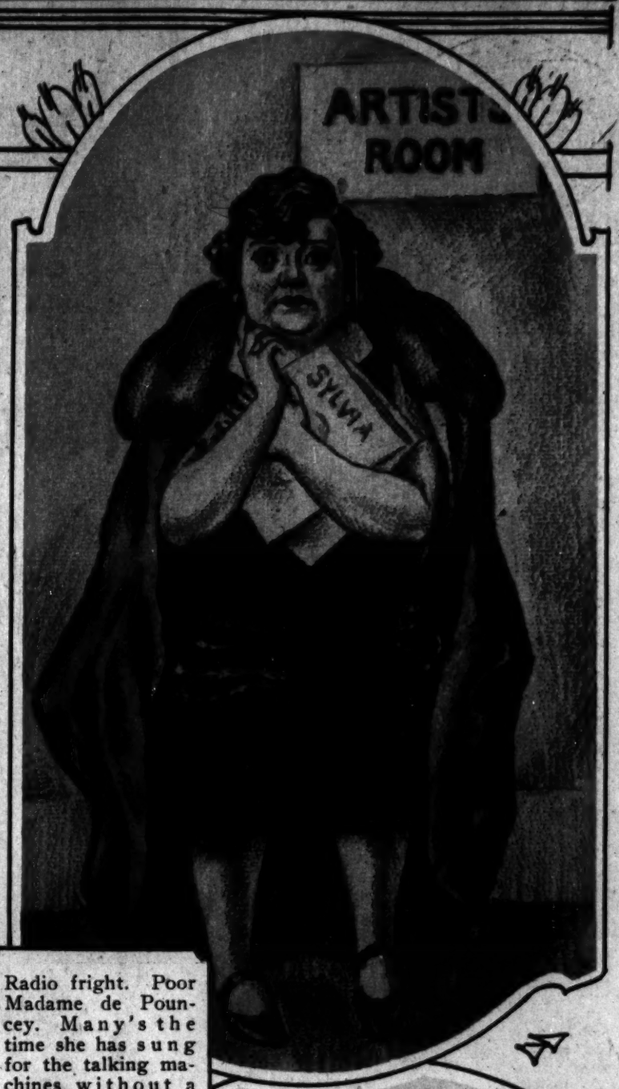
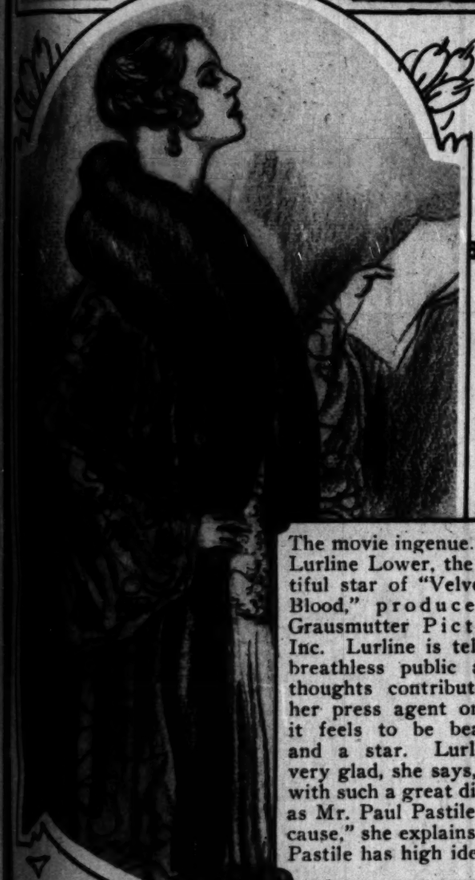
By W. E. Hill



Radio fright. Poor Madame de Pouncey. Many's the time she has sung for the talking machines without a tremor, but in front of the microphone her throat seems to close right up! They have sent out for a talking machine so madame will feel more at home with a microphone.

The interview. Miss Gouge is to interview Mr. Creeps, the humorist, and they are planning a program. Unfortunately, Mr. Creeps is feeling sad, owing to poker losses last night. "Now," begins Miss Gouge, "I'll say, 'Good afternoon, Mr. Creeps,' and you say, 'Good afternoon, Miss Gouge,' and I'll say, 'How do you ever think of all the things you do every day in your column?' and then you can just tell them a lot of funny things impromptu the rest of the fifteen minutes."



The movie ingenue. Meet Lurline Lower, the beautiful star of "Velvet and Blood," produced by Grausmutter Pictures, Inc. Lurline is telling a breathless public a few thoughts contributed by her press agent on how it feels to be beautiful and a star. Lurline is very glad, she says, to be with such a great director as Mr. Paul Pastile. "Because," she explains, "Mr. Pastile has high ideals."

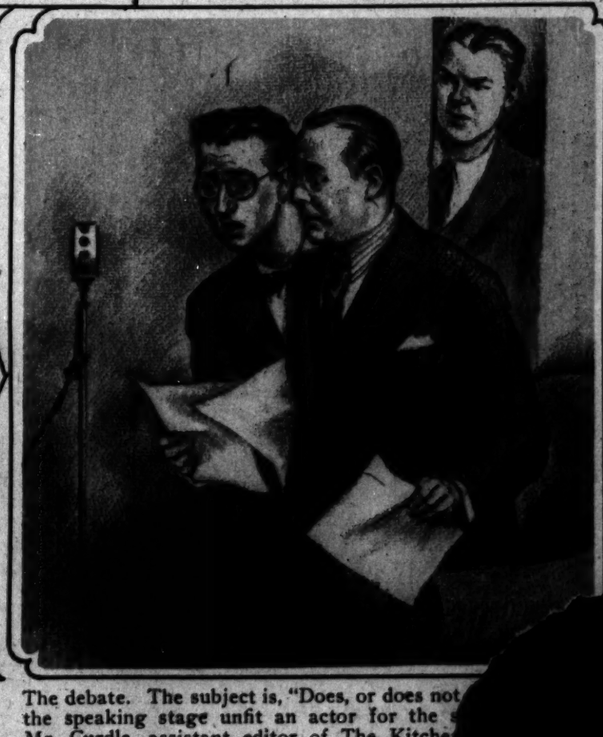
The spirit of jazz. Every Wednesday evening, through the courtesy of The Evelyn Astringent and Deodorant Corporation, the Evelyn Astringent Jazz orchestra performs from OOOS. This is Bernie, the leading spirit in the organization. Bernie is going to start the boys off on "Mary Lou," for novelty.

The children's hour. "I hate disappoidig the childred," says Mrs. Ida May Wickwack (who tells the kiddies all about Miss Pussy Possum and Hob-Hoo the owl); "I've such a cold I cad hardly speag!" Whereupon Mrs. Loretta Rae comes to the rescue. "Now, dearie," says Mrs. Rae, who is New Thought, "all you have to do is to create a beautiful thought. Think of a beautiful rose, and say to yourself: 'Roses never have colds in the head. I have no cold!' Say this over and over quickly. Then say: 'What I thought was a cold in the head has gone, gone, gone.'"

The piano solo. The announcer is being very funny, and has purposely got Mr. Fleawitz's name all wrong. Mr. Fleawitz is giving him a very dirty look, preparatory to playing "The Nodding Tulip."

The studio accompanist. Miss Twidley has to play anything and everything at sight, from "The Waters of Minnetonka" to "Rose in the Bud," and sometimes a note or two gets left out, or something goes wrong, as things will now and then. "Besides," explains Miss Twidley, "these boiler makers from grand opera always throw me off. Why, I'm so nervous from that last one I'm all over perspiration!"

The studio visitors. Fred and Dotsie were simply crazy to visit a broadcasting studio, and so when their dear friend, Mabel Belong, was scheduled to deliver a little address on "Seven Delicious Luncheon Menus," they begged and begged to come along. They are, you can see, intensely interested in everything, and are all tangled up in the wires from the microphone at present!



The debate. The subject is, "Does, or does not the speaking stage unfit an actor for the get too near the microphone, and then they away, and it seems as though there is no p
